The Department monitors all its programmes and also commissions external evaluations which are published. In May 1992 the Employment Department published "Small Firms in Britain" which was sent to all Members of Parliament. This report surveys developments in the sector, including key statistical indicators and outlines overall Government policy towards small firms.

RETEX Grants

Ms. Janet Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the representations he has received concerning the allocation of RETEX grants to parts of areas designated for objective 1, 2 or 5(b) of the structural funds in Lancashire.

Mr. Sainsbury: Representations have been received from a number of local interests.

Ms. Janet Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he will take to consult interested parties on the allocation of RETEX grants within areas designed for objective 1, 2 or 5(b) of the structural funds in Lancashire.

Mr. Sainsbury: The actual allocation of RETEX grants, as with other Community structural funds initiatives and programmes, will be a matter for special committees established for the purpose, under the terms of operational programmes. The United Kingdom and other member states have until December 4 to present these to the Commission.

The Government are currently considering what arrangements are appropriate for the drawing up and implementation of the programmes. The views of local authorities, trade associations and other interested parties have been and will continue to be taken into account.

Coal Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list (a) the collieries operative in Wales and (b) the number of miners employed in (i) Wales and (ii) Great Britain, in (1) 1971, (2) 1981 and (3) 1991.

Mr. Eggar: There are currently four British Coal collieries operating in Wales—Betws, Taff Merthyr and Tower in south Wales and Point of Ayr in north Wales. The total number of men on colliery books employed by British Coal in Wales and Britain in 1971-72, 1981-82 were as follows:

	South Wales	North Wales	Britain
1971-72	36,100	2,500	274,000
1981-82	24,300	1,200	212,800
1991-92	890	455	43,800

In addition, British Coal currently licences about 140 deep mines, about 100 of which are in south Wales. The licensed sector employs around 1,500 men, of whom about 800 are employed in south Wales. Figures for 1971-72 and 1981-82 are not readily available.

Regional Assistance

Mr. William Powell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list each recipient company and the level of grant provided through regional selective assistance since 1984-85 in the Corby area.

Mr. Sainsbury: Details of offers of regional selective assistance are normally made public only after the company has made a claim and has been paid. Since 1984-85 there are 58 companies in the Corby travel-to-work area who have benefited from regional selective assistance. The firms and the offers made and accepted for £5,000 and above are as follows:

Radio

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's response to the recommendations contained in the report of the radio spectrum review committee stage 2: 3,400 MHz to 30 GHz, published in September; and when the response will be published.

Mr. Leigh: Following publication of the report, I and my colleagues have had the opportunity to consider the recommendations in detail. We are in full agreement with their intended aim to strengthen the management of the radio spectrum in the interests of more efficient use of this valuable resource.

When the report was published on 30 September 1991, my predecessor announced the Government's response to two of the recommendations and stated that the Government intended to publish a consultative document on the future management of the radio spectrum in the United Kingdom. Some of the issues raised in the report would benefit from wider consultation and therefore it is my intention that they be included in the consultative document.

The Government's written response to the recommendations is now available from the Library, Radiocommunications Agency, Room 605, Waterloo Bridge house, London SE1 8UA. Telephone 071 215 2352/2140.

I have placed copies of the response in the Library of the House.

International Investment

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's performance in attracting internationally mobile investment projects in 1991-92.

Mr. Sainsbury: My Department's Invest in Britain Bureau—IBB—announced in its annual report published today that 1991-92 was another good year for inward investment and jobs in the United Kingdom.

Between 1 April 1991 and 31 March 1992, 332 direct investment projects by foreign-owned companies into the United Kingdom were recorded by the IBB. On the basis of information supplied by the companies at the time of the announcement, it is estimated that these projects will create or safeguard over 50,000 jobs.

These results demonstrate, yet again, the attractiveness of this country to foreign investors. It is very pleasing that our lead position within the European Community as a partner to foreign investors has remained despite the world recession.

The results are also evidence of the successful partnership my Department has with many public and private sector organisations involved in the promotion of inward investment both at home and abroad.

I am arranging for a copy of the report to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

EC Company Law

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress is being made on the implementation of the EC 11th company law directive and the bank branches directive.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Department of Trade and Industry has today issued a consultation document inviting comments on draft regulations to implement the EC 11th company law directive and the bank branches directive.

These draft regulations represent a major step towards full implementation of both.

The 11th company law directive deals with the disclosures, including accounting documents, to be made by the branches established in a member state of companies registered in another member state or non-EC country. The bank branches directive complements the 11th directive by setting special requirements regarding the disclosure of the accounting documents of a credit of financial institution which has established a branch in a member state, but has its head office outside that member state.

The Government have also taken the opportunity provided by these regulations to deal with two other minor matters relating to the accounts of banks. These are amendments to sections 255A and 255B of the Companies Act 1985 as inserted by the Companies Act 1985 (Bank Accounts) Regulations 1991.

Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Library. Views are invited by 23 September 1992.

Company Inspections

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps are taken to maintain confidentiality when pre-publication copies of reports into the affairs of companies by inspectors appointed under section 432 of the Companies Act 1985 are provided to certain persons referred to in such reports; and what assessment he has made of their effectiveness.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Secretary of State has discretion under the legislation to provide copies of unpublished reports of inspectors to persons referred to in the report. When, in the interests of fairness, the Department exercises its discretion to do so, it requires those concerned, including advisers, to give strict undertakings to preserve the report's confidentiality. Where these undertakings exceptionally appear to have been breached, the Department has and will continue to take firm action. It may seek an injunction from the court to prevent further unauthorised disclosure. Where advisers are found to have breached undertakings, the Department will, where appropriate, pursue the matter with the professional body concerned. The Department has recently drawn one such case to the attention of the Law Society and it has concluded its proceedings, which are confidential, in favour of the Department.

Petroleum Licensing

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about further onshore petroleum licensing.

Mr. Eggar: I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses the text of a notice, which will be published as soon as possible in the Official Gazette, inviting companies to apply for exploration licences in respect of unlicensed areas in Great Britain and certain near-shore waters. The notice specifies that applications should be made on Wednesday 21 October 1992. Application forms and guidance notes will be available from my Department.

I shall separately be inviting holders of production licences to apply to transfer exploration acreage within their existing licences to the new style exploration licences, subject to agreement being reached on a satisfactory work programme for the area.

Successful applicants will be offered exploration licences containing the conditions set out in the Petroleum (Production) (Landward Areas) Regulations 1991. The licences will grant rights for a term of six years and entitle the licensee to carry out seismic surveys and deep drilling subject to the need to obtain the requisite permission from the appropriate mineral planning authorities and landowners and occupiers.

EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training and enterprise councils had not had their budgets for 1992-93 finalised by 1 July; and if she will publish a list of those TECs.

Mr. McLoughlin: On 1 July 1992 nine TECs had not signed a contract with the Department and therefore had not had their budgets for 1992-93 finalised. The TECs concerned were:

AZTEC
Central London TEC
City and Inner London North TEC
London East TEC
North London TEC
North West London TEC
SOLOTEC
South Thames TEC
West London TEC

However all these TECs have now indicated their willingness to sign contracts subject only to small points of detail. I anticipate that most of these contracts will be signed in the next few days.

Global Warming

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will make a statement on the research being conducted by the Health and Safety Executive into the effects of climate change attributable to the consequences of global warming.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Health and Safety Executive is not conducting any research into the effects of climate change attributable to the consequences of global warming. Research into the effects of climate change is outside the normal remit of the Health and Safety Executive. Government-funded research on this topic is the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will make a statement on the achievements of her Department and her policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if she will publish the performance indicators by which her Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government continue to place a high priority on helping small businesses, through improvements to the business climate, through deregulation and through specific programmes of support and assistance.

Following this year's general election, policy responsibility for some services for new and small businesses has been transferred from this Department to the Department of Trade and Industry. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade detailed the successes of this Department over the last 12 months in helping small businesses in answer to a similar question from my hon. Friend.

Measures that continue to be operated by the Department to assist small businesses include business start-up—the enterprise allowance scheme—which provides an allowance in the early months of trading and on-going support to unemployed people who start their own businesses. The performance of this programme is measured in terms of numbers taking up support and the survival rate of these businesses. From April 1991, training and enterprise councils have been able to adapt the scheme to suit local economic needs. TECs are now placing greater emphasis on increasing the quality of the businesses they support in an effort to improve survival. More than 60,000 people were awarded an allowance in the 1990-91 financial year, and just under 50,000 in 1991-92. Survey evidence has consistently shown that of those people completing the full term of the allowance approximately 76 per cent. are still trading six months later, that is, 18 months after start-up.

The Department makes significant funds available to TECs to enable them to support the development of small businesses. TECs provide a varied range of help including consultancy support, advice and guidance and training audits. More than 100,000 businesses were assisted in the 1991-92 financial year. TECs increasingly are linking this support to achievement of the Investors in People national standard. Investors in People sets a standard for the training and development of people—a vital requirement for any business large or small. Of the 67 employers that have met the standard so far, 32 are employers with fewer than 200 employees. There are more than 1,100 employers committed to achieving the standard, including many small businesses.

The Department monitors all its programmes and also commissions external evaluations which are published. In May 1992 we published "Small Firms in Britain" which was sent to all Members of Parliament. This report surveys developments in the sector, including key statistical indicators and outlines overall Government policy towards small firms.

Travel-to-work Areas

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list the total population covered by each travel-to-work area, together with (a) the numbers unemployed, (b) the percentage unemployed on the broad definition, and (c) the percentage unemployed on the narrow definition, for April 1984, November 1984, April 1990, April 1992 and May 1992, setting out the travel-to-work areas in order of percentage unemployed on the broad definition, and in order of percentage unemployed on the narrow definition for each date.

Mr. McLoughlin: The latest available population data for travel-to-work areas are from the 1981 census of population. These and the other information requested can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list the travel-to-work areas covering the 35 per cent. of the United Kingdom population with the highest percentage unemployment using the broad definition on April 1984, November 1984, April 1990, April 1992 and May 1992, distinguishing between those travel-to-work areas covering the top 15 per cent. and those covering the next 20 per cent.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information requested can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list for the United Kingdom by travel-to-work area, or the smallest area available, the economic activity rate according to the 1981 census data and according to estimates for June 1984, June 1990 and the latest available date.

Mr. McLoughlin: The latest available data on economic activity rates for travel-to-work areas are from the 1981 census of population. These can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if she will list the travel-to-work areas covering the 35 per cent. of the United Kingdom population with the lowest percentage of employees in employment as a percentage of the June 1979 figure, with the lowest percentage first, and distinguishing between the 15 per cent. with the lowest percentages and the next 20 per cent. for June 1984, June 1990, June 1991 and the most recent date available;

(2) if she will list for the United Kingdom by travel-to-work area, or the smallest area available the number of employees in employment as a percentage of the number in employment in June 1979, June 1984, June 1990, June 1992 and the most recent date available listing the travel-to-work areas in descending order with the highest percentage first.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information available for employees in employment in local areas, including travel-to-work areas, is from the censuses of employment for 1981, 1984, 1987 and 1989, as at September of each of those years. This can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Quarrymen

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many quarrymen were employed in (a) Wales and (b) Great Britain in (1) 1971, (2) 1981, and (3) 1991, respectively; and if he will list the quarries operative in Wales in (i) 1971, (ii) 1981 and (iii) 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: From the 1971 census of population, the number of males in the occupation classification

"surface workers not elsewhere classified (n.e.c.)—mines and quarries" was 2,200 in Wales and 16,270 in Great Britain. From the 1981 census of population, the number of males under the occupation classification was 930 in Wales and 15,520 in Great Britain. Occupation data from the 1991 census of population should be available in the first half of 1993. The number of operational quarries in Wales in 1991 has been provisionally estimated by the Central Statistical Office to be 262. No equivalent figures are available for 1971 and 1981.

"Miners (not coal), quarrymen and well drillers"

Employment Agencies

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for new licences were received from employment agencies in April 1992; and in what proportion of these cases a licence was offered to the applicant within eight weeks.

Mr. McLoughlin: In April 1992, a total of 376 applications for new licences were received, 86·7 per cent. of which resulted in a licence being offered to the applicant within eight weeks.

Work Permits

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for a work permit to employ a non-EC national were received in April; what proportion of these applications were decided within eight weeks; and what proportion of applications on behalf of entertainers, sportspeople and models were decided within four weeks.

Mr. McLoughlin: A total of 3,498 applications for work permits were received in April 1992. Of the 3,390 cases processed in that month, 90·3 per cent. had been decided within eight weeks of receipt.

Six hundred and twenty-three of the total applications decided in April 1992 were for entertainers, sportspeople and models; 85·4 per cent. of these cases were decided within four weeks and 97·4 per cent. within eight weeks of receipt.

This exceeds the Department's published standard of 75 per cent. within eight weeks and was achieved at a time when the section responsible for work permits was in the process of relocating to Sheffield.

Redundancy Payments Service

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what proportion of letters received by the redundancy payments service from members of the public since 1991 have had a reply within five working days;

(2) what proportion of claims received by the redundancy payments service since 18 November 1991 have been paid within 14 weeks.

Mr. McLoughlin: Since the publication of the redundancy payments service charter in November 1991, 97 per cent. of letters have been replied to within five days, and 84 per cent. of claims have been paid within 14 weeks.

Wages Inspectorate

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many complaints from employees were received by the wages inspectorate in March, April and May 1992; and in how many of these cases the inspectorate's investigation was completed within four weeks.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information is as follows:

	Number of complaints received	Number of complaint inspections completed within four weeks
1992
March	121	79
April	112	70
May	108	63

Employees are told the results of investigations into their complaint. If the investigation cannot be completed within four weeks the employee is told about the progress of the investigation.

Noise

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what was the implementation date of the Noise at Work Regulations 1989; what action is taken by the Health and Safety Executive to ensure that employers comply with them; how many employers have been prosecuted under the regulations for each year since they came into force; and if she will specify the regulations involved in each case;

(2) what groups are exempt from the requirements of the Noise at Work Regulations 1989;

(3) how many employees are estimated by the Health and Safety Executive to be exposed to noise at or above 85 dB(A).

Mr. McLoughlin: The Noise at Work Regulations 1989 came into force on 1 January 1990. Since their introduction, health and safety inspectors have promoted awareness of and compliance with the regulations through widespread advisory and enforcement action. Wide publicity has been achieved through a series of free leaflets and extensive guidance. One employer has been prosecuted for breaches of regulations 4, 8, 9 and 11. In addition, 948 improvement notices and 54 prohibition notices have been issued.

The Health and Safety Executive estimates that about 1·7 million workers are exposed to noise levels above 85 dB(A).

The regulations apply to all workers covered by the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, except the crews of sea-going ships and aircraft or hovercrafts moving under their own power. They do not apply to workers in the offshore industry.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many Health and Safety Executive inspectors are specialists in noise control.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Health and Safety Executive has 12 specialist noise inspectors. They are supported by administrative and research staff with special qualifications in noise. All general Health and Safety Executive inspectors have received training in noise control.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much revenue has been received from the sale of literature and videos published by the Health and Safety Executive related to the Noise at Work Regulations 1989.

Mr. McLoughlin: Revenue received by the Health and Safety Executive from the sale of publications related to the Noise at Work Regulations 1989 up to 1 July 1992 amounts to approximately £68,000. No videos have been produced by the HSE relating to these regulations.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how the requirements in the noise directive on audiometry are being implemented in the United Kingdom;

(2) what measures the Health and Safety Executive has taken to ensure that employees exposed to noise at or above 85 dB(A) know they are entitled to a free hearing test through the national health service.

Mr. McLoughlin: EC directive 86/188/EC on the protection of workers from noise at work requires that workers exposed to 85 dB(A) or more should have access to hearing checks by a doctor. Anyone who is worried about any aspect of his or her health, including his or her hearing, already has access to the full range of NHS services.

The Health and Safety Executive has published a free leaflet for employees outlining the main requirements of the regulations and advising them about the risks to hearing of noise at work. The leaflet contains advice to workers to consult their doctor if they think there is something wrong with their hearing. The HSE's noise guide No. 1 also draws attention to employers' responsibilities to provide information and advice to employees.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans exist in the Health and Safety Executive or European Commission to reduce the first action level of the Noise at Work Regulations 1989; and what level is proposed.

Mr. McLoughlin: The European Directive on which the Noise at Work Regulations are based is to be reviewed by 1994. The European Commission is considering a proposal for a directive on the protection of workers from physical agents. This would replace the directive on noise and require a revision of the Noise at Work Regulations.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the Health and Safety Executive will update its publication, "100 Practical Solutions of Noise Control at Source".

Mr. McLoughlin: The Health and Safety Executive is currently examining whether a second edition of its publication titled "100 Practical Applications of Noise Reduction Methods" would be useful.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what noise surveys have been carried out in her Department's buildings, since the enactment of the Noise at Work Regulations 1989.

Mr. McLoughlin: There are nearly 2,000 buildings in the Employment Department group. The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Health and Safety

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what legislation her Department is proposing to ensure that workers who exercise their rights under article 8(4) of the framework directive (89/391/EEC) are not disadvantaged.

Mr. McLoughlin: Victimisation of workers who raise safety issues is totally unacceptable. The Government intends to include in a Bill to be introduced later in the current session of Parliament provisions which will go beyond the requirements of article 8(4) of the EC framework directive.

These provisions will include protection for all employees, regardless of length of service or hours of work, against victimisation if they leave their workplace or otherwise take appropriate action in the face of serious and imminent danger.

Safety Directives

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which Minister was responsible at the time (a) the manual handling of loads directive 90/269/EEC, (b) the display screen equipment directive 90/270/EEC,

(c) the carcinogens directive 90/394/EEC, (d) the biological agents directive 90/679/EEC, (e) the temporary or mobile construction sites directive and (f) the temporary workers' directive 91/383/EEC were agreed; how the United Kingdom voted at the meeting the directives were agreed; and on what date they were agreed.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information is as follows:

Directive	Date of adoption
90/269/EEC	29 May 1990
90/270/EEC	29 May 1990
90/394/EEC	28 June 1990
90/679/EEC	26 November 1990
91/383/EEC	25 June 1991
Construction sites[1]	24 June 1992

[1] No directive number yet allocated.

All the directives, except 90/394/EEC, were agreed during meetings of the Labour and Social Affairs Council. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, who was the then Secretary of State for Employment, represented the United Kingdom at the Councils up to and including 25 June 1991. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment represented the United Kingdom at the 24 June 1992 Council.

Directive 90/394/EEC was adopted at the Telecommunications Council. The United Kingdom was represented by my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Forth), the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, acting on advice from Employment Department Ministers in respect of that directive.

The proceedings of the Council of Ministers are confidential.

Fertilisers

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what discussions she has had with the Fertiliser Manufacturers Association concerning the safe storage and recording of deliveries of ammonium nitrate and other fertilisers and associated substances which might be used in the making of explosives;

(2) what instructions or advice she has given to farmers in Great Britain concerning the safe storage and recording of stocks of ammonium nitrate and other fertilisers which might be used in the manufacture of explosives.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment has not had discussions with the Fertiliser Manufacturers Association or given advice to farmers on these matters.

Earlier this year, a deputy director general of the Health and Safety Executive and other senior officials met representatives of the Fertiliser Manufacturers Association. Their concern over the apparently unsatisfactory storage of some imported ammonium nitrate fertilisers was discussed. As a result, Health and Safety Executive inspectors are making special visits to a number of places, including farms, to examine conditions of storage.

A guidance note on the storage and handling of ammonium nitrate has been published by the Health and Safety Executive. During visits, inspectors are drawing attention to this and other published guidance. A prohibition notice has been issued in one case, where large quantities of ammonium nitrate fertiliser were being imported under unsafe conditions.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what direct consequences for public expenditure would arise if the latest proposed draft of the EC working time directive is implemented in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 13 July 1992]: No directive on working time has been adopted by the EC Council. The Government do not accept the need for such a directive and reserve the right to challenge it, if adopted, in the European Court of Justice. The proposed directive as currently drafted would require member states to implement it within three years of its adoption but does not contain specific requirements on administration and enforcement. It is likely that there would be some administrative costs for public authorities. These cannot be precisely quantified, but would be small compared to the potential cost of compliance for employers, which the Government have previously estimated at about £5 billion. This cost would be substantially reduced as a result of the agreements reached at the Social Affairs Council on 24 June. Any remaining costs of compliance to employers in the public sector cannot yet be estimated. Any effect on public expenditure would depend on the arrangements for financing such costs within the overall framework of public expenditure control.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what account is taken in receipt of the mobility component of the disability living allowance in determining the provision of assistance under the fares-to-work scheme; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 14 July 1992]: When determining grants under the assistance with fares to work—FTW—scheme, the higher and lower rate mobility component of the disability living allowance—DLA—are taken into account in the following ways. Recipients of the higher rate mobility component who are able to drive and use it to resolve their mobility problems by driving themselves do not qualify for the FTW grant. Exceptionally, where a client's car is temporarily unavailable due to servicing or breakdown, they may qualify for the grant on a temporary basis. Other instances when the FTW grant can be made available on a temporary basis to such clients are where they are learner drivers or where they are making arrangements to obtain a car through Motability or another source.

Recipients of the higher rate mobility component who are legally barred from driving or medically advised not to drive may be entitled to an FTW grant. The grant, however, would be abated by one third of the mobility component. In all cases where FTW recipients receive the lower rate mobility component, the FTW grant, if payable, is also abated by one third. These abatements carry forward, in respect of DLA, a policy which applied in respect of the mobility allowance and which was designed to avoid double funding. A number of organisations have made representations arguing that the abatement should not apply, and we are considering the points they have made.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Household Incomes

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Selby (Mr. Alison) on 8 June, Official Report, column 51, when in July the next edition of the households below average income statistics will be published.

Mr. Lilley: The new edition of the households below average incomes—HBAI—statistics, covering the years 1979 to 1988-89, has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

In order to improve the statistical accuracy of the results, this edition combines data from the years 1988 and 1989. It also incorporates methodological changes which were the subject of consultation with a range of independent experts in 1991, and takes into account recommendations of the Social Security Select Committee.

Like its predecessors, this edition of HBAI is based on the family expenditure survey, FES. The primary purpose of the FES is to provide data for the construction of the retail prices index. Both its sample size and its method of compilation limit its usefulness as a source of data on family incomes, especially for small sub-groups of the population. Analysts in my Department have sought to overcome these limitations so far as possible—for example, by combining data from two consecutive years to enlarge the sample size—but it has become increasingly clear that the only real solution was to improve the data base itself. I have therefore authorised the establishment of a new family resources survey—FRS—which will in due course replace the FES as the main source of income and expenditure data for DSS purposes. Survey data for the FRS will begin to be collected in October 1992 and will in future years both improve and speed up the preparation of analyses such as the HBAI statistics.

Lodgers

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the reasons for the different treatment as regards benefits of men and women aged 60 years who take lodgers.

Miss Widdecombe: Differences in treatment could arise from the unequal state pension ages of men and women. The Government are committed to equalising state pension age and are now actively considering how best to achieve this.

Elderly People

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the effects on elderly people receiving income support of the recent letter circulated by the Benefits Agency saying that they will lose their support grant if they fail to give their consent to the agency's requirements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The administration of incomes support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Unemployment Benefits

Sir Malcolm Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost to public funds of (a) unemployment benefit and (b) related social security benefits paid to the unemployed in the financial year 1991-92.

Mr. Burt: The information for 1991-92 is not yet available. However, the estimated costs are set out in tables 1 and 5 of the second departmental report—"Social Security, The Government's Expenditure Plans 1992-93 to 1994-95", Cm 1914, published in February 1992.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will amend section 12 of the disability living allowance handbook with regard to the latest scientific knowledge on myalgic encephalomyelitis.

Mr. Scott: The Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board, which has been given the function of advising on the topicality and usefulness of the "Disability Handbook", is continuing to monitor the situation with regard to chapter 12 in the Handbook, which deals with myalgic encephalomyelitis.

Unemployment Benefit

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the value of unemployment benefit for a couple with two children aged under 11 years in relation to prices and earnings since 1976.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Date	Total Unemployment Benefit £	Unemployment Benefit[1] at April 1992 Prices[3] £	Benefit as a percentage of gross average earnings[4]
November 1976	27·50	90·82	36·0

April 1992	69·70	69·70	20·7

[1] Over 70 per cent of those registered as unemployed receive income support.

[2] Child dependency additions were abolished from 26 November 1984.

[3] Benefit has been calculated at April 1992 prices for comparison.

[4] Gross average weekly earnings are those of adult males for all occupations (new earnings survey) for the month in question.
[5] Child dependency addition for the eldest child was adjusted to take account of child benefit.

Pension Funds

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will take steps to ensure that auditors of pension funds are totally independent of the employer and do not provide other services to the company, its associates or its owner;

(2) if he will propose legislation under which actuaries of pension funds would be required to obtain independent corroboration of the accuracy of the information on which they base the opting-out certificate for the Occupational Pensions Board;

(3) what consideration his Department has given to the proposal that the Occupational Pensions Board should have the power to place the assets of a scheme under the control of an approved trustee if it believes that those assets are at risk;

(4) if he will take steps to ensure that changes in the contributions to pension funds by either employers or employees are quickly notified to each member of the fund;

(5) if he will extend the responsibilities of the Occupational Pensions Board to include supervision of the training of pension fund trustees;

(6) if he will introduce legislation to ensure that the advance authority of a majority of the trustees of a pension fund is required before any transaction with the employer, individual trustees or persons connected with them is permitted;

(7) if he will draw up proposals to establish a pensions tribunal to consider cases of pensions disputes beyond those which are the proper concern of the pensions ombudsman;

(8) what plans he has to extend the responsiblity, powers and resources of the Occupational Pensions Board;

(9) if he will draw up proposals under which pension funds trustees who find themselves in the minority on a trust board would have the right to seek independent expert advice;

(10) if he will draw up proposals under which auditors of pension funds would be required to append a statement to the accounts to the effect that the custody and signing procedures were satisfactory;

(11) if he will draw up proposals to amend pensions legislation to incorporate a practical system of fines and penalties against those who do not comply with the law;

(12) what plans he has to require pension fund trustees to (a) publish the annual report and accounts of the fund within seven months of the end of the accounting period and (b) file the report and accounts with the Occupational Pensions Board;

(13) if he will propose legislation under which the responsibilities of pension fund auditors would be extended to include a review of the trustees' report;

(14) if he will introduce legislation to restrict the freedom of management of companies to wind up pension schemes prematurely and unilaterally.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 14 July.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will introduce legislation under which each member of a pension scheme would have the right, to be exercised at least annually, to acquire information on the value of their particular holding in their pension fund's portfolio.

Miss Widdecombe: In its response on 29 June to the Select Committee report on the operation of pension funds, the Government reaffirmed their manifesto commitment to give every member of an occupational scheme the right to an annual statement of the value of their savings.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for disability working allowance had been received at the last date for which figures are available; how many had been adjudicated; what percentage of those adjudicated had been successful; if he will break down the numbers of unsuccessful claims by reasons for rejection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The number of claims received up to 10 July, the last date for which figures are available, was 14,219 of which 13,463 have been adjudicated, and 9·5 per cent. of those were successful. The table shows the reason for unsuccessful claims.

	Number
Capital in excess of £16,000	9
Not in remunerative work	7,133
Income exceeds level at which Disability Working Allowance payable	1,170
In receipt of Family Credit	294
No qualifying benefit	3,420
Others	403

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will break down awards of disability working allowance according to whether the recipient was (a) previously in employment or (b) in receipt of an incapacity benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available centrally to say how many disability working allowance recipients were previously in employment. We estimate that up to the end of May 123 awards were made to people who had been receiving invalidity benefit or severe disablement allowance in the 56 days before the date of claim.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will break down awards of disability working allowance by qualifying benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 13 July at columns 452-53.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will break down awards of disability working allowance by (a) amount of award, (b) age, (c) sex and (d) marital status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 13 July at columns 452-53. The average amount of awards is £30.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households in East Kilbride constituency qualify for payments under the cold weather payments scheme.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Night Attendance Allowance

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the progress of the claim for night attendance allowance, submitted by Mrs. T. Johnston, of Summerlands court, Summerlands close, Brixham; and whether Mrs. Johnston is entitled to an interim payment while her claim is being considered.

Mrs. Scott: The administration of attendance allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Hardship Payments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost of implementing the recommendation of the Social Security Advisory Committee that hardship payments to young people aged 16 to 17 years should be available as soon as it is accepted that hardship exists without the need for a further claim and interview with a social fund officer.

Mr. Burt: The information requested is not available. Immediate help is, however, already available to those at risk of severe hardship through the social fund crisis loan. Also, Benefits Agency offices are taking steps to simplify the claiming process.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what statements have been made to the Social Security Advisory Committee by his local office staff concerning the value of requiring young people eligible for hardship payments to apply for a crisis loan for the first one to two weeks; and what action he proposes to take.

Mr. Burt: The chairman and members of the Social Security Advisory Committee make frequent visits to local offices. Their conversations with staff members are not monitored or subjected to scrutiny by the Department or the Benefits Agency.

Disability Premium

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether, following the Commissioner's decision CIS/121/1991, he will amend the income support regulations so that a person who chooses to sleep in the open rather than in a tent does not lose entitlement to a disability premium; and if he will explain his reasons.

Mr. Burt: We have no plans to do so. People who choose to sleep in the open generally incur lower living costs, and do not, therefore, qualify for premiums. Once they have found accommodation, and incur a liability for rent, people who have been sleeping in the open can claim housing benefit to meet reasonable accommodation costs.

Boarder's Premium

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his policy in respect of amending the income support regulations to provide for a boarder's premium.

Mr. Burt: Income support, like all benefits, is continuously kept under review, subject to the Government's public expenditure and other priorities.

National Insurance Benefits

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Ainsworth) Official Report, columns 85-86, what were the savings in expenditure for 1991-92 resulting from the changes made to national insurance benefits since 1979, taking into account their cumulative effects.

Miss Widdecombe: It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of the cumulative 1991-92 savings resulting from the changes to national insurance benefits listed in my reply of 6 July because since the measures were introduced there have been significant changes in the number and characteristics of beneficiaries, and in general economic circumstances.

Mrs. Ethel Pearse

Mr. Whitney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he intends to appeal against the Court of Appeal judgment in the case of Mrs. Ethel Pearse given on 12 June; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: We have decided not to appeal against the Court of Appeal judgment. The effect of the judgment is that a married woman who has received her graduated retirement benefit may also be entitled, for the same period, to earn increments to her category B retirement pension if that is deferred. This is contrary to the way in which the legislation had previously been interpreted. Arrangements are in hand to identify all cases which may benefit from the ruling and, where appropriate, to pay the arrrears of benefit. It is hoped that this will be completed by the end of this financial year. We propose to change the regulations so that, for future cases, the receipt of graduated retirement benefit will preclude increments.

Information Technology

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the annual report and accounts of the Information Technology Services executive agency for 1991-92 will be published.

Miss Widdecombe: The annual report and accounts for the Information Technology Services Agency were published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Warble Fly

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of cases of warble fly and the number of herds affected, by region, in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Soames: There were two confirmed cases of warble fly in 1992, one in Cumbria and one in north Yorkshire. There were no confirmed cases of warble fly in 1991.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline his Ministry's guidelines on the procedure for the treatment of warble fly.

Mr. Soames: Warble fly is a notifiable disease, the presence or suspicion of which must be immediately reported to the local divisional veterinary officer.

If signs of infestation are found in any herd, it and all others within 3 km must be treated with an approved warblecide. Until treatment has been carried out, cattle movements are restricted.

Slurry Storage

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what investigations he has made into extending grant aid to roofing enclosed stock areas to reduce the required capacity for slurry storage.

Mr. Curry: The coverage of the grant scheme was carefully considered when it was introduced three years ago. It was decided to offer a high rate of grant focused on the core facilities which most farmers would need. In this way we are able to offer a 50 per cent. grant when the EC norm for this type of grant is 35 per cent. It was precisely because we did not grant aid roofing that we were able to persuade the EC Commission to accept our exceptionally high rate of grant. I have received no indications from the industry that it would be prepared to accept a lower rate of grant in order to allow the scheme to be extended.

Bee Diseases

Sir David Steel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures Her Majesty's Government have adopted to (a) investigate the causes of varroa jacobsoni, (b) combat the spread of the disease and (c) compensate those bee keepers whose livelihood has been affected as a result of the disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: (a) We have established from extensive investigations of infected premises that the mite, varroa jacobsoni is likely to have been in the United Kingdom for four to five years. The cause is most likely to have been an illegal importation of bees from an infected area.

(b) Following the discovery of varroasis in the United Kingdom on 5 April controls were put in place to minimise the spread of the disease and an extensive survey of apiaries carried out to check the extent of the infestation. An infected area has been declared and movement into and out of that area is prohibited except under licence. Inspection and sampling outside the infexted area revealed no evidence of the varroa mite. We are aware, however, that the mite is difficult to detect in the early stages of infestation. We are, therefore, continuing to keep the situation under close review and are prepared to amend the infected area if the disease is found outside its boundaries. The approval of veterinary medicines for the control of varroasis is being expedited and I hope that a licensed product will be available very shortly.

(c) It is not Government policy to offer compensation to bee keepers.

Fisheries Protection

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many fishing protection vessels the United Kingdom was employing at the latest available date; and how many fisheries protection personnel were engaged on such duties;

(2) if he will give the number of fisheries inspectors employed in the United Kingdom, at the latest available date.

Mr. Curry: The Royal Navy's fishery protection squadron currently comprises 13 ships, six to seven of which are likely to be engaged on fishery protection duties at any one time. The Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency (SFPA) has six civilian vessels and the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland has one.

The total number of Government fisheries inspectors —including SFPA marine officers with inspectorate duties but excluding staff on inland duties in Northern Ireland —is 184.

Fish Catch

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the sale value of the total United Kingdom fish catch for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Curry: The sale value of the total United Kingdom fish catch in 1991, including estimates for landings abroad, was £494 million. Landings into the United Kingdom by United Kingdom vessels amounted to £434 million.

Fisheries Management

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations have been made by his Department to non-EC Baltic and Mediterranean countries to improve effective regional fisheries management.

Mr. Curry: The Government have not made direct representations to non-EC Baltic and Mediterranean countries; competence for fisheries negotiations with third countries lies with the European Community. Fisheries in the Baltic are run by the International Baltic Sea Fisheries Commission in which the EC participates and in our presidency role this year we will co-ordinate views of other member states. In the Mediterranean EC member states are taking steps to improve fisheries management within their waters.

Further, on 9 June the EC Fisheries Council agreed initiatives should be taken to enable the other Mediterranean coastal states and a number of non-coastal third states whose fleets fish in the area to participate in the efforts to conserve and manage resources. The United Kingdom is always very supportive of moves to improve fisheries management.

Sea Mammals

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total number of small cetaceans caught in fishing nets (a) in British fishing waters and (b) by British fishing vessels in each year since 1975.

Mr. Curry: No detailed or complete statistics are available. A voluntary reporting scheme for incidental catches of marine mammals was introduced on 1 January 1992 to help provide information on these matters.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Curry: The Government continue to place a high priority on helping small businesses, through improvements to the business climate, through deregulation and through specific programmes of support and assistance.

This Department has continued to contribute significantly to this process. The agreement reached in May 1992 on reform of the common agricultural policy reflected this Government's insistence that support policies under the CAP should increasingly be geared to the needs of the real market and establishes a framework for farmers to plan ahead. United Kingdom producers will particularly benefit from the Government's success in securing the removal from the package of the elements in the original proposals which would have discriminated against them. The measures agreed also ensure continuing support for those farming in some of our most difficult areas.

We are continuing to improve the opportunities for farmers to diversify into alternative income-generating activities by means of such schemes as the farm and conservation grant scheme, the farm diversification grant scheme, the farm woodland premium scheme and the environmentally sensitive areas scheme. There will also be scope for additional action arising from the agri-environmental action programme agreed as part of the wider CAP reform package.

All the schemes operated by this Department are closely monitored. Reports on particular schemes are published from time to time.

Dolphins

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 320, what efforts are currently being undertaken by his Department to encourage worldwide measures to ban dolphin encirclement in all fisheries.

Mr. Curry: The United Kingdom has always strongly supported measures to protect cetaceans in international fora. The practice of encirclement is carried out by purse-seine fishermen in the eastern tropical Pacific, and no United Kingdom or Community vessels are involved. I welcome a recent agreement by the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission, involving 13 countries with an interest in the eastern tropical Pacific yellow-fin tuna fishery, to reduce drastically the level of dolphin mortality by 1999.

Civil Servants' Shareholdings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Guidance in the Ministry's staff manual asks staff to notify their personnel point/establishment officer of any shareholdings they hold which represents more than 10 per cent. of the issued share capital in any agricultural, food or fishery businesses or of any shareholdings directly related to the area in which they work. Staff should consult their personnel point/establishment officer about the desirability of acquiring or retaining a shareholding if there is any question of possible conflict with the interests of the Department. Information on the number of notifications given within the last five years cannot be provided without disproportionate cost. Next steps agencies follow this guidance but may draw up their own separate guidance to avoid any possible conflict of interest in their area of responsibility.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC.

Mr. Curry: Deregulation considerations are an aspect of all policy discussions. The Minister and I have had a large number of meetings with our EC counterparts since 18 April and deregulation aspects have formed part of our discussions on many policy items. We are particularly conscious of the need to minimise burdens placed on MAFF industries by the EC and during the United Kingdom presidency we will continue to take every opportunity to reinforce this message with our EC counterparts and the Commission.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Curry: My Department's objectives are set out in its departmental report entitled "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1992/93 to 1994/95; Departmental Report by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Intervention Board" (Cmnd. 1903, February 1992). Divisions and branches are organised in accordance with these aims. A more detailed breakdown of objectives is available in "Ministerial Information in MAFF" (MINIM). Copies of both documents are in the Library of the House.

European Year of the Elderly

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for his Department to celebrate in 1993 the European Year of the Elderly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the written reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 13 July 1992, Official Report, column 430.

Sheep Scab (Revocation) Order 1992

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will outline the advice he sought when drawing up the Sheep Scab (Revocation) Order 1992; and if he will place it in the Library;

(2) if he will list the organisations he consulted when drawing up the Sheep Scab (Revocation) Order 1992; and if he will show which of those agreed with his final proposals.

Mr. Soames: I have placed a copy of our letter of 6 January 1992 on the future of sheep scab control in the Libraries of the House, together with a list of organisations consulted. Individual responses remain confidential.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total number of confirmed cases of BSE for each year since 1986 and each month in 1992 in (a) Dyfed, (b) Wales and (c) Great Britain.

Mr. Soames: There were 847 cases of BSE confirmed in Great Britain prior to the disease becoming notifiable on 21 June 1988. Of these, 55 were in Wales, 33 of which were in Dyfed. Since then the number of confirmed cases is as follows, by year of report:

	Dyfed	Wales	Great Britain
1988	63	131	2,185
1989	238	506	7,136
1990	583	1,078	14,179
1991	1,256	2,232	25,013
January 1992	196	318	3,420
February 1992	156	302	2,871
March 1992	197	351	3,100
April 1992	187	294	2,771

1992 figures are incomplete due to the time between cases being reported and confirmation by histopathology.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total number of confirmed cases of BSE to date (a) in other countries of the European Community and (b) world-wide.

Mr. Soames: The following confirmed cases of BSE in other countries have been reported:

	Number
France	5
Republic of Ireland	55
Switzerland	17

In addition, there have been cases in Oman—two—and the Falkland Islands—one—in animals exported from the United Kingdom.

Pesticides

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Advisory Committee on Pesticides' final report on lindane and pentachlorophenol will be available.

Mr. Soames: It is anticipated that the Advisory Committee on Pesticides' evaluation document on lindane will be published before the end of 1992. A full review of pentachlorophenol is being undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive. It is expected that the results of the review will be published by mid-1995.

Fisheries Policies

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce to the Council of Ministers proposals for improving the consideration given to environmental effects of draft fisheries policies.

Mr. Curry: Given EC treaty obligations, environmental matters should be considered in the development of fisheries policies.

Battery Cages

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will use the period of the United Kingdom's presidency of the EC to persuade his European counterparts to introduce measures for a European-wide phase-out of the battery cage.

Mr. Soames: The EC Commission is to propose later this year revised welfare standards for laying hens in battery cages together with new welfare standards for alternative systems. The Government believe that the current Community standards for battery cages are inadequate and we will be pressing for the best possible welfare standards whatever the system of husbandry.

Shellfish Poisoning

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the projects relating to research into paralytic shellfish poisoning and associated problems to which his Department has contributed in the last three years or plans to support in the present financial year; and if he will indicate the amount contributed or to be contributed in each case.

Mr. Curry: During the financial years 1989-90 to 1992-93, £1·7 million will have been contributed to research into paralytic shellfish poisoning (PSP) and diarrhetic shellfish poisoning (DSP) as follows:

preliminary investigation into the distribution of dinoflagellate cysts in the sediments in the Ardtoe region —£2,000;

study of Alexandrium cysts off the east coast of Britain —£111,500; culture of toxic dinoflagellates—£15,800;

detection of sodium channel-blocking toxins in British coastal waters—£51,300;

immunodetection of toxic dinoflagellates—£47,000;

isolation and purification of PSP toxin—£156,300; development of reliable, sensitive and specific analytical methods and rapid assay procedures—£500,000 (PSP); £575,000 (DSP);

the effects of processing, storage, and cooking of shellfish containing PSP on the composition and toxicity of the toxin—£250,000.

Additionally, a surveillance programme is maintained, at a cost in the current financial year alone of £110,000.

Further work worth £1·3 million has been commissioned on scombrotoxin and phytoplankton research.

Dioxin

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department intends to issue guidelines to local people in the area surrounding the Coalite plant in Derbyshire on eating home grown vegetables; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: It is unlikely that vegetables would pose any hazard to consumers provided that they are washed or peeled as appropriate in the normal manner. The Department does not therefore propose to issue any guidelines.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Ministry intends to take following the findings concerning the level of dioxin found in the blood of one of the farming families living near the Coalite plant in Derbyshire.

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

Department of Health representatives, together with the local consultant in communicable disease control from North Derbyshire health authority, have already visited the family involved to give them the results and explain their significance.

Although the level of dioxins are higher than normal background levels, they are most unlikely to cause adverse health effects. The family is no longer exposed to the source of the dioxins as they no longer consume their own farm milk, and their blood dioxin levels are expected to decline in the future.

Sheep Dipping

Mr. Mills: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made on the extent to which sheep dipping will continue after the removal of the statutory requirement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: We anticipate that unnecessary dipping will cease. It is impossible to estimate future dipping patterns.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held on 13 and 14 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I chaired this meeting of the Council. My hon. Friend the Minister of State and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Secretary in my Department represented the United Kingdom.

Decisions were taken on a number of proposals relating to food quality, forest protection, veterinary checks, prevention against Newcastle disease and organic farming. The food quality proposal had been extensively amended to remove its undesirable features and was accordingly acceptable to the United Kingdom.

The Council had a first discussion on the very important draft regulation specifying how member states should ensure that the reformed CAP is properly controlled. This is important in terms of preventing fraud, and work will be taken forward urgently during the United Kingdom presidency.

European Agriculture Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what matters arising from the decisions taken at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development are due to be discussed at the European Agriculture Council on 13 and 14 July.

Mr. Curry: None at this Council. However, the integration of environmental considerations into agricultural policy will be a priority for the United Kingdom presidency in line with UNCED conclusions.

Fishery Protection

Mr. John Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 387, if he will set out the information available to his Ministry on the performance by private-contracted vessels of the maritime fishery protection service in Scotland.

Mr. Curry: Surface fishery protection duties in Scotland are carried out partly by the Royal Navy and partly by the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency (SFPA) using civilian vessels. The SFPA will shortly publish its first annual report. This will analyse performance and the effectiveness of the fisheries protection services provided. A key indicator of fisheries protection performance is the number of boardings achieved. The number of boardings of fishing vessels by civilian-manned vessels of the SFPA has increased from 1,125 in 1985-86 to 2,100 in 1991-92.

Surplus Food

Mr. Whittingale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the invitation to organisations to participate in the 1992 surplus food scheme in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Pursuant to my written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, South and Maldon on 10 July 1992, Official Report, column 395, I am placing a revised list of organisations designated under the EC surplus food scheme in the Libraries.

Farmers' Returns

Mr. Marland: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what terms the June returns from individual farmers are made available to public or private sector organisations; if he will list the organisations; and what distinction is made between returns of members of the Tenant Farmers' Association and others.

Mr. Curry: June agricultural and horticultural census returns from individual farmers are protected by the Agricultural Statistics Act 1979. Census forms can be released to a public or private sector organisation only with the prior written consent of the person by whom the information was furnished, and any other person with a financial interest in the holding. No distinction is made between respondents.

Fish (Ozone Depletion)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made on the effect of ozone depletion on fish yields.

Mr. Curry: I have been asked to reply.

The effect, if any, of changes in ozone levels may well fall within the wide range of natural fluctuations in fish populations. The Government monitor ozone levels and we are keeping the matter under review.

DEFENCE

Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's requirement for new tracked and wheeled light tactical combat armoured vehicles; which currently operated vehicles are to be replaced; how many of these vehicles are currently in service; when he proposes to brief industry on the requirement; what are the approximate costs of the new requirement; over what time scale new vehicles are to be procured; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The future requirement for new tracked and wheeled tactical combat armoured vehicles is under review. We plan to replace the majority of the tracked combat vehicle reconnaissance—CVR(T)—with a new vehicle in the early years of the next century; exact quantities will depend upon the results of a feasibility study and developing concept work. An industrial briefing on the new vehicle will be held on 16 September and the project is likely to cost around £2 billion. In addition, we are considering the replacement of the remaining CVR(T), FV430 series' vehicles and the combat engineer tractor (CET) early in the next century. The numbers of these vehicles currently held are:

	Number
FV430 series	2,536
CVR(T)	1,701
CET	140

Trident

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals his Department has received in regard to establishing the Trident refitting facility project —RD 57—at the Rosyth royal dockyard; and when he expects to take a decision on the project.

Mr. Aitken: The RD 57 project at Rosyth royal dockyard is designed to accommodate refits to Vanguard class and other nuclear submarines. Work on the project commenced in October 1987. It is now in the preparatory phase for the main design and build phase. Babcock Thorn Ltd., the management company at Rosyth royal dockyard, has recently put forward proposals for reducing the costs of the facility. These proposals will be considered as part of the current review of future requirements for fleet support, decisions on which are expected later this year.

Rosyth Dockyard

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what period of time he expects cores removed from nuclear-powered submarines to be stored at the Rosyth royal dockyard.

Mr. Aitken: It is normal practice for nuclear submarine used fuel cores to be held in the dockyards for a few months prior to their earliest practicable dispatch to BNFL Sellafield. These cores will continue to be held safely at the dockyards, in storage facilities approved by the nuclear installations inspectorate, until a licensed mode of transport is available. Our aim is to achieve this as quickly as possible.

European Year of the Elderly

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for his Department to celebrate in 1993 the European Year of the Elderly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Prime Minister on 13 July, Official Report, columns 430-31. Participation by the Ministry of Defence is not planned.

Nuclear Contamination, Australia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer on 29 June to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes), Official Report, columns 417-18, what current participation scientists from his Department have in the Anglo-Australian technical assessment group monitoring the former nuclear test sites at Maralinga, Emu Fields and Monte Bello in Australia.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. The Anglo-Australian technical assessment group has completed its work, and its report was published in November 1990. It has now been disbanded.

CIS Forces

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is Her Majesty's Government's estimate of the number of Commonwealth of Independent States or Russian forces currently stationed in each of the countries, excluding the CIS, of the former Warsaw pact.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are currently estimated to be some 195,000 Russian forces in Germany, 18,000 in Poland, 116,000 in the Baltic republics and 49,000 in Georgia.

United States Air Bases

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the United States of America air force bases Woodbridge and Bentwaters in Suffolk will revert to his Department's control.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: On current plans the United States Air Force will return RAF Bentwaters and RAF Woodbridge to full Ministry of Defence control by September 1993.

Britannia

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to offering Her Majesty's Yacht Britannia for use as a hospital ship in support of humanitarian aid to the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the annual cost of maintaining Her Majesty's Yacht Britannia for each of the last 10 years; and from which subheads of which votes these costs are taken.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The annual cost of maintaining Her Majesty's Yacht Britannia is as follows:

1983-84	8·905
1984-85	5·843
1985-86	6·943
1986-87	4·749
1987-88	22·364
1988-89	9·542
1989-90	6·998
1990-91	9·272
1991-92	11·466
1992-93[1]	8·602

[1] Estimate.

Expenditure falls mainly to subheads 1A, 1G, 1H, 2F4 and 5A3.

Royal Family

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost borne by his Department for the transport of members of the royal family for each of the last 10 years; and from which subheads of which votes these costs are taken.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The tranport costs for members of the royal family are not kept centrally and could not be provided without disproportionate cost and effort.

WE177 Bomb

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department intends to do with the fissile material retrieved from the dismantling of WE177 now declared to be surplus to requirements.

Mr. Aitken: Fissile material recovered from dismantled WE177 warheads will be retained for defence purposes.

Defence Statistics

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will reconsider his decision to issue "Defence Statistics" as a non-parliamentary paper.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. "Defence Statistics" has been established to provide for the regular publication of statistical information on defence matters. As an independent Government Statistical Service publication it is not appropriate to produce it as a parliamentary paper. Copies of the 1992 edition of "Defence Statistics" are available in the Library of the House, and through Her Majesty's Stationery Office, on the same basis as other Government Statistical Service publications.

Royal Tournament

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to take additional measures to ensure that off-duty service men and service women in London for the royal tournament do not get involved in violent conflicts with the local civilian population.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Service personnel are fully aware of the high standard of behaviour that is expected of them at all times, on duty or off duty, in attending the royal tournament and elsewhere. Any breaches of discipline that may occur are investigated and action is taken against individuals whenever there is evidence of an offence. No additional measures are necessary.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances British nuclear weapons are declared to (a) the Western European Union, (b) the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, (c) the North Atlantic Co-operation Council, (d) the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe and (e) the United Nations.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: British nuclear weapons are declared to NATO. The final decision on their use would in all circumstances rest with the British Government.

Low Frequency Raido Transmission

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart on the use of United States extremely low frequency radio transmission systems for communicating with British submarines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As part of normal information exchanges officials from my Department have discussed the capabilities of such a system.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which submarines in the service of his Department are capable of receiving extremely low frequency radio signals.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to my answer of 15 February 1991, Official Report, column 592, to my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro).

Porton Down

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many scientific procedures have been carried out on animals at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Aitken: This is a matter for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive of CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the site of special scientific interest agreement with English Nature in relation to Porton Down.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This is a matter for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive of the CBDE to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Queen's Flight

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the annual cost of maintaining the Queen's flight for each of the last 10 years; and from which subheads of which votes these costs are taken.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The annual cost of maintaining the Queen's flight is as follows:

1983-84	4·763
1984-85	4·770
1985-86	4·776
1986-87	4·752
1987-88	5·507
1988-89	5·952
1989-90	6·229
1990-91	6·745
1991-92	6·863
1992-93[1]	7·316

[1] Estimate.

Expenditure falls mainly to subheads 1C, 1D, 1E, 1H and 2M.

Public Record Office

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 22 June, Official Report, column 71, how many papers withdrawn by his Department from the Public Record Office in the last five years have been retained by his Department.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Aitken: Further to the reply given to my hon. Friend on 24 July 1991, at column 452, I can inform him that our new suppliers service has given marketing advice to about 2,500 companies over the past 12 months. Dealings are by post or telephone and at various seminars, exhibitions and meet-the-buyer events around the country.

In February 1992, the MOD introduced a new, fortnightly contracts bulletin setting out works services opportunities for property management and construction. This has been very well received by the construction industry and is proving to be an invaluable aid to small companies which might otherwise be unaware of the MOD's requirements in this sector.

During 1991-92, about 35 defence research contracts, with a total value of £966,000, were placed under our small firms research initiative. Details of other payments made to small firms during 1991-92 are not yet available, but during 1990-91, 6,109 small companies secured headquarters contracts valued at a total of £1·15 billion, of which about half was paid to companies with fewer than 50 employees. In the same period, Ministry of Defence establishments awarded 226,173 local purchase orders, valued at around £103 million, to small companies.

Prisoners of War

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has been given from sources in Seoul and Panmunjom about British prisoners seen in prisoner of war camps during the Korean conflict but not after the cessation of hostilities.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information was received from these sources at the time of the post-hostilities repatriations of British prisoners of war. We have not received any further information recently and have seen no evidence to support claims that British prisoners of war were detained in Korea or elsewhere after the post-armistice repatriations.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the information he has received from the United States Senate relating to British prisoners of war captured during the Korean war; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: To date we have received no material from the United States Senate on this subject.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the accounting procedure guidelines by which missing men, or known prisoners of war from the Korean war, are declared dead.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Scientific Instruments

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to offer ships and aircraft as platforms for scientific instruments.

Mr. Aitken: Under the "Joining Forces for the Environment" initiative launched by my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence on 1 July, Her Majesty's ships and aircraft could be made available as platforms for scientific instruments provided that the request for assistance has been endorsed by the Natural Environment Research Council, involves no additional costs to MOD and is compatible with operational training requirements.

Departmental Land

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what scientific study Her Majesty's Government are making of Ministry of Defence land which has not for many years been ploughed, sprayed or artificially fertilised.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No scientific studies are currently being undertaken. Where possible, and subject to operational requirements, the Ministry of Defence is prepared to make such land available for scientific studies.

Aerial Photography (Research)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what aerial photography and hydrographic readings are to be made available for research.

Mr. Aitken: Provided there are no security or copyright restrictions, aerial photographs and associated material can be obtained from the RAF film library at RAF Brampton and hydrographic readings from the Hydrographic Office's data centre in Taunton. Charges are made according to the type of request.

Disciplinary Proceedings (Documents)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether he has any plans to amend Royal Air Force service rules to allow documents used in any proceedings against service personnel to be made available to any person nominated by him other than a solicitor;

(2) if he will list those proceedings against members of the Royal Air Force where documents involved in those proceedings cannot be disclosed to anyone other than the officer involved and his solicitors.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In the case of disciplinary proceedings, disclosure of documents involved is made to the defence as part of current criminal law practice. In the case of administrative proceedings, disclosure of special narrative reports made under certain of the Queen's Regulations for the RAF is restricted to the subject, officer or airman, or to another member of the RAF selected by the subject or to his solicitor, to assist the subject to prepare a statement in reply to the report.

There are no plans to extend the facility to anyone else.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about the disclosure of documents used in any proceedings brought against RAF service personnel to persons other than solicitors.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not aware of any recent representations other than those from the hon. Member.

Radiation Doses

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish figures for the annual individual radiation dose equivalents for 1991 and the cumulative radiation dose equivalents for personnel at Devonport dockyard, Rosyth dockyard, HMS Defiance, HMS Vulcan, Clyde submarine base, Devonport naval base and combined figures for the naval nuclear propulsion programme and for all of his Department's personnel, except the Atomic Weapons Establishment.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 25 June 1992 to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett), Official Report, column 297.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Aitken: The Department's objectives were set out in its 1992 departmental report, Cm 1901, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. These top-level objectives are broken down into subsidiary objectives in the internal management plans of several hundred budget holders within the Department, each of whom may control several divisions and branches. It would involve disproportionate time and effort to collate them. However, the objectives of agencies are set out in their framework documents, obtainable from the chief executive. Additional to those addresses given in Cm 1901 are:

Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation DSA
Royal Naval Yard Fleetlands
Gosport
Hants PO13 O8W.

Duke of York's Military School
Dover
Kent CT15 5EQ.

Queen Victoria School

Dumping at Sea

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the quantity of arms dumped at sea off the United Kingdom coast in each of the last five years, indicating the proportion dumped by the various armed services.

Mr. Aitken: The MoD does not dump redundant ammunition and stocks off the coast of the United Kingdom. The only dump site used for disposal at sea lies in the Atlantic some 400 miles off Lands End at a depth of some 4,500 m. The information requested is as follows:

	1988	1989	1990	1991	[1] 1992
Navy	3,000	280	882	114	2,750
Army	70	1,165	893	936	5,031
RAF	174	99	nil	43	624
Total	3,244	1,544	1,775	1,093	8,405

[1] Figures given for 1992 reflect the total tonnage planned in this year's sea dumping programme.

Conventional Forces in Europe Treaty

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to conduct and receive inspections under the provisions of the conventional forces in Europe treaty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The parties to the conventional forces in Europe—CFE—treaty decided at the Helsinki CSCE summit that the treaty should be provisionally applied from 17 July, for 120 days or until the final state party deposits its instrument of ratification.

Under the treaty, each of the 29 participating states has the right to conduct a number of inspections on the territory of other parties, with the purpose of verifying the number of items of treaty-limited equipment they hold, monitoring the destruction of equipment to match permitted levels of holdings and clarifying any doubts about compliance with the treaty. During the initial 120-day baseline validation period we are obliged to receive around 30 inspections, and expect to make about the same number ourselves. Inspectors from the joint arms control implementation group—JACIG—will conduct CFE inspections on behalf of the United Kingdom, starting soon after the treaty enters into force. JACIG personnel will also escort inspections of facilities in the United Kingdom. We will co-operate fully with such inspections and welcome the opportunity to demonstrate our compliance with the CFE treaty.

South Atlantic Fund

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has about the future of the South Atlantic Fund.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The South Atlantic Fund is an independent body, for which its own trustees are responsible. I understand from the trustees that they are today announcing that the fund is to close on 31 December 1992. The balance of money in the fund will be disbursed, in appropriate shares, to the single service benevolent funds, which have given assurances that they will use this money to meet any future needs arising out of the Falklands conflict for as long as it is necessary.

Military Survey Defence Support Agency

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the key performance targets for the Military Survey defence support agency for 1992-93.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The key performance targets are as follows:

1. To maintain the operational readiness of the Military Survey defence support agency in accordance with the Army standards and to respond, as appropriate, to emergency and operational requirements.
2. To meet resourced targets for production, training and development for time scale, quantity and standard, as laid down in approved plans.
3. To provide the necessary support for the implementation of the Military Survey modernisation project and to initiate training.
4. To achieve a 2 per cent. increase in efficiency in year while remaining within budget.
5. To implement appropriate phases of the "Options for Change" and manpower reductions in accordance with forecast manpower planning targets.
6. To continue to improve the costing and management of geographic requirements.
7. To implement improved costing and budget systems and identify selected performance measures by 1 April 1993.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Quality

16. Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the investment programmes to improve water quality.

Mr. Maclean: During 1991-92 the water companies invested more than £3,000 million, an increase in real terms over 1990-91 of more than 15 per cent. The Director General of Water Services will publish a fuller assessment as soon as he has analysed the July returns from companies.

20. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on drinking water quality.

Mr. Maclean: The chief drinking water inspector's report for 1991 will be published shortly. It will confirm that water supplies in England and Wales continue to be of very high quality.

Water Extraction

18. Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last reviewed the mechanism for granting permission for water extraction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The water abstraction licensing system was last reviewed when the Water Act 1989 was passed.

Urban Development Corporations

19. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his latest estimated dates for the winding-up of urban development corporations.

Mr. Redwood: I shall confirm the wind-up dates for the urban development corporations following the end of the annual corporate planning round which is currently under way.

24. Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what grant has been paid to the London Docklands development corporation since 1987-88; and what was the total grant to the other nine urban development corporations in England.

Mr. Howard: Since 1987-88, the London Docklands development corporation has received grant in aid of £1,006·650 million. The total grant paid to the other English urban development corporations for the same period is £819·396 million.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance has been given to urban development corporations on the allocation of funds from their budget, for community development and grant aid work with local community groups, in relation to organisations which are an extension of the development corporation itself; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Urban development corporations themselves decide which community initiatives and groups they wish to support but refer to the Department if the projects are outside their delegated spending authority or raise particular issues.

Standard Spending Assessments

21. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding standard spending assessments.

Mr. Robin Squire: We receive a large number of representations on standard spending assessments throughout the year and these are all given very careful consideration.

Water Prices

22. Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to alter the constant K in the RPI plus K formula for water price increases.

Mr. Maclean: The Director General of Water Services is responsible for setting limits on water price increases. He will undertake a periodic review of K for all the companies at the first opportunity, and the revised limits will take effect from 1 April 1995.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account the Office of Water Services takes of the level of rainfall in each water company area when agreeing proposed water charges.

Mr. Maclean: Water companies have a duty to ensure that they have sufficient supplies of water available to meet demands from customers. The Director General of Water Services has a duty to ensure that the companies are properly able to finance their functions. In setting new price limits he will take account of factors which influence the costs of companies in different areas.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to require water companies to charge more equal rates to consumers across England and Wales.

Mr. Maclean: The Director General of Water Services is responsible for ensuring that companies can finance their functions and that in setting their charges they do not give undue preference to or unduly discriminate against any class or group of customers. Expenditure by individual companies on the provision of services necessarily varies and each must be able to set charges which reflect its own costs.

Local Government Finance

23. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the amount of capital receipts being held by local authorities in England and Wales.

Mr. Redwood: It is currently estimated that English local authorities held about £0·8 billion of usable capital receipts at the end of March 1992. In addition, authorities are estimated to hold over £5 billion of capital receipts which have been set aside as provision to meet credit liabilities.

Figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

28. Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the proposed financial settlement for local authorities for 1993-94.

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities on 21 May 1992, Official Report, column 195.

Enterprise Zone, Barrow-in-Furness

25. Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement on his policy with regard to creating an enterprise zone in Barrow-in-Furness.

Mr. Redwood: Our policy remains that the creation of new enterprise zones will be considered only in exceptional circumstances. We are looking at the case for a zone in Barrow.

Darwin Initiative

26. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in implementing the Darwin initiative and biodiversity undertakings given at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

Mr. Howard: The Darwin initiative is still in its early stages. We are currently discussing with interested organisations the best way to proceed with the development of this Initiative.

The United Kingdom is already well placed to discharge its responsibilities under the biodiversity convention, in relation to its own biodiversity. The convention will require us to keep our systems under review and we will do so.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

29. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list his plans to reduce carbon dioxide emissions.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche).

Housing, Leicester

30. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the number of local authority houses in Leicester in 1979, 1989 and 1991.

Sir George Young: Leicester city council reported a total of 35,945 council dwellings in its April 1979 housing investment programme return. Corresponding figures reported in 1989 and 1991 were 31,639 and 30,172 respectively.

Water Conservation

31. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take for the conservation of England's water resources.

Mr. Maclean: The statutory responsibility for conserving water resources lies with the National Rivers Authority, and my Department maintains close liaison with the NRA. We shall shortly be publishing a consultation paper to obtain views on a wide range of options for bringing about the more efficient use of water.

Enterprise Zones, Free Ports

32. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funds have been allocated by his Department to enterprise zones in free ports during each of the last three years.

Mr. Redwood: None. There are and have been no enterprise zones in free ports or free zones.

Council Tax

33. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with local authorities on the implementation of the council tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: We are holding regular discussions with local authorities at both ministerial and official level and are pleased to see that good progress is being made in the preparations for the council tax.

EC Presidency

34. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the initiatives on environmental policy to be undertaken by his Department as part of the United Kingdom's six months' presidency of the European Community.

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given orally today to the hon. Member for York (Mr. Bayley).

"Competing for Quality in Housing"

35. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many responses he has so far received to his consultation paper "Competing for Quality in Housing".

Sir George Young: Five.

Environmental Issues

36. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the help he proposes to give to local authorities to promote environmental issues.

Mr. Maclean: It is for local authorities to decide how to promote environmental issues, in the light of local circumstances and their overall environmental strategies, and in consultation with all sections of the community.

Low River Flows

37. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet the chairman of the National Rivers Authority to discuss low river flows.

Mr. Maclean: The authority's plans for dealing with water resource problems including low river flows were among matters raised at my recent meeting with my hon. and noble Friend to discuss the authority's 1992 corporate plan.

Gravel Extraction

10. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has recently had with environmental groups on the problems arising from the twin industries of gravel extraction and tipping of waste in landfill sites.

Mr. Baldry: My recent discussions with environmental groups have not covered gravel extraction and landfill of waste.

Homelessness

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what was (a) the total expenditure and (b) the additional specific allocation for tackling homelessness which was provided in the latest financial year with a breakdown by (i) region and (ii) local authority.

Mr. Baldry: Total capital expenditure on measures for tackling homelessness is not separately identifiable. However, in 1990-91 and 1991-92 the Government made £300 million available to local authorities and housing associations in the areas of England with the highest homelessness pressure for schemes to create permanent lettings. A total of £236 million of this was allocated to local authorities. An additional £11 million was allocated in 1991-92 for local authority cash incentive schemes to release council properties for homeless families. These measures seem likely to produce more than 17,000 new lettings. The latest available figures for 1990-91 outturn and 1991-92 allocations, (excluding the additional cash incentive allocation which is not separately identifiable), are given in the table.

Dioxin

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the daily intake of dioxin in a human being at which Her Majesty's Government would take action to stop the source of such pollution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

The tolerable daily intake—TDI—for dioxins is 10 picograms toxic equivalents per kilogram body weight per day. This TDI was recommended by a World Health Organisation regional office for Europe expert group in 1990 and subsequently endorsed by the United Kingdom committee on the toxicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment.

It is Government policy that when intakes of any contaminant are found to regularly exceed the TDI, action is taken to investigate the problem and, wherever possible, to reduce exposure to the contaminant.

Spent Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to ensure all liquid and gaseous radioactive wastes created in the reprocessing of imported spent nuclear fuel at Sellafield are collected at discharge sources and returned to the country of origin of the irradiated foreign fuel.

Mr. Maclean: Before liquid wastes are discharged from Sellafield, almost all the radiologically significant material is removed by effluent cleaning plants. The solid wastes and sludges produced by these plants are subject to the normal return arrangements. The remaining liquid and gaseous wastes, which are of little radiological significance, are disposed of under an authorisation from the regulatory authorities, the chief inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Radiation Monitoring

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend the scope of RIMNET—the radiation incident monitoring network—to the Isle of Man; and if he will make a statement on progress made in establishing RIMNET to date.

Mr. Maclean: There has been a monitoring station at Ronaldsway on the Isle of Man since RIMNET commenced operating at the end of 1988. Details of the system currently in operation are contained in the HMSO booklet "The National Response Plan and Radioactive Incident Monitoring Network (RIMNET) Phase 1", copies of which are available in the Library of the House. A contract to upgrade and extend RIMNET was let in March 1991, and is due for completion later this year.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department routinely receives and examines the annual report on radioactivity monitored in the environment by the Isle of Man Government.

Mr. Maclean: No. A copy of this report goes to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food at Lowestoft.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what communications his Department has had with the Argus project on monitoring radioactivity in the environment.

Mr. Maclean: Officials within my Department are aware of the Argus project and have discussed its operation with the system operator.

Council Debts

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 20 non-metropolitan councils in the order of the level of their indebtedness, with the relevant figures in each case.

Mr. Robin Squire: The 20 non-metropolitan district and county councils reporting the highest levels of indebtedness are shown in the table.

Pollution Inspectorate

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff there are in Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution; how many of those are qualified inspectors; where they are located; and what is their annual budget.

Mr. Maclean: There are currently 309 staff in post in Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, of whom 162 are inspectors and 147 administrative staff.

The approved complement for 1992-93 has been increased to 377·5 staff. HMIP is currently recruiting additional staff up to this complement.

HMIP staff are located as follows:

	Numbers
Bedford	33·0
Birmingham	3·5
Bristol	42·0
Cardiff	15·5
Chelmsford	2·5
Darlington	8·0
East Grinstead	2·5
Lancaster	18·0
Leeds	28·5
Lincoln	7·5
London	[1]121·0
Newcastle-under-Lyme	1·0
Runcorn	16·0
Sheffield	10·0

[1] Including 18 staff due to move to Reading in autumn 1992.

HMIP's forecast expenditure for 1992-93, on a full economic cost basis, is £27·5 million, including £7·5 million research expenditure.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) inspections and (b) prosecutions have been undertaken as part of the work of HM inspectorate of pollution in each of the last five years.

Mr. Maclean: The number of inspections carried out by HMIP is as follows:

Visits to works (England and Wales)

	Number
1987-88	10,164
1988-89	9,782
1989-90	7,887
1990-91	3,867
1991-92	6,327

Note: These figures include visits to or in connection with scheduled and non-scheduled works by inspectors and sampling teams, and visits regarding radioactive emissions to air by inspectors and sampling teams. In addition to the above visits there were a number of meetings with companies in connection with scheduled work but not involving site inspection.

The number of prosecutions taken by HMIP over the last five years are as follows:

	Number
1987-88	3
1988-89	2
1989-90	4
1990-91	1

All prosecutions except one in 1989-90 resulted in convictions.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has made of each of the nine proposals for power plants and incinerators in the east London corridor; and what assessment is had made about them cumulatively.

Mr. Maclean: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has received five applications under the terms of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to operate new power plants and incinerators in the east Thames corridor and is scrutinising them to satisfy itself that they meet the requirements of the Act. So far, one has been determined. HMIP is aware that other applications might be made and is carrying out an assessment of the possible effect on air quality in east London of each individual plant and the cumulative effect of them all.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 7 July, Official Report, column 152, if he will set out the actions Her Majesty's Government intend to take to fulfil the requirements set out in the amendments to chapter 20 of "Agenda 21" on hazardous wastes as agreed at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

Mr. Maclean: We are currently looking at the implications for United Kingdom policy of "Agenda 21", including chapter 20.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to establish further marine biological sites of special scientific interest in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: There is no such designation and we have no plans to introduce one. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 8 July 1992 to my hon. Friend the Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch) at column 252.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to ensure automatic public inquiries for all proposals affecting sites of special scientific interest where there is an outstanding objection from the statutory country conservation agency.

Mr. Maclean: No.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what penalties are currently employed by his Department for the damage or destruction of a site of special scientific interest; and if he has any plans to extend such penalties.

Mr. Maclean: English Nature is empowered to enforce the provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in cases of damage to sites of special scientific interest. The levels of fines is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary, but there are no plans for changes.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current monitoring system utilised for sites of special scientific interest; how much is allocated for such monitoring by his Department; and what plans he has to upgrade such monitoring.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 June 1992, Official Report, column 260. During 1992-93 English Nature has budgeted to spend £18·1 million on the safeguarding of designated sites, including monitoring activities.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will establish a United Kingdom-wide system of positive incentives for sites of special scientific interest management.

Mr. Maclean: English Nature's wildlife enhancement scheme is a pilot project to assist owners and occupiers to undertake land management which is beneficial to the wildlife interests of SSSIs. English Nature will also be giving grants to county wildlife trusts under its reserves enhancement scheme for a similar purpose. These are important initiatives, but they will need to be evaluated before decisions are taken on whether they should be available more generally.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his practice to include specific references in environmental statements deposited under Standing Order 27A (environmental assessment) to each site of special scientific interest affected by works proposed in private Bills.

Sir George Young: The preparation and content of environmental statements deposited with private Bills under SO 27A is a matter for the promoters of the Bill, subject to the requirement that the statement shall generally contain, in relation to the works authorised by the Bill, the information set out in schedule 3 to the Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988. This includes information about the site and the likely effects of the proposed development on the environment by reference to its possible impact on flora, fauna, soil, water and the landscape. While there is no specific requirement for environmental statements to identify SSSIs likely to be affected by the development proposed, they are expected to do so.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received from local authorities about the compilation of the contaminated land register;

(2) what is the current number of registrations on the contaminated land register; and what is the expected eventual size of the register;

(3) what provision exists for the removal of names from the contaminated land register;

(4) how it is intended to fund the decontamination of contaminated land.

Mr. Maclean: During the 1991 consultation exercise on registers of land which may be contaminated, which local authorities are to compile under section 143 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, some 200 responses were received from local authorities and their representative associations. Many further letters on aspects of registers have been received since the end of consultation.

The statutory requirement for local authorities to compile registers has not yet commenced, so no sites have been entered on registers. It is not possible at this stage to forecast the number of sites which will be registered.

Registers are to record all land which is, or has been, subject to specific contaminative uses to be listed in regulations. Sites will not be removed from registers unless it is shown that the entry was due to a factual error concerning the site's use.

Government financial assistance for treatment of contamination at derelict sites is available under derelict land grant. The criteria for this grant give a high priority to schemes involving treatment of severe contamination. The Government are also making resources available to local authorities by means of supplementary credit approvals for investigation and treatment of contamination of land where it is not practicable to recover the costs of these works from those responsible.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 14 May, Official Report, column 198, to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), when he expects to publish the contaminated land register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Local authorities will be required under section 143 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to compile public registers of land which may be contaminated and in due course to publish them. The detailed specifications for registers are still under consideration, but an announcement on how the Government intend to proceed will be made shortly.

Compliance Monitoring

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many cases of compliance monitoring are currently being undertaken by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution of those previously having been found to have been in breach of pollution standards; and what is the average frequency in such cases.

Mr. Maclean: Compliance monitoring is carried out on all processes authorised under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. The prescribed inspection frequency depends on the type of process, the operator competence ratings and the pollution release potential of the process.

House Condition Survey

Sir Malcolm Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the results of the 1991 house condition survey; and whether he will now make a preliminary statement on its findings.

Mr. Baldry: The results of the 1991 English house condition survey will be published in 1993. No findings are yet available as data are still being collected and processed.

Grants

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money was allocated for improvement and repairs grants to each local authority in England for 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Sir George Young: Resources are not allocated to local authorities solely for expenditure on grants for repairs and improvements. Each authority receives an overall allowance for specified capital grant, as part of its annual housing investment programme allocation, to support private sector renewal work, including house renovation grants. This covers the Exchequer contribution towards their expenditure—75 per cent. in the case of grants. Figures for specified capital grant received by each local authority for 1991-92 and 1992-93 are given in the HIP allocation tables for the local authorities in England, copies of which are available in the Library.

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for each quarter from July to September 1990 onwards, what was the number of (a) applications and (b) approvals in England for (i) renovation grants, (ii) disabled facilities grants and (iii) minor works assistance.

Sir George Young: Figures for the numbers of approvals of mandatory and discretionary renovation grants and disabled facilities grants, together with approvals of minor works assistance, in England are shown in the quarterly publication "Housing and Construction Statistics: Part 2"—tables 2.17, 2.19 and 2.21 respectively. Copies of this publication are in the Library.

The latest edition of this publication gives figures up to the December quarter 1991. Figures for the March quarter 1992 are as follows:

Applications approved: England: March quarter 1992

	Numbers of grants
Renovation grants:
Mandatory	8,700
Discretionary	1,300
Disabled facilities:
Mandatory	5,000
Discretionary	60
Minor works assistance	7,800

There are no corresponding figures available for the number of applications for these grants.

Sir Malcolm Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a table setting out the value of home improvement grants in the private sector for each year between 1981 and 1991.

Sir George Young: Figures showing the amount of housing renovation grants paid to private owners and tenants for each year between 1981 and 1991 are published in "Housing and Construction Statistics". Figures for 1981 to 1988 are in the annual version "Housing and Construction Statistics 1980-1990: Great Britain", table 7.3.

Figures for 1989-91 are in the quarterly version "Housing and Construction Statistics, December Quarter 1991, Part 2: Great Britain". Grants made under the Housing Act 1985 are in table 2.18 and grants made under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, effective from July 1990 in England and Wales, are in table 2.17.

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was spent by local authorities in England on mandatory renovation grants, discretionary renovation grants, mandatory disabled facilities grants, discretionary disabled facilities grants, minor works assistance-staying-put grants, minor works assistance-thermal insulation, minor works assistance patch-and-mend and minor works assistance-elderly relative, for each quarter since July 1990.

Sir George Young: Figures for final payments of mandatory and discretionary renovation grants and disabled facilities grants in England are published in the quarterly publication "Housing and Construction Statistics: Part 2"—tables 2.17 and 2.19 respectively. It also gives information about final payments of minor works assistance as a whole, table 2.21. Copies of this publication are in the Library.

The latest edition gives figures up to the December quarter 1991. Figures for the March quarter 1992 are as follows:

Final payments: England: March quarter 1992:

	£ thousands
Renovation grants
Mandatory	72,808
Discretionary	5,337

	£ thousands
Disabled facilities grants
Mandatory	14,262
Discretionary	281
Minor works assistance	4,803

The only information about the different types of minor works assistance available relates to the financial year 1990-91. The figures for final payments are as follows:

Final payments: England: 1990-91

	£ thousands
Minor works assistance:
Elderly householder to "stay put"	6,328
Thermal insulation	1,610
Elderly person to become or remain resident	315
Temporary improvement of property to be cleared	1

The Department provides a 75 per cent. Exchequer contribution towards local authorities expenditure on grants. The exception to this is for disabled facilities grants to council tenants; expenditure on these grants is eligible for 100 per cent. subsidy from the housing revenue account.

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of renovation grants in 1991-92 were paid to (a) owner-occupiers and (b) tenants.

Sir George Young: The only figures currently available about the tenure of persons receiving renovation grants relate to the financial year 1990-91. During that period, 93 per cent. of grants went to owner-occupiers with virtually all of the remaining 7 per cent. going to private sector landlords and housing associations as landlords.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards waste disposal being (a) recycled and (b) localised; what action he is taking to give recycled and localised waste disposal advantages over (i) non-recycled and (ii) major centralised waste disposal respectively; and what relevant statistics he has for each category both (1) at present and (2) for the year 2000.

Mr. Maclean: It is Government policy that the production of solid waste should be minimised. Failing that, waste should be reused, recycled or incinerated with energy recovery. It should only be landfilled as a last resort. The provision of waste disposal facilities, whether small and local or large and centralised, is a matter for waste disposal authorities in consultation with the planning authority. Waste collection authorities are also under a duty to prepare recycling plans which are due to be submitted in draft to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment by 1 August. Our target is that 25 per cent. of household waste should be recycled by 2000, compared with about 5 per cent. at present. The collection of statistical information on waste recycling and disposal is currently under review.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has issued to ensure that the actual and full costs of waste disposed by (a) landfill and (b) incineration are reflected in (a) the charges levied by waste disposal authorities and (b) the calculation for recycling credits.

Mr. Maclean: Waste disposal authorities, except for the statutory waste disposal authorities which are a special case, do not levy charges in respect of waste disposal. The statutory joint authorities' power to make levies on their constituent councils is set out in the Waste Regulation and Disposal (Authorities) Order 1985, SI 1985 No. 1884. The method to be used for setting the values of recycling credits is set out in the Environmental Protection (Waste Recycling Payments) Regulations, SI 1992 No. 462. Guidance to authorities on operating the system of recycling credits is provided in circular 4/92.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those waste disposal authorities which have set up local authority waste disposal companies in conjunction with the private sector; and in the case of each authority, which private company has been the successful bidder.

Mr. Maclean: No LAWDCs have yet been established.

Waste Incinerators

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on which dates the toxic waste incinerator proposed for Howdon-on-Tyne, and the clinical waste incinerator for Felling-on-Tyne, were called in by him; on what dates the inquiries were held; and what factors determine the length of time before his decision is announced.

Mr. Mclean: Neither of these proposals was called in by the Secretary of State. Both are the subject of planning appeals which were recovered for determination by the Secretary of State. The Howdon appeal was lodged on 28 December 1989 and was recovered on 18 May 1990. The other appeal, at Follingsby was lodged on 15 February 1991 and was recovered on 14 March 1991. The inquiry into the Howdon appeal was one of three linked inquiries held between 11 September 1990 and 1 March 1991. The site-specific inquiry into the Howdon proposals was held between 8 and 31 January 1991. The inquiry into the Follingsby appeal was held between 9 April and 3 May 1991.

The target handling times for appeal cases where the Secretary of State takes the decision are published in planning policy guidance note 1. The aim is to decide 80 per cent. of cases within eight weeks of receiving the inspector's report, although as each case must be considered on its own merits, more complex cases may take longer than eight weeks. The inspectors' report on the linked inquiries which included the Howdon appeal was received on 10 December 1991. It raises many complex issues all of which need to be carefully considered before a decision can be issued. Good progress is being made and the decision will be issued as soon as it is practicable to do so.

The inspectors' report on the Follingsby appeal has not yet been received. It is expected to be received shortly.

Energy Proposals, London

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how each of the nine proposals for power generation and incinerators in the east London corridor are affected by his Department's document, "Planning and Pollution Control"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: This document has been issued for public consultation only. Once finalised, it will be taken into account by local planning authorities in the preparation of development plans, and may be a material consideration in individual decisions under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

Dolphins

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps have been taken to investigate the cause of the strandings of dolphins on the Cornwall coasts earlier this year.

Mr. Maclean: My Department has had a contract with the Institute of Zoology—IOZ—since August 1990, to co-ordinate the investigation of cetacean strandings in England and Wales. One of the objectives of this contract is to allow for a swift and thorough investigation of stranding incidents. In the first three months of 1992, 105 common dolphins were washed up on the north and south coasts of Cornwall and Devon—substantially more than those recorded in previous years. The IOZ examined the evidence from 38 individual post-mortems conducted by the institute itself and by the MAFF investigation centre at Polwhele. The IOZ has also conducted or arranged tests for evidence of disease and contaminants.

The institute has submitted a report on the incident to my Department which is being placed in the Library of the House. The post-mortem examinations suggest that fisheries entanglement may have been the principal cause of this incident. The animals appeared to be in a good nutritive state and free of serious disease. Tests for a range of contaminants, including heavy metals and PCBs, have shown nothing unusual. There was no evidence of the seal virus which has been known to affect cetaceans elsewhere. There is, however, some evidence of an increase in the number of common dolphins present in south-western waters at the time of the incident.

Water (Environmental Costs)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will propose legislation by which the environmental costs of water extraction would be (a) reflected in the charges to the consumer or (b) taken out of the profits made by the water companies.

Mr. Maclean: I am considering the possibility of incentive charging for both effluent discharges to water and water abstraction. I hope to issue a consultation paper later in the year.

Waste Tips (Groundwater)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in monitoring groundwater beneath waste tips; and if his Department will establish a database on the level of pesticide waste in each waste tip.

Mr. Maclean: A research programme is under way to provide a review of the extent and type of groundwater contamination in England and Wales associated with the landfilling of controlled waste. The work will enable the Department to form conclusions about the significance of contamination in relation to drinking water quality standards, contaminant background levels in groundwater and contamination from non-landfill sources. It will result in guidelines for monitoring requirements and complements a broader programme of monitoring groundwater sources being sponsored by the National Rivers Authority.

The results of the study will be in the form of a database which is likely to contain waste input data by broad classification, but not details of pesticide or any other particular waste inputs to individual sites.

Another project currently being carried out is to compile a database of the composition of the liquids produced within landfills and to investigate the occurrence of compounds of environmental significance, including certain pesticides, within these liquids.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he plans to take during the United Kingdom presidency of the European Community to co-ordinate and promote a common information strategy for the public on radioactive waste, as set out in point 6 in the annex to the Council resolution of 15 June on the Community action plan on radioactive waste, published in the Official Journal of the European Communities No. C 158/3-5, 25 June.

Mr. Maclean: It is expected that the EC Commission will take forward the recommendations of research studies which it has undertaken in this field. In doing so it will be advised by the advisory committee on programme management for the Community plan of action in the field of radioactive waste. The United Kingdom is represented on this advisory committee. The United Kingdom can provide examples of good practice, for example, the highly successful Sellafield visitor centre. The United Kingdom is also implementing the European Community directive on the freedom of access to information on the environment —90/313/Euratom.

Leather Processing

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give urgent consideration to redefining leather processing from part A of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution regime to a part B process under the environmental protection legislation.

Mr. Maclean: No. We are satisfied that control of pollution from leather processes is more appropriate to integrated pollution control, regulated by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, than to local authority air pollution control.

Halon Gas

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations exist governing the use of halon gas in retail products.

Mr. Maclean: EC regulation 594/91 controls the production and consumption—defined as production plus imports minus exports—of halons rather than their use in particular products, reflecting the approach of the Montreal protocol. With the EC, we are proposing that the protocol should phase out halons by the end of 1995, with an 85 per cent. cut by the end of next year. We will also be pressing for a complete phase-out of halons within the Community by the end of 1994.

Sustainable Development Corporation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to encourage the involvement of non-governmental organisations in the Sustainable Development Corporation according to United Nations Conference on Environment and Development accreditation and not to Economic and Social Council accreditation.

Mr. Maclean: The United Kingdom will encourage the General Assembly, at an early stage, to examine ways of enhancing the involvement of non-governmental organisations within the United Nations system in relation to the UNCED follow-up process, and the establishment of the best procedures for such an expanded role.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make representations to the Secretary-General of the United Nations to ensure the establishment of a formula for deciding the membership of the Sustainable Development Corporation which ensures that membership is not limited to Economic and Social Council members.

Mr. Maclean: The United Kingdom will seek to ensure that the General Assembly, at its 47th session, establishes a basis for membership of the Sustainable Development Commission which pays due regard to equitable geographical distribution and the interests of those who are not Economic and Social Council members.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to make representations to ensure that the newly established Sustainable Development Corporation has the strongest available and highest qualified secretariat.

Mr. Maclean: The United Kingdom will ask the United Nations Secretary-General to ensure that the Sustainable Development Commission has a highly qualified and competent support structure within the framework of the United Nations secretariat. We do not believe that a new, independent secretariat should be created.

Recycling

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will assess the restrictions placed on local authorities' spending on recycling and reconsider the standard spending assessment formula to enable local authorities to be assured of sufficient resources to produce the recycling plan.

Mr. Robin Squire: Standard spending assessments make proper provision for the whole range of services for which local authorities are responsible. Provision for waste recycling was taken into account in the 1992-93 local government finance settlement. It is for local authorities to determine their own spending priorities in the light of local circumstances.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list those local authorities which (a) have submitted their recycling plan within the time scale laid down by his Department and (b) have not yet submitted their recycling plan;

(2) of those authorities which have not submitted a recycling plan, what reasons have been given for failure to submit one within the time scale.

Mr. Maclean: Local authorities are not due to submit their draft recycling plans until 1 August 1992.

By 13 July 1992 plans had been received from:

London boroughs
- Hammersmith and Fulham
- Kensington and Chelsea

Metropolitan boroughs
- Calderdale
- Kirklees
- Leeds

District councils
- Adur
- Arun
- Bassetlaw
- Braintree
- Broadland
- Chelmsford
- Chester City
- Craven
- Crawley
- King's Lynn and West Norfolk
- Leicester City
- Malvern Hills
- North Devon
- North Kesteven
- North Warwickshire
- Nottingham City
- Restormel
- St. Albans
- St. Edmunsbury
- Shepway
- Southend-on-Sea
- South Wight
- Suffolk Coastal
- Waverley
- West Lindsey

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his current targets for recycling of (a) domestic and (b) commercial waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Government are maintaining the target set out in the 1990 White Paper on the environment, "This Common Inheritance", Cm 1200, the recycling of half our recyclable household waste by the end of the century. That translates to about 25 per cent. of all household waste. We have no specific targets for recycling commercial waste where the increasing costs of waste disposal are expected to act as a sufficient incentive to encourage waste producers to look for alternative ways of dealing with their waste. The proposed EC directive on packaging is expected to lead to the adoption of further targets for waste minimisation and recycling.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what economic inducements he has given to creating markets for recycled waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: It is expected that the Environmental Protection Act 1990 will lead to increasing costs of landfilling and incinerating waste. In most cases, this will provide a significant economic inducement to alternative methods of waste treatment, including recycling. To ensure that the market is operating correctly in these areas, the Government are currently undertaking studies of landfill pricing and of economic instruments, the results from which are expected during the summer. In addition, grants to assist in the development of new processes and facilities are available, and have been given, to the recycling industries under the environmental technology innovation scheme and other routes. Some of these projects are concerned with identifying and overcoming technological barriers to market development.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what criteria were used when determining the successful supplementary credit approvals for recycling issues; and by what means those criteria were made known to local authorities;

(2) if he will give his reasons for rejecting Newcastle-under-Lyme's application for supplementary credit approvals; and if he will now reconsider his decision.

Mr. Maclean: The criteria against which local authorities' bids for supplementary credit approvals—SCAs—for recycling schemes for 1992-93 were assessed were set out in the Department's letter of 23 December 1991 inviting local authorities to submit bids.

Priority was given to schemes which: could be shown to produce material for which there is a guaranteed market; involved partnership with the private sector, or a significant element of private finance; presented opportunities for offering employment to people with learning difficulties.

Priority was also given to the further development of schemes which has been awarded SCAs for 1991-92, including those which were justifiably delayed in that financial year.

In announcing allocations to local authorities on 27 April 1992, we made it clear that we had favoured schemes to collect chlorofluorocarbons for recycling, but had given low priority to "bank" schemes where we consider that industry should be pressed to provide the equipment and to new kerbside schemes pending the outcome of the existing pilot kerbside schemes.

Applications from more than 140 authorities worth more than £31 million in total were received for the £15 million of SCAs available for 1992-93. Allocation of project approvals from the total resources available was determined on the basis of a careful examination of every bid, paying particular attention to the priorities set out in the bidding letter.

Resources for recycling SCAs for 1992-93 are fully committed. We shall write to local authorities by Christmas inviting bids for SCAs for 1993-94 for recycling schemes.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the extent to which charges for recycling credits agreed by waste disposal authorities meet the guidelines of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Maclean: Section 52(1) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 requires a waste disposal authority to pay recycling credits to a waste collection authority in respect of waste retained for recycling of such amounts representing its net saving of expenditure on the disposal of the waste as the waste disposal authority determines. Non-compliance with this duty is a matter for the district auditor.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the charges for recycling credits agreed by each waste disposal authority.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available centrally. Ways in which such information might be collected nationally are currently being considered as part of the Department of the Environment's wider review of waste management statistics.

Ozone-depleting Substances

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times the Government have utilised the powers to prevent emissions of ozone-depleting substances from industrial processes since the passing into law of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Maclean: The Environmental Protection Act (Prescribed Processes and Substances) Regulations 1991 set out the industrial processes and the main substances to be controlled under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

The regulations are enforced by HM inspectorate of pollution and local authorities which are required to ensure that industry uses best available techniques not entailing excessive cost for preventing, or minimising the release of prescribed substances. The substances prescribed for release into the air includes oxides of nitrogen, organic compounds and halogens and their compounds, which are ozone-depleters.

Provisional figures for the first nine months since the regulations came into force show that some 3,000 applications had been received in England and Wales. Details of all these applications are not held centrally.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to introduce a mandatory recovery scheme for the recycling of chlorofluorocarbons.

Mr. Maclean: The Government have already put in place legislation to control the environmentally damaging disposal of controlled waste. In most cases, CFCs become controlled wastes when they are removed from equipment during maintenance or on disposal of equipment containing them. Section 33 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 makes it illegal to dispose of controlled wastes in a manner likely to cause pollution to the environment or harm to human health.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who will be representing his Department at the forthcoming meeting to be held in Geneva between 8 to 17 July to review the working of the Montreal protocol; and what papers or oral submissions his Department will be presenting for consideration at the meeting.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) in which I outlined the United Kingdom and EC's proposals for bringing forward the phase-out of chlorofluorocarbons, carbon tetrachloride, halons and 1,1,1 trichloroethane and for control of hydrochlorofluorocarbons. My Department is being represented by five officials at the Geneva meeting.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to utilise the chlorine loading method when assessing the potential effect of HCFCs on the ozone layer.

Mr. Maclean: The advantages and limitations of the chlorine loading potential method for estimating the impact of ozone-depleting substances were detailed in the 1990 and 1991 reports of the Department's stratospheric ozone review group. The Department will continue to use the most appropriate methods according to the best scientific information available, including chlorine loading potential.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the estimated production and release levels for CFCs, methyl chloraform and halons in the United Kingdom from the present to 1 January 1996 in terms of thousands of tonnes.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the effectiveness of the Government-supported ICI recycling scheme for recovering CFCs.

Mr. Maclean: There are a number of companies in the United Kingdom that offer CFC recycling facilities. It is for the operators of each scheme to determine its effectiveness.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research work has been undertaken by his Department about the atmospheric behaviour of the CFC substitute HFC 134a and how it is likely to be broken down.

Mr. Maclean: The Department supports studies of the atmospheric behaviour and degradation of HFC 134a and other potential CFC substitute compounds under a collaborative programme by the Harwell laboratory and the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. The compound is broken down in the atmosphere by the hydroxyl radical and by reaction with oxygen. The results of the studies will be published, and will improve estimates of the impact of HFC 134a as a greenhouse gas and identify breakdown products which may have a role in lower atmosphere pollution.

Director General of Water Services

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received the report of the Director General of Water Services for 1991.

Mr. Maclean: Yes. The report was placed in the Library of the House on 9 June 1992.

Business Concern, Sheffield

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has given to Sheffield development corporation as to whether Business Concern is to be treated as a separate organisation from the development corporation; from which internal budget heading such activity should be provided; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Department advised Sheffield development corporation that Business Concern should be offered grant support only if it was an independent organisation. Funding has been provided from the budget heading covering support for voluntary organisations.

Relocation

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the difference in cost between moving staff from Marsham street in 1994 rather than 1993; and if he will publish the value for money study carried out on the proposed move to docklands;

(2) what has been the cost, including consultancy fees, of the process of finding alternative accommodation for his Department; and what will be the final cost;

(3) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks), of 9 July, Official Report, column 149, on redundancies arising from the demolition of the Marsham street building, if he will list the non-mobile grades; and if he will estimate the number and total costs of redundancies in each of those grades;

(4) by what date his Department has been recommended to vacate its current premises in Marsham street;

(5) what accommodation is available to relocate his Department on the Government estate;

(6) what estimate has been made of the cost of refurbishing Marsham street so that his Department can remain there;

(7) what estimate has been made of the comparative costs of remaining in Marsham street, moving to another location on the Government estate, moving to another building in Westminster or moving to docklands;

(8) how many buildings of more than 100,000 sq ft are available to rent (a) in Westminster, (b) in the City of London and (c) elsewhere in inner London;

(9) what accommodation other than that in docklands has been or is being considered as a possible location for his Department.

Mr. Howard: On 2 June, I announced, Official Report, column 707, that some 2,000 civil servants in my Department would move to docklands, subject to fully commercial terms giving value for money for the taxpayer. My advisers are continuing their consideration of accommodation in docklands, and further work is being undertaken by consultants and officials in my Department. I will make a further announcement in due course.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households in the network installer area including the Shettleston constituency have benefited from home energy efficiency scheme grants since its inception in 1991.

Mr. Maclean: Within the network installer area which contains the hon. Member's constituency, 4,828 homes have benefited from HEES grant since 1 January 1991.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses have been improved under the home energy efficiency scheme since its inception in 1991 in the network installer area including East Kilbride.

Mr. Maclean: Within the network installer area which contains the hon. Member's constituency, 7,073 homes have benefited from HEES grant since 1 January 1991.

Community Charge

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to advise local authorities to deduct outstanding community tax arrears directly from income support so as to avoid the expense of committal proceedings.

Mr. Robin Squire: It is for individual authorities to decide on the most appropriate method of recovering arrears of community charge and council tax. We believe authorities should consider methods of recovery such as attachment of earnings or deductions from income support in preference to distress as an initial enforcement option; and we have so advised in our practice note, "Recovery and Enforcement of Council Tax".

Greenhouse Gases

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the reasons for his delegation's objection to a side declaration reaffirming targets on greenhouse gases at the recent earth summit meeting.

Mr. Maclean: We believe that international efforts to limit greenhouse gas emissions should concentrate on the United Nations Framework convention on climate change, which the United Kingdom and more than 150 other countries signed during UNCED. The President of the European Community, in signing the convention, made a statement on behalf of the Community and its member states which, amongst other things, reaffirmed the objective for Community carbon dioxide emissions as originally stated in Council conclusions of 29 October 1990. In common with many other countries, we did not consider that other side declarations were appropriate for UNCED, which was the occasion to bring countries together in making environmental commitments.

Sustainability Plan

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment with which organisations he will consult on the establishment of a sustainability plan in the United Kingdom; and when he expects such a plan to be established.

Mr. Maclean: The United Kingdom will consult relevant non-governmental, business, scientific and local government organisations on the United Kingdom's national report to the Sustainable Development Commission, which we aim to make in 1993.

Fair Rents

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many objections there were to rent officers' registrations of fair rents in London in (a) 1988, (b) 1989, (c) 1990 and (d) 1991; and what were staffing levels for the processing of these cases in each of these years.

Mr. Baldry: Objections by landlords or tenants to fair rents registered by London rent officers are considered by independent rent assessment committees drawn from the London rent assessment panel. The number of such cases received by the panel and the average staffing level of the panel's secretariat during the years in question were as follows:

Year	Cases received	Average number of staff
1988	6,121	39
1989	4,656	37
1990	4,887	35
1991	7,944	35

During the first six months of 1992 the panel received 3,728 cases and there were 39 staff in post at 30 June 1992.

Sulphur Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the amount of sulphur dioxide emissions monitored from power stations at (a) Ince in Cheshire and (b) Richborough in Kent in each year since 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The amount of sulphur dioxide in tonnes emitted from the power stations at Ince in Cheshire and Richborough in Kent for each year since 1988 was as follows:

	Ince	Richborough
1989	3,954	485
1990	6,999	3,926
1991	8,207	15,186

Both stations have permission from Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution to burn limited amounts of orimulsion under legislation which preceded the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Future operations at these power stations will require authorisation from HMIP under the 1990 Act. PowerGen applied for authorisation in April 1991. The applications are the subject of an appeal to my right hon. and learned Friend about commercial confidentiality. They cannot be determined until after the appeal decision, which will be made as soon as possible.

Orimulsion

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement regarding the proposed burning of orimulsion at Pembroke power station.

Mr. Maclean: National Power has applied for an authorisation under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to burn orimulsion at its Pembroke power station. This application is currently being considered by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, and it would not be appropriate for me to comment further at this stage.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether power stations in the United Kingdom currently allowed to burn orimulsion are required to have flue gas desulphurisation equipment; whether this equipment will be required of power plants requesting permission to burn orimulsion in future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Two power stations, Ince in Cheshire and Richborough in Kent, operated by PowerGen are allowed to burn limited amounts of orimulsion under the legislative provisions which preceded the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Neither is required to have flue gas desulphurisation equipment.

Applications under the 1990 Act have been made to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution for these stations and for two others operated by National Power, at Pembroke in Wales and Padiham in Lancashire, and are being considered. In determining these applications, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will consider the environmental implications of releases from the processes to all three media: air, water and land. In view of my right hon. and learned Friend's appellate role it would not be appropriate for me to comment further.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what submissions have been made to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution as to the amount of orimulsion expressed in (a) tonnes and (b) monetary value that will be used at Pembroke power station if permission is granted.

Mr. Maclean: (a) 3,760 kilo tonnes per annum; (b) No submissions have been made as to value other than a general comment that it would be linked to a basket of international coal prices.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria will be evaluated by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in coming to a decision regarding the burning of orimulsion at Pembroke power station; whether that decision is subject to appeal and within what length of time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The criteria used by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in its determination of an application are set out in the Environmental Protection Act 1990, and related statutory instruments, and span a variety of subject areas.

The recipient of an authorisation under the Environmental Protection Act may appeal to the Secretary of State within a period of six months from the date of issue.

Bearing in mind that Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has yet to determine the application for Pembroke power station, I have no plans to make a statement at this time.

Environmental Information

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment since 1 March (a) what new classes of environmental information held by his Department have been made available to the public, (b) what new rights to participate in the decision-making process on environmental issues have been extended by his Department to the public and (c) what new rights to seek remedies in the event of breach of environmental laws or failure to provide environmental services have been introduced by his Department for the public.

Mr. Maclean: The booklet "Green Rights and Responsibilities", published in February, summarised the current environmental rights and responsibilities of individuals. As was announced following the Prime Minister's seminar on 19 June, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State proposes to work with local government to develop a charter for local authority environment services, and in doing so he will review those rights.

Acid Rain

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much acid rain was monitored in each year from 1988 to 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The mean concentrations of the contaminants, which contribute to the acidity of rain across the United Kingdom, from 1988 to 1991 are as follows:

Mean precipitation concentration, μeq/l

Contaminant	1988	1989	1990	1991
Hydrogen ion	27·4	23·9	19·6	24·0
Ammonium	24·3	26·5	22·8	29·4
Chloride (non-marine)	7·2	4·3	4·8	1·3
Sulphate (non-marine)	40·6	37·07	31·8	38·5
Nitrate	21·4	21·3	17·0	22·5

Major reductions are anticipated in rain concentrations of sulphate and nitrate in future years following reductions in SO_2 and NO_x emissions secured through the implementation of the European Communities large combustion plants directive and directives on vehicle exhaust emissions.

Dr. David Slater

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department was informed of the shareholding of Dr. David Slater in DNV Technica; what consideration was given to possible conflict of interest in (a) appointing Dr. Slater as chief inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and (b) awarding a contract to DNV Technica by single tender in August 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Dr. Slater has never held shares in DNV Technica. His interests in the predecessor company Technica Ltd., of which he was a full-time director, were fully disclosed to the Department when he applied for the post of chief inspector of HMIP early in 1991. He made clear in the course of the recruitment process that if he was successful he would sever all connection with Technica Ltd. immediately. As soon as he was declared successful he accordingly divested himself of all interests in Technica Ltd. on 27 March 1991, before taking up his appointment as chief inspector on 1 May 1991.

Technica Ltd. was subsequently purchased by DNV and reconstituted as a wholly owned subsidiary, DNV Technica.

The circumstances of the award of a contract by the Department to DNV Technica in August 1991 were described in my answer to the hon. Member on 2 June at column 388. That contract was awarded by a different part of the Department and HMIP was not involved or consulted in any way about it. HMIP has never let any contracts to DNV Technica.

Telecommunications

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to introduce amendments to part 24 of schedule 2 to the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988 and to publish the draft revised planning policy guidance note on telecommunications.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. and learned Friend and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales have today published a draft revision of planning policy guidance—PPG—note 8, "Telecommunications", for public consultation, and propose to lay before Parliament shortly amendments to part 24 of schedule 2 to the GDO. The amendments and the guidance take account of the public response to the consultation paper on telecommunications, which was issued in the autumn last year.

Modern telecommunications are an essential and beneficial element in the life of the local community and in the national economy. They are good for business; they attract new firms to an area and are equally important for broadcasting and new forms of employment. They can enrich life at home and offer new choices in education and entertainment, in shopping and banking. Through facilitation of homeworking, telecommunications can benefit the environment through reducing the need to travel, and hence by reducing vehicle emissions of carbon dioxide and other pollutants. Planning policy must not only provide for the continued growth of such services but also ensure that other developments do not impede the performance of current broadcasting and telecommunications services.

The amendments to the GDO will take into account the rapid growth of the telecommunications industry and technology over the last few years. We recognise the need for operators to be able to provide an efficient and competitive service. The amendments will therefore seek to satisfy the needs of the telecommunications industry by reducing a number of current planning constraints, while at the same time allowing planning authorities sufficient control to protect amenity from serious damage.

The main deregulatory changes are the granting of permitted development rights, for the first time, for apparatus on buildings below 15 m and for radio equipment housing, subject to given limits, and the removal of the limit of two antennas on ground-based radio masts. However, there will be no relaxation of controls in designated areas, such as conservation areas and areas of outstanding natural beauty.

These changes would be complemented by a determination procedure in respect of masts, radio equipment housing and public callboxes. Before such apparatus can be installed under permitted development rights, the code system operator will have to apply to the local planning authority for a determination as to whether the prior approval of the authority will be required to the details of the siting and appearance of the apparatus.

The installation will be able to go ahead after 28 days from the authority's receipt of the application according to the submitted or agreed details, unless the authority refuses to grant prior approval within that period. There can be no grounds for refusal under this provision other than siting or appearance; the permitted development right itself cannot be taken away.

The 28-day time limit is the same as which now applies to the current notification procedure under schedule 4 to licences issued under the Telecommunications Act 1984. The Secretary of State expects the greater majority of installations will be able to go ahead, as they do now, without the planning authority needing to intervene, and that intervention should only take place to prevent serious impact on amenity. Early consultation between operators and local planning authorities should help to ensure that the details of siting and appearance are acceptable.

The draft revised PPG updates the current PPG on telecommunications and explains the GDO regulations governing code system operators—part 24—and the location of satellite television and other antenna—parts 1 and 25. It provides guidance to planning authorities on the importance of development plans in providing for telecommunications development, and on the planning considerations that should be taken into account in their development control functions. Early consultation and sufficient information are both important for proper planning decisions. The guidance continues to stress the importance for operators to share masts and buildings wherever practicable, and for planning authorities to ensure that large new buildings do not create radio interference.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish his Department's MINIS 13 documents.

Mr. Howard: I am today publishing the MINIS 13 documents and a set has been placed in the Library.

Opencast Coal Mining

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has yet reached a decision on whether to review the planning guidelines on opencast coal in minerals planning guidance—MPG—3; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My Department and the Welsh Office have recently completed a wide-ranging consultation exercise on the practical operation of the planning guidelines for opencast coal in MPG3. Copies of a summary of the responses have been placed in the Library.

The Government are concerned to ensure that the highest environmental standards apply to the minerals industry generally. Whilst I am satisfied that the guidelines in MPG3 have generally worked well, in the light of the responses to consultation, I have concluded that the guidelines will need revision to reflect changes in the legislative and policy framework since 1988. In addition, the Government announced on 9 March their intention to bring forward amendments to the General Development Order 1988, to revise British Coal's permitted development rights for underground working and opencast coal exploration. I believe that it would be right for revised guidelines to deal with all aspects of coal extraction, including deep-mined coal and the disposal of colliery spoil. I therefore propose to bring forward draft revised planning guidelines on coal extraction generally for public consultation in the autumn.

Housing Management

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for developing pilot schemes for compulsory competitive tendering of housing management; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Compulsory competitive tendering for housing management can make a major contribution to improving the service provided by local authorities to their tenants, and it is therefore important that central and local government co-operate closely in developing effective procedures. I have already invited six local authorities, Newham, Westminster, Rochdale, Derby, East Staffordshire and Mid Suffolk, to be pilot authorities. My Department will be discussing with the authorities over the coming months how this project should be carried forward. I expect to invite further authorities to participate in due course.

Mole Valley District Council

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what use he intends to make of his sanction powers under part I of the Local Government Act 1988 in relation to Mole Valley district council.

Mr. Robin Squire: On 6 February 1992, my right hon. and learned Friend served two notices under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988 on Mole Valley district council, setting out his view that in 1991-92 the authority had acted anti-competitively in carrying out work falling within the defined activities described in section 2(2)(f) and (ee) of the Act—ground maintenance work and the management of sport and leisure facilities respectively.

My right hon. and learned Friend has now considered the responses which the authority has made to the section 13 notices, but he remains of the opinion that the authority acted in an anti-competitive manner in awarding this work to its own work force. He has concluded that the authority's action is such as to justify further use of sanction powers. He has therefore today made two directions under section 14 of the 1988 Act. The effect of the direction given in relation to ground maintenance work is to prohibit the authority from carrying out the work in question beyond 1 July 1993. The direction given in respect of the management of sport and leisure work permits the authority's direct service organisation to bid for the work in a retendering exercise to be completed by 1 July 1993, but requires the authority to seek the Secretary of State's consent if they propose that their in-house work force should carry out the work beyond that date.

Endangered Species

Mr. Efletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made on the recommendation from the Joint Nature Conservation Committee that a number of species of endangered animals and plants should be added to schedules 5 and 8 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Following recommendations made by the Joint Nature Conservation Committee and consultation with other bodies, I have decided that we should add the following species of animals to schedule 5—protected animals—of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and also amend schedule 8—protected plants—of that Act as follows:

Animals to be added to Schedule 5

3 species of beetle (Graphoderus zonatus, Hypebaeus flavipes and paracymus aeneus)
Lesser silver water beetle
Mire pill beetle
High brown fritillary butterfly (already partially protected)
Northern hatchet shell
Lagoon snail
De Folin's snail
Tentacled lagoon worm
Sussex emerald moth
Pink sea fan
Lagoon sea slug
Sturgeon

Plants to be added to Schedule 8

Blackwort
Snow caloplaca
Tree catapyrenium
Laurer's catillaria
Slender centaury
Upright mountain cladonia
Meadow clary
Lizard crystalwrt
Broad leaved cudweed
Shore dock
Marsh earwort
Norfolk flapwort
Pointed frostwort
Dune gentian
Early gentian
Blunt leaved grimmia
Elm gyalecta
Northroe hawkweed
Shetland hawkweed
Weakleaved hawkweed
Churchyard lecanactis
Tarn lecanora
Copper lecidea
Arctic kidney lichen
Ciliate strap lichen
Coralloid rosette lichen
Earlobed dog lichen
Forked hair lichen
Golden hair lichen
Orange fruited elm lichen
River jolly lichen
Scaly breck lichen
Stary breck lichen
Lindenberg's leafy liverwort
Alpine copper moss
Baltic bog moss
Blue dew moss
Blunt leaved bristle moss
Bright green cave moss

Cordate beard moss
Cornish path moss
Derbyshire feather moss
Dune thread moss
Glaucous beard moss
Green shield moss
Hair silk moss
Large yellow feather moss
Multifruited river moss
Millimetre moss
Knothole moss
Nowell's limestone moss
Rigid apple moss
Round leaved feather moss
Schlricher's thread moss
Triangular pygmy moss
Vaucher's feather moss
Welsh mudwort
Stalked orache
Lapland marsh orchid
Caledonia pannaria
New Forest parmelia
Oil stain parmentaria
Perfoliate penny cress
Alpine moss pertusaria
Southern grey physcia
Ground pine
Ragged pseudocyphellaria
Rusty alpine psora
Spiked rampion
Western rustwort
Serpentine solenopsora
Bearded stonewort
Turpswort

Plants to be deleted from Schedule 8

Recurved sea lavender
St. David's sea lavender
Purple spurge

I will be placing an order before Parliament shortly which will bring these changes into effect. Further consideration is being given to three other recommendations made by the JNCC concerning the giant goby, the basking shark and the wild cat hybrid.

Access to Information

Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the responses received to the Government's consultation paper on proposals for implementation of EC directive 90/313/EC on the freedom of access to information on the environment.

Mr. Maclean: I have today placed copies of responses in my Department's library. A list of respondents has also been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

My Department is carefully considering the responses received. We will consult widely on the proposed regulations to implement the directive and on the guidance we are preparing to accompany the regulations.

Tyne and Wear Development Corporation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of jobs created by Tyne and Wear development corporation, for each year since 1988, distinguishing (a) permanent new jobs, (b) permanent jobs relocated from (i) within the city of Sunderland boundary, (ii) the northern region and (iii) elsewhere, (c) temporary jobs in (x) construction and related trades and (y) other trades on the development schemes at (1) Hylton Riverside, (2) former Southwick shipyard, (3) North Dock, (4) North Sands, (5) St. Peters way, (6) Hylton park (excluding (1) and (2)), (7) Sunderland forge and (8) Deptford Riverside.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 13 July 1992]: The attached table provides the information requested under sections (a) and (c) of the question.

Of the 319 permanent new jobs in the specified areas, 84 were from expansion within Sunderland city council administrative area, 37 were created as a result of expansion from within the northern region and 198 as a result of inward investment from outside the region. A detailed breakdown of this information by site is not available.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which traditional industries on Wearside have received assistance from Tyne and Wear development corporation in each year from 1988 to the present; and if he will make a statement on the overall level of support provided.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 13 July 1992]: In the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1992 Tyne and Wear development corporation provided £2,983,749 in support to industry on Wearside. The breakdown between financial years is as follows:

1988-89	22,714
1989-90	673,357
1990-91	825,197
1991-92	1,642,480

This support has been given to a range of different industries on Wearside.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names of all companies which have tenancies at the Tyne and Wear development corporation development scheme at Hylton riverside, the total number of employees with each company indicating (a) permanent new jobs created, (b) relocated jobs and (c) temporary jobs since these companies became tenants.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 13 July 1992]: The table lists companies operating from Hylton riverside, which have received financial assistance from Tyne and Wear development corporation.

	Total employers	Permanent new jobs	Relocated jobs	Temporary jobs
J. L. Automation	8	6	2	—
Sokkisha	7	7	0	—
Coniston Computers	23	10	13	—
Regional Tech Centre	13	7	6	—
Applied Imaging	73	31	42	—

In addition three other firms, not in receipt of financial assistance from Tyne and Wear development corporation, are operating from Hylton riverside. These firms provide approximately 25 jobs in total.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all members of the board of Tyne and Wear development corporation giving (a) annual remuneration of each position, (b) period of office of each position, (c) body, company or organisation represented, (d) town, city or village of residence of each office holder and (e) the office held by each office holder.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 13 July 1992]: The current members of the board of Tyne and Wear development corporation and the date of expiry of their appointments are as follows:

Name and office	Date of expiry of appointment
Paul Nicholson—Chairman	14 May 1993
John Ward OBE—Deputy Chairman	14 May 1993
Graeme Anderson CBE	14 May 1993
John Barnsley	14 May 1993
Eric Bramfitt	6 November 1993
Tony Flynn	6 November 1993
Ian Gordon OBE	14 May 1993
Ian Gibson OBE	14 May 1993
Professor Patsy Healy	6 November 1993
Dr. Ralph Iley	14 May 1993
Joe L. Mills	14 May 1993
Albert Moore OBE	14 May 1993
Frank Sharratt	14 May 1993

Details of remuneration are given in the development corporation's annual report for 1990-91, which is held in the Library of the House. It is not the convention to reveal the places of residence of individual board members.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names, position and salary of all senior executives employed by Tyne and Wear development corporation and indicate which executives are seconded, whether from government or other bodies, and the period of time of each secondee.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 13 July 1992]: The table below shows the names, positions and salary ranges of the chief executive and second-tier officers of Tyne and Wear development corporation.

Name and position	Salary band
Chief Executive—Alastair Balls	Within salary band £45,000 to £50,000
Director of Marketing and Business Development (Deputy Chief Executive) —Gordon Ramsey	Individual salary bands within the range £39,000 to £47,000
Director of Development—John Scally
Director of Operations—Tom Macpherson
Director of Finance—Neil Mundy

The chief executive is seconded from Government service. The current secondment period ends in July 1993.

Wild Birds

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will provide a complete list of the numbers of licences granted for the taking of birds of prey from the wild and the numbers of birds of prey taken under such licences, by species in each case, for each of the last five years;

(2) how many quarry licences for falconry were issued in each of the last five years; and what quarry species were involved;

(3) by species of avian predator, and for each of the last five years, what was the number of licences granted for taking and the number of birds so taken from the wild;

(4) how many licences for taking wild peregrine falcons have been issued in each of the last five years;

(5) what was the number of falconry licences issued during each of the last five years, giving the categories and numbers of prey species involved.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 13 July 1992]: Details of these licences are given in the United Kingdom's annual derogation reports to the European Commission under the terms of the EC directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds. Copies of each report for the years 1987 to 1991 have been placed in the Library of the House.

Rural Development

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what Government support programmes or finance are available to rural development areas; and what are the basic services that his Department treats as being necessary for assessing grants to rural development areas.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 July 1992]: In addition to the wide range of national and regional assistance which is available from Government Departments the rural development areas receive additional assistance from the Rural Development Commission which is sponsored by my Department. This includes the provision of workspace, grants for the conversion of redundant buildings, a business advice service, grants and loans for small rural businesses and support for community groups and projects. Grant applications are assessed on their merits, taking into account the needs of the area, the rules of the grant scheme and the views of funding partners.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority which contains a rural development area the level of (a) rural development programme, (b) rural housing programme and (c) rural transport development fund for each year from 1987-88 at current prices and at 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 July 1992]: The detailed information requested on the rural development programmes and the rural transport development fund could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the total sum spent on these is as follows:

	At 1992-93 prices	At 1987-88 prices
Rural Development Programme
1987-88	19,831	14,344
1988-89	20,734	14,997
1989-90	18,232	13,187
1990-91	17,344	12,545
1991-92	11,292	8,168
Rural Transport Development Programme
1987-88	796	576
1988-89	624	451
1989-90	711	515
1990-91	290	209
1991-92	413	299

The rural housing programme has been in operation only since 1991-92. Its schedule of allocations for the first two years with a break-down by local authority can be found in the Library of this House.

Environment Agency

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to establish an environment agency.

27. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to introduce legislation to establish an environmental protection agency.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to introduce legislation to enable the creation of the environmental agency.

Mr. Howard: The Prime Minister announced last year that the Government had decided to set up a new, independent environment agency for environmental protection and enhancement. We issued a public consultation paper on our proposals and we have been considering the submissions made to us.

The consultation exercise showed that there is widespread support for our proposal to establish a single agency to unify the key regulatory pollution control functions affecting air, land and water. In creating this body, we have been concerned to ensure that there is no weakening in the protection and effective management of the water environment as represented by the well-proven concept of integrated river basin management.

We have therefore decided that the agency should bring together all the functions of the National Rivers Authority, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the waste regulation functions of local authorities to form an integrated body.

The agency will cover England and Wales. The Government do not intend to make any changes in existing ministerial policy responsibilities including those of my right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Wales for the activities to be carried out by the environment agency. The agency will report on its activities in Wales to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, and the Government will be considering further the detailed arrangements that will be needed to ensure an appropriate agency presence in Wales. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will be making an announcement in due course about the arrangements for Scotland.

We propose that local authorities should retain their present responsibility for controlling air pollution from the less polluting industrial processes. However, we shall ensure that close liaison is achieved and maintained between the agency and local authorities in the implementation of part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

In the light of the comments received, we have decided that the distinctive role of the drinking water inspectorate in protecting the health and safety of water consumers should be maintained and its independence enhanced. We are considering how best to do this. It will not, therefore, transfer from my Department to the environment agency.

The agency will be a substantial new public body responsible for major expenditure and resources. We will be looking for ways to ensure that it provides effective protection to the environment, and good value for money.

We are now proceeding with drafting the necessary legislation to create the agency and define its scope. The Government intend to establish the new body as soon as possible. Legislation will therefore be introduced at the earliest opportunity.

Written Answers to Questions

TRANSPORT

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Norris: The Government continue to place a high priority on helping small businesses through improvements to the business climate, through deregulation and through specific programmes of support and assistance. One of the aims of our transport policy is to provide the right infrastructure so that large and small businesses can operate effectively. Specific measures by my Department which have helped small business include the deregulation of local bus services. We expect the completion of the single market in aviation, agreed last month, to extend the benefits of a liberal aviation market, such as lower fares and a choice of services, already enjoyed by consumers in the United Kingdom, to the whole of the EC. This will benefit businesses as users of air services as well as offering increased opportunities to enter EC markets as operators. The abolition of the dock labour scheme has increased competition between ports and in many of them productivity has grown considerably.

A65 Ilkley Bypass

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a further announcement about the proposed A65 Ilkley bypass.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I hope to be in a position to make a further announcement on the development of this scheme before the end of year.

Noise

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what legislation, regulations or guidelines exist to limit the impact of (a) aircraft noise, (b) vehicle noise or (c) other noise pollution.

Mr. Norris: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to introduce regulations to control aircraft noise;

(2) what responses he has received from Northern Ireland-based individuals or organisations in response to the consultation paper "Control of Aircraft Noise".

Mr. Norris: The consultation paper "Control of Aircraft Noise" was published last August. More than 550 responses have been received including one from Northern Ireland. The responses are being carefully considered and an announcement of conclusions will be made in due course.

The United Kingdom has supported international agreements to phase out of operation older, noisier subsonic civil jet aircraft certificated to "chapter 2" standards. These aircraft will be phased out between 1995 and 2002 and regulations to that effect will be introduced in due course.

Civil Servants (Shareholdings)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance, other than the "Civil Service Pay and Conditions of Service Code" and the "Establishment Officers' Guide", his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Guidance for members of the Department and its executive agencies is in the departmental staff handbook. Staff are asked to consult with the Department's personnel management directorate if they are in any doubt about the propriety of holding shares.

In the last five years eight members of staff have reported that they have shareholdings.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Norris: This information is set out in the Department's management plan for 1992-95.

Transpennine Roads Study

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 13 July, Official Report, column 413, about the transpennine roads study, when he intends to make a substantive reply to the second part of that question relating to publication of the study.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: As soon as possible.

Marchioness-Bowbelle Collision

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of the action he has taken on each of the recommendations contained in the marine accident investigation report of July 1990 into the collision between the Marchioness and the Bowbelle.

Mr. Norris: One of the recommendations in the Hayes report on river safety, announced by the Secretary of State for Transport on 7 July, was that the Department should publish annually an account of the progress made on the implementation of recommendations made after all major disasters. The Department accepted this recommendation.

There were 27 recommendations in the MAIB final report on the collision between the Marchioness and the Bowebelle. Action has been completed in respect of recommendations 1, 2, 3, 4(b), 6-14 inclusive, 14, 16, 18, 19, 21, 23, 25, 26 and 27. Action will be completed this year in respect of recommendations 4(a), 5, 15, 17, 20 and 24. Further consideration is being given to recommendation 22. Full details have been placed in the Library of the House.

Motorway Sound Barriers

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to provide effective modern sound barriers to reduce the noise of the new feeder roads off the M25 between the M3 and M4 junctions.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Noise barriers are proposed at a number of locations adjacent to the proposed new link roads between junctions 12 and 15 of the M25. The type of barrier to be used has not yet been decided. A number of possible options are being considered.

Air Accidents

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what figures his Department has relating to the number of accident reports submitted involving (a) helicopters and (b) fixed wing aircrafts in British airspace over the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: In the past 10 years the Department's air accidents investigation branch has submitted a total of 73 formal investigation reports to the Secretary of State. Forty-seven of those reports were investigations into accidents to fixed-wing aircraft; 26 related to helicopter accidents.

North Devon Link Road

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will authorise 60 mph speed restriction signs to be painted on the surface of the A361 north Devon link road.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No, but I am proposing other steps to encourage compliance with the speed limit. I will write to the hon. Member.

Trailers

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions are laid down regarding the separate registration of towing vehicles and their trailers; and what exceptions exist for nuclear weapons convoys.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Motor vehicles for civilian use are registered by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency under the Vehicles (Excise) Act 1971. This does not extend to trailers. Military vehicles are registered by the Ministry of Defence. I am not aware of any exceptions applying to military vehicles in nuclear weapons convoys.

Cross-Thames Rail Link

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the north-south rail link across the River Thames in south-east London.

Mr. Norris: The report on the east London rail study phase 2, commissioned by London Transport and the London Docklands development corporation and published earlier this year, identified a number of possible extensions to the rail network including some that would cross the Thames. I understand that further work is being undertaken on certain of the options identified.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contribution he is seeking from the private sector for construction of the east London river crossing.

Mr. Norris: It is not our policy to seek contributions to the construction of strategic trunk road schemes in my Department's programme except in cases where additional traffic generated by new private development would cause us to provide facilities which are more extensive, or earlier, than otherwise needed.

The east London river crossing was included in the national programme in 1979, to complete the extension of the north circular road to the A2 as part of a coherent network for longer distance traffic within London. No additional facilities have been included in the plans since then to deal with specific development proposals and so no contributions are currently being sought from the private sector.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current estimated cost of building the east London river crossing.

Mr. Norris: The total estimated cost at 1989 prices is about £300 million.

London Ring Rail

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from S. B. Tietz and Partners on proposals for the London ring rail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend has just received a copy of the proposals for a London ring rail from S. B. Tietz and Partners and we shall reply to them shortly.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the contribution to decongestion in central London that the Jubilee line extension will make.

Mr. Norris: In net present value terms, at mid-1991 discounted to 1991, the road and rail decongestion benefits of the Jubilee line extension would be around £230 million and £275 million respectively.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the estimated cost of extending further the proposed Jubilee line extension to Woolwich and Thamesmead.

Mr. Norris: London Transport has recently estimated that it would cost around £300 million or £330 million to extend the Jubilee line to Woolwich Arsenal taking a route north of the Royal Victoria dock, or £370 million taking a route south of the Royal Victoria dock. Extending beyond Woolwich Arsenal to Thamesmead would cost an estimated £160 million more. All estimates are in mid-1990 prices.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish details of the cost benefit analysis carried out on the proposals to extend the Jubilee line (a) to docklands and Greenwich peninsula and (b) further to Woolwich and Thamesmead.

Mr. Norris: (a) The results, in present value terms, of a recent cost benefit analysis of the proposed Jubilee line extension from Green Park to Stratford, taking into account the quantifiable benefits conventionally used in the appraisal of rail transport schemes, are given in the table.

Mid 1991 prices discounted to 1991

	£ million
Capital costs	−1,505
Operating cost	−180
Additional revenue	340
Funding gap	−1,345
Public transport user benefits	1,025
Road user benefits	230
Net benefit	−90
Benefit:cost ratio	0·95:1

(b) No recent cost-benefit analysis has been carried out in respect of possible further extensions of the Jubilee line to Woolwich and Thamesmead. At the time of the east London rail study, published July 1989, however, it was clear that the costs of such extensions would far exceed the benefits.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Detling to Malling section of British Rail's previous southerly route for the channel tunnel rail link from which safeguarding has now been withdrawn is outside the preferred corridor referred to in his answer to the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling of 9 June, Official Report, column 116.

Mr. Freeman: The Detling to Halling section of the originally safeguarded route was withdrawn on 5 November 1991 by the then Secretary of State because there was no common agreement to the west of Detling between the Ove Arup preferred route and that of British Rail. The Government preferred the Ove Arup approach which involves crossing the Thames near Dartford and arriving at King's Cross via Stratford. The Government have stated that the route indicated on the maps circulated last year was on the line of that put forward by Ove Arup, but have never suggested that the precise Ove Arup alignment could or should be definitive. West of Detling tal,the Government are committed to a preferred route corridor and not a specific safeguardable line. British Rail are considering carefully the cost, environmental and engineering implications of the route and will present to Ministers later this year any proposed diversions from this base reference. Any such diversions would have to be justified and in due course, if accepted, be subject to public consultations and planning approval.

Railway Pensions

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give an assurance that when employees of British Rail transfer with their jobs to a new owner on privatisation their future pension entitlements will be no less than had they stayed as employees of British Rail.

Mr. Freeman: An assurance on pensions is given at paragraph 87 of the White Paper "New Opportunities for the Railways", Cm 2012, which was published on 14 July.

London Underground

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the inner London parliamentary constituencies which do not have a London Underground station; and what plans he has to remedy this.

Mr. Norris: Of the 30 inner London parliamentary constituencies, nine do not contain a London Underground station. These are:

Greenwich	Lewisham, East
Woolwich	Lewisham, West
Eltham	Dulwich
Hackney, South and Shoreditch	Peckham
Streatham

The location of parliamentary boundaries is not a factor taken into account by London Underground when putting together their investment programme. However, there are several schemes under consideration by LUL which would have the effect of increasing the number of parliamentary constituencies served by the underground.

Lorry Weights

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether, under the Maastricht treaty, decisions to increase maximum lorry weights would be taken by unanimous decision or by qualified majority voting.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The existing legal provision for decisions relating to a common transport policy normally to be taken by qualified majority voting is not affected by the Maastricht treaty.

River Safety

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, following the public reaction to the report of the Hayes committee on river safety and any representations made to him, he will consider publishing a Green Paper reviewing safety on rivers and waterways, other than the tidal Thames, and the ways in which safety can be improved thereon, including consideration that the statutory duty for co-ordinating the safety requirements become the specific responsibility of the relevant navigation authority.

Mr. Norris: As my right hon. Friend announced on 7 July, he is setting up district marine safety committees to review in each of their areas the way in which responsibilities for safety, rescue and accident prevention are currently distributed. Their remit includes safety on rivers and waterways. They will consider ways in which safety can be improved and ensure that improvements are implemented and sustained. It would not be appropriate to prescribe particular solutions at this stage; we intend that the proposals should come from the individual committees and therefore reflect the circumstances of their area.

"Going Round in Circles"

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement concerning his Department's response to the proposals contained in the publication, "Going Round in Circles", published by the Association of London Authorities in December 1991.

Mr. Norris: I have just received the publication to which the hon. Member refers, and I will be considering its contents.

Plutonium (Road Transport)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the procedures for informing the local public of possible health risks associated with the accidental dispersal of radioactive plutonium in the event of a road transportation accident.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Information will be given by the local authorities on advice from the emergency services.

Crown Estate

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the Crown Estate Commissioners in order to discuss those matters over which they control rights of public access and which affect movements of commercial vehicles and public transport.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend has had no such meetings.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider introducing legislation to remove ancient rights of ferry from the Crown Estate Commissioners where this affects any public ferry service.

Mr. Norris: No.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek the agreement of the Crown Estate Commissioners to consult his Department and the relevant local authorities prior to them ordering a cessation of any ferry service over which they exercise ancient rights of ferry.

Mr. Norris: The terms under which the Crown Estate Commissioners grant or withdraw rights to operate ferry services are commercial matters between the commissioners and the ferry operators concerned. This Department has no locus to intervene.

Disability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking during the Government's presidency of the Council of Ministers to promote EC legislation on making public transport accessible to disabled people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: My Department is committed to promoting and encouraging improved access to public transport for people with disabilities. We are working closely with disabled people as consumers and with the transport industries on the most effective way forward.

The scope for EC action is limited by the subsidiarity principle, in so far as this does not apply, the Government will take forward measures to assist disabled people during the United Kingdom presidency.

Road Maintenance

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what records his Department keeps of the cost of maintenance and repairs for individual sections of motorway and trunk road.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: My Department keeps extensive records of the cost of maintenance and repairs; these costs are being progressively entered into, and retained on, a number of computerised systems, so that information can be extracted for individual sections as required.

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what records his Department keeps of the historic maintenance requirements of different forms of motorway and trunk road construction.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: My Department keeps extensive maintenance records. These are used, inter alia, to ensure that the standards required of new construction reflect current needs and accord with minimum whole-life costs.

It is a requirement under all major new construction and maintenance schemes for records of construction known as "as built drawings" to be recorded. Steps are under way to computerise these records.

Rail White Paper

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received since the publication of his White Paper on British Rail.

Mr. Freeman: None.

Train Failures

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what claims British Rail has against the manufacturers of the 225 trains for technical failure while in service.

Mr. Freeman: British Rail is ensuring that the manufacturer of the InterCity 225 trains complies with the terms of the contracts, which include warranty protections.

MoT Tests

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what instructions he issues as to whether an MoT rejection arising from a particular vehicle component can be reissued for different reasons once the rectification work has been undertaken.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle [holding answer 15 July 1992]: If a vehicle fails its test on what are classed minor items—for example, horn, indicators, headlamp aim, lamps, rear reflectors, seat belts, but not anchorages, windscreen washers and wipers, emissions—and providing the vehicle is brought back repaired to the station by the end of the next working day only the failure items are retested. However, if the vehicle is failed for other reasons and is brought back repaired regardless of when it is represented the vehicle must undergo another complete MoT test. It is possible that other defects may have occurred in the interim and would subsequently merit another refusal being issued. It is also possible that a retested vehicle may fail if a repaired component still does not meet the required standard.

A565-M57 Link Road

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will confirm the date of the public inquiry into Sefton borough council's proposal to build a link road between the A565 trunk road at Ince Blundell and the M57 motorway at Switch Island.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.
I will write to my hon. Friend.

PRIME MINISTER

EC Expenditure

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if he will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the level of expenditure of the EC.

The Prime Minister: Yes. It was agreed by the European Council at Lisbon on 26 and 27 June 1992 that when the Council met again at Edinburgh it would address the Community's finances for 1993 and subsequent years.

Whaling

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Prime Minister, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 13 July, what response he received when he discussed the hunting of minke whales and the International Whaling Commission with the Prime Minister of Japan; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Japanese Prime Minister noted the concerns that I expressed to him. Mr. Miyazawa and the Japanese Government are well aware of the considerable opposition in this country to whaling.

Poland

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister when the ratification process of the association agreement between the European Communities and the Republic of Poland will be completed; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The association agreement will be concluded between the Republic of Poland, the European Community and its member states. It therefore requires ratification by the Parliaments of member states and the Polish Parliament. The European Parliament must also give its assent. I hope that these procedures can be completed quickly.

Crown Estate

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he will introduce legislation to bring the administration of the Crown estate within a Government Department and subject to Ministerial responsibility.

The Prime Minister: No. The Crown estate is administered by the Crown Estate Commissioners under the terms of the Crown Estate Act 1961.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he is consulted on the appointment of the Crown Estate Commissioners.

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister when a Government Minister last met the chairman or members of the Crown Estate Commission in order to discuss the administration of the Crown estate.

The Prime Minister: The Chancellor of the Exchequer met Lord Mansfield, the First Crown Estate Commissioner, to discuss the Crown estate's performance and long-term plans, on Wednesday 10 July 1991.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister in what circumstances the Crown Estate Commission is liable to pay the uniform business rate on property and estates it administers.

The Prime Minister: Commercial tenants of the Crown Estate Commissioners are liable to pay the uniform business rate in the usual way. Where the Crown estate occupies buildings for its own employees, the commissioners make a contribution in lieu of business rates to the Inland Revenue Crown property unit. The level of the rate is determined by the valuation office.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Sims: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the total amount paid in grants by Government Departments to voluntary bodies during the financial year 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Government funding to voluntary organisations in 1990-91 amounted to £2,680 million. Of this, £2,058 million was payments to voluntary housing associations; £150 million was payments under major employment and training schemes; and £472 million went to support provision of services and a wide range ofactivities and projects by a variety of voluntary organisations. This last figure, which represents the amount paid directly by Government funding to voluntary organisations, shows that direct Government funding of the voluntary sector increased in cash terms by 26·5 per cent.—16·6 per cent. in real terms—over the level of provision in 1989-90. In the period between 1979-80 and 1990-91, the level of the Government's support for voluntary bodies rose in real terms by 149·5 per cent., an increase in cash terms of 542·25 per cent.

The amount spent under individual departmental programmes was as follows:

I am placing in the Library of the House a list of voluntary bodies funded by the Government in 1990-91 other than those funded under youth training and employment training, housing programmes and the urban programme or via non-departmental public bodies. Other recent publications about the relationship between Government and the voluntary sector already placed in the Library include "The Individual and the Community: The Role of the Voluntary Sector", and a leaflet entitled "Government and Voluntary Organisations Support and Partnership". Copies of these publications can be obtained from the voluntary services unit, Home Office, Room 1373, 50 Queen Anne's gate, London SW1H 9AT.

EDUCATION

Civil Servants' Shareholdings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forman: No special guidance is provided. Civil servants in the Department and its agency are expected to report shareholdings where a conflict of interest might arise. There is no record of any having done so over the past five years: the nature of most of the Department's business makes conflicts of interest inherently unlikely.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what visits she has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans she has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC.

Mr. Forman: Education is not regulated at the level of the EC.

Theatres

Ms. Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what jurisdiction his Department has over those theatres currently controlled by colleges in the further education sector; and if he has had talks with the Further Education Funding Council to guarantee their future survival.

Mr. Forman: My right hon. Friend has no jurisdiction over theatres currently controlled by further education colleges but, under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992, his consent would be required for the disposal of such an asset prior to 1 April 1993. It will be for the Further Education Funding Council, when it is formed, to decide how to treat theatres for the purposes of its funding methodology.

Voluntary-aided Primary Schools, Rossendale

Ms. Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will approve the application for capital grant in respect of an extension to St. Veronica's voluntary-aided primary school, Haslingden, Rossendale;

(2) if he will approve the application for capital grant in respect of developments at St. Mary's voluntary-aided primary school, Haslingden, Rossendale.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend approved a proposal to enlarge significantly the premises of St. Veronica's on 6 February 1992 together with the associated project at St. Mary's. This approval means that he will be prepared to pay maintenance contribution on governors' approved net building expenditure subject to a maximum cash limit based on 85 per cent. of the governors' share of the scheme which estimated total capital costs of £580,000.

English

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) higher education students and (b) female students were reading English in the years 1979, 1985 and 1991.

Mr. Foreman: The information is given in the table:

Higher education students studying English (Great Britain)

	Male	Female	Total
1979	3,981	7,857	11,838
1985	3,513	7,897	11,410
1990	4,314	11,773	16,087

Note: Subject classification changed between 1985 and 1990.

Student Fees

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what the cost to the Exchequer of student fees was in the years 1979, 1985, and 1991.

Mr. Foreman: In financial year 1991-92 the cost to the Exchequer of fees for mandatory student award holders domiciled in England and Wales, and of fees paid on behalf of students from the European Community, was some £1,173,084,000. This figure excludes discretionary award holders and the holders of postgraduate awards, for whom the fee element cannot be separately identified. For financial years 1979-80 and 1985-86, only combined fee and maintenance figures are available.

Standard Assessment Tasks

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations have been received against publication of SATs results and how many for publication during the past 12 months.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has not yet issued for consultation proposals for the publication of national curriculum assessment results at school level. It is not, therefore, possible to provide a tabulation of representations for and against publication.

However, over the past 12 months the Department for Education has received many letters about the general issue of the publication of national curriculum assessment results at national, LEA and school level. Precise figures on the numbers for and against publication at the various different levels are not, however, available.

School Budgets

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish figures to show for each local education authority in English in the latest year for which such figures are available what was (a) the potential schools budget, (b) the amount of subsidy spent on school meals and milk and (c) (b) expressed as a percentage of (a).

Mr. Forth: The figures in the following table show planned expenditure for 1991-92, and were taken from local authorities' 1991-92 budget statements, published under section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988.

Notes:

1. The table lists each local education authority (LEA) which had a local management scheme in operation in 1991-92. Apart from Westminster, the LEAs in inner London are not included. LEAs are not required to operate a full school meals service, but they are obliged to offer free meals to pupils of families in receipt of income support. Charges may be levied in respect of meals for other pupils.
2. The potential schools budget—column (a)—is defined as the general schools budget less expenditure on certain excepted items: capital expenditure; expenditure supported by central government grants; and expenditure on school meals, home to school transport and transitional exceptions (eg grounds maintenance).
3. The figure for school meals expenditure in each authority—column (b)—is taken from the list of items excepted from delegation shown in each authority's section 42 budget statement for 1991-92. The figures may not be directly comparable for two reasons:
   (i) some authorities have separately identified school milk expenditure as a different excepted item, in which case the figure for milk expenditure is not included, and other authorities have included milk expenditure in the same item without disaggregating the costs, in which case milk expenditure is included; and
   (ii) the extent to which income from charges is taken into account varies considerably between authorities. For example, in some authorities gross expenditure on school meals is offset by income, in other authorities where the meals service is contracted out the income may be retained by the contractor and the gross expenditure by the authority is reduced accordingly.
4. Figures for 1992-93 are not yet complete.

Young Musicians

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will take steps to ensure that the Centre for Young Musicians can continue to provide tuition to musically gifted children from all parts of inner London.

Mr. Forth: The work of the Centre for Young Musicians is widely regarded, not least by my Department which is providing funding over the three years 1990-93 of more than £330,000. I very much welcome the support which inner London boroughs give to the Centre for Young Musicians and hope that London children will continue to benefit from the tuition offered.

Food and Home Economics

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the future of the subject of food and home economics in the national curriculum.

Mr. Forth: Aspects of home economics are covered in a number of national curriculum subjects, including technology and science. While the revision of the programmes of study and statements of attainment of the national curriculum technology order is still in progress, it would be inappropriate to comment further.

Post-16 Students

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proposals he has for the assessment of the Government's financial contributions to the provision under section 12 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 providing for schools to admit, from 1993, persons over compulsory school age to courses suitable to their requirements on a full or part-time basis and to charge fees for this service; and if these additional students will be accounted for in the methodology of the post-16 block of education standard spending assessment or otherwise.

Mr. Forman: Funding arrangements in 1993-94 will reflect LEAs' changed duties under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992. In calculating the transfer of funds from local authorities to the new further education sector, the Government will leave within local authority standard spending the resources attributable to those courses which fall within LEAs' responsibilities. The Government will announce in due course their proposals for the education elements of standard spending assessments as part of the local authority finance settlement for 1993-94.

Performing Arts

Ms. Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what grants have been made to Oulder Hill community school, Rochdale, to fund the Business and Technician Education Council course in performing arts.

Mr. Forman: The Government are committed to increasing take-up of vocational qualifications in schools. In 1992-93, my Department allocated Rochdale LEA funds to support expenditure of £13,400 to help schools and sixth form colleges to introduce new vocational qualifications under the grants for education support and training—GEST—programme. Figures on the grants made to individual schools under this element of the GEST programme are not available centrally.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many students eligible for local authority discretionary awards under sections 1(6) and 2 of the Education Act 1962 were offered places on further education courses at educational institutions in 1988, 1989, 1990 and 1991;

(2) how many students received local authority discretionary awards under sections 1(6) and 2 of the Education Act 1962 on further education courses in 1988, 1989, 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Forman: Section 1(6) of the Act covers higher education only.

Under section 2 of the Education Act 1962, LEAs have a discretionary power to bestow awards on persons over compulsory school age attending any course of full-time or part-time further education. LEAs must meet the cost for these awards from their own resources.

The numbers of further education students receiving discretionary awards under section 2 of the Education Act 1962 are as follows:

Thousands

1988-89	1989-90	[1] 1990-91
130·9	130·5	128·5

[1] (Provisional).
Data for 1991-92 are not yet available.

Expansion Funds

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether grant-maintained school and Church schools will be eligible for the expansion funds going to oversubscribed popular schools in 1993-94 on the same basis as local authority-maintained schools.

Mr. Forth: Yes.

Student Support

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans his Department has to conduct investigations into levels of higher education student support, the relationship between income and estimated expenditure and the levels of student hardship and debt; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forman: By this autumn, we shall have increased the level of full-year student support by nearly 40 per cent. since 1989-90. We shall commission surveys of students' income and expenditure as and when appropriate.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the number of (a) special needs students who have been statemented and attend (i) special day schools, (ii) special needs residential schools and (iii) mainstream schools each year since 1981, (b) statemented pupils for each year since 1981, (c) those waiting to be statemented for each year since 1981 and (d) the number of appeals.

Mr. Forth: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mature Students

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make provision for mandatory awards to be made by local authorities to mature students admitted directly for higher degrees without first doing first degrees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forman: No.

National Curriculum

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what arrangements he intends to make for national curriculum assessments in 1993, in the light of recent consultations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: In the light of consultation and of the advice of the School Examinations and Assessment Council under its chairman, Lord Griffiths, I shall be making later this month orders to govern the assessment under the national curriculum in 1993 of seven-year-olds in the core subjects—English, mathematics and science—and technology, history and geography, and of 14-year-olds in the core subjects and technology. I shall place copies of the orders and accompanying circulars in the Library.

Next year's assessments of seven-year-olds will build on the experience of this year's successful tests. They will consist of:

- mandatory tests in the core subjects of English, mathematics and science, focusing on the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic;
- teachers' assessments of pupils' attainments in technology, and for the first time in history and geography, supported by non-mandatory tests;
- strengthened arrangements to ensure consistency of assessment standards within and between schools.

I have decided to give teachers greater flexibility over the timing of the tests of seven-year-olds in the core subjects which, in 1993, will be able to be delivered from the mid-point of the spring term to four weeks before the end of the summer term. This means that:

- teachers will have longer to deliver the programmes of study if they so choose; and
- those children whose seventh birthday falls in the summer term can be tested later, if teachers wish.

Next year's assessment of 14-year-olds will be the first under statutory arrangements. They will apply to all maintained secondary schools, city technology colleges and such independent schools as choose to participate. The key features will be:

- short, written papers in science, mathematics, English and technology, taken simultaneously by all pupils under examination conditions;
- a practical test of pupils' manufacturing skills in technology;
- teachers' assessments of each pupil's classroom work to provide a detailed diagnosis of strengths and weaknesses which will inform GCSE option choices and future teaching;
- provision for subject score consisting of test results, in attainment targets covered by tests, and teacher assessments in other attainment targets;
- a rigorous audit by independent examining bodies of each school's test marking and teacher assessments before results are reported to parents or published.

In response to concerns that test dates for 14-year-olds in 1993 should not clash with those for high entry GCSEs, and that testing should not be concentrated within a single week, I have decided that the tests in 1993 will be spread over the two weeks beginning 7 and 14 June. A detailed timetable setting out which tests will be on which days will be distributed to schools early in September.

These measures are a further step in the Government's programme to ensure that pupils' attainments are assessed according to rigorous standards. They will provide parents and teachers with valuable information on each pupil's strengths and weaknesses, and will be a valuable tool in raising further standards in our schools.

Surplus Places

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will estimate the cost of keeping surplus places in primary and secondary schools in each academic year since 1987-88 in 1991-92 prices;

(2) if he will estimate the number of surplus places in primary and secondary schools in each academic year since 1987-88.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 9 July 1992]: The table records the estimated number of surplus places over the last four calendar—not academic—years.

Year	Primary	Secondary
1987	900,000	770,000
1988	860,000	890,000
1989	830,000	950,000
1990	780,000	1,000,000

These figures derive from an assessment of school capacity carried out in 1981 which has been adjusted annually to reflect accommodation brought into and taken out of use. We have recently completed an initial survey of school capacity. On the basis of this survey we estimate that in 1991 there were up to 1·5 million surplus places in England—approximately 800,000 in the primary sector and 700,000 in the secondary sector. Further work needs to be done to establish the reliability of these figures for each LEA.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Bodies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which non-departmental public bodies are sponsored by his Department; which of these are audited by the National Audit Office; which firms of private accountants audits each of the others; by what method of tendering contracts to such firms are awarded; and for what duration.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Non-departmental public bodies which are sponsored by the LCD are listed in the HMSO publication "Public Bodies 1991"—ISBN No. 011 4300 64X. Normal National Audit Office arrangements apply for all the LCD's non-departmental public bodies except in the following cases where the statutory provisions governing the body allow for external auditors to be appointed: the Legal Aid Board, which has appointed Messrs. Chantrey Vellacott for an initial period of two years following a competitive tender; the Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board, which is audited by Messrs. Finnie & Co., who were chosen in preference to one other firm and where the contract between the board and Finnies is for no specific duration; and the Advisory Committee on Legal Education and Conduct, where the appointment of auditors is currently the subject of competitive tendering.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government continue to place a high priority on helping small businesses, through improvements to the business climate, through deregulation and through specific programmes of support and assistance.

Disability Living Allowance

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to the answer of the Secretary of State for Social Security of 13 July, about the appeal of the constituent of the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough, Ref. YR691179C, against a disability living allowance decision, if he will make a statement on the delay in arranging a hearing.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Secretary of State's submission in the appeal Ref. YR691179C—Commissioner's ref. CA/016/92—of the hon. Member's constituent was received in the office of the Social Security Commissioner on 20 February 1992. Following the normal procedure, a copy of that submission was sent on 21 February 1992 to the constituent's authorised representative. His written observations were requested and are still awaited.

The constituent lodged a separate appeal—Commissioner's ref. CA/310/92—against the same decision in a different regional office using a different representative. The two appeals are being dealt with together to ensure that they are resolved at the same time.

Distraint

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellors Department if he will review the basis of distraint by bailiffs on goods and chattels of debtors and further limit the range of such articles which can be distrained upon.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The goods and chattels which are exempt from levy and seizure following a judgment of a county court or the High Court were revised by section 15 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 which came into effect on 1 July 1991. This exemption also applies to distress for rent. I have no plans to amend those exemptions further.

I understand however that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is consulting local authority associations and other interested bodies about introducing restrictions which mirror these in cases of non-payment of the community charge and rates.

Legal Aid

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidance is available to criminal legal aid; and whether the same guidance is followed by the area offices of the Legal Aid Board when dealing with cases coming to them on review from refusals by the courts.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Justices Clerks Society issued guidance to its members in 1990 and 1991. The Lord Chancellor's Department issued a circular in April 1992 which included advice and guidance for use when considering applications for criminal legal aid. The Legal Aid Board is aware of the guidance which has been made available. However, it remains for the court, or the legal aid area committee in the case of a review, to decide whether legal aid should be granted in any particular case in accordance with the criteria set down in the Legal Aid Act 1988.

Magistrates, Sunderland

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the names of those responsible for choosing magistrates for the borough of Sunderland and their lengths of service in each case.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The members of the advisory committee responsible for recommending candidates for the magistracy for the Sunderland petty sessional division and their dates of appointment are as follows:

Chairman:
G. P. Suffield Esq. JP—Appointed 1982
Members:
Mrs. C. K. Wood JP—Appointed 1982
A. P. Greenshields Esq. JP—Appointed 1982
J. Hall Esq. JP—Appointed 1988
B. Dodds Esq. JP—Appointed 1991
C. J. Jones Esq. JP—Appointed 1991
Mrs. S. K. Whiteman JP—Appointed 1988
Mrs. C. P. M. Clarke JP—Appointed 1991
J. J. Gardiner Esq. MBE—Appointed 1991

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list magistrates in the borough of Sunderland by the wards in which they live.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question cannot be answered without disproportionate cost. When seeking suitable candidates for appointment the Lord Chancellor expects all advisory committees to achieve a bench which is representative of the community it serves. To this end, he expects them to take into account geographical as well as other factors.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will give the political balance of magistrates for the borough of Sunderland.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The political balance of magistrates for the Sunderland petty sessional division is as follows:

	Numbers
Conservative	65
Labour	48
Liberal Democrat	17
Independent	2
	132

Legal Proceedings

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he proposes to implement provision allowing no-win-no-fee arrangements for legal proceedings.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor and I are now considering the matters which should be included in an order to be made under the provisions of section 58 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990. We hope to issue a draft order for consultation in the autumn.

Community Charge

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that the returns which make up the community charge enforcement statement are an accurate report of the number of people jailed for non-payment of community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information about community charge enforcement proceedings in the magistrates' courts which is collected by the Lord Chancellor's Department includes the number of warrants issued each quarter committing non-payers to prison. These statistics are based on returns by justices' clerks. They are not routinely checked for accuracy although queries are followed up with the justices clerk concerned on an individual basis. The information collected does not purport to show the number of non-payers received into prison since in some cases payment is made following issue of a warrant.

Magistrates, Walthamstow

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the number of magistrates at the Walthamstow magistrates court resident in each electoral ward of the London borough of Waltham Forest and the number resident outside the borough.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question cannot be answered without disproportionate cost.

When seeking suitable candidates for appointment the Lord Chancellor expects all advisory committees to achieve a bench which is representative of the community it serves. To this end, he expects them to take into account geographical as well as other factors.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the names of the members of the committee responsible for the selection of magistrates for the Walthamstow magistrates court.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The members of the advisory committee responsible for recommending candidates for the magistracy for north-east London are as follows:

Chairman:
E. J. Huxtable Esq. OBE JP
Members:
M. P. V. Leigh Esq JP
Mrs. J. C. Barnett JP
R. C. Jeffries Esq JP
A. S. Dowley Esq JP
R. Bryant Esq JP
Dr. J. P. Barker JP
His Honour Judge Owen Stable QC
Mrs. M. Froud JP
Mrs. D. M. Everitt JP
Miss M. D. Churchill JP
Miss C. M. Mather JP
Mrs. D. J. Carradice JP

Top Salaries Review Body

Mr. Head: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what decisions the Government have made about the Top Salaries Review Body recommendations concerning the regrouping of senior circuit judges and others in group 5.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government have accepted the TRSB's recommendations for regrouping. Some of the posts in the existing group 5 will be moved to a new group 5, at the same level as official referees; others will be reclassified in group 6 with a salary lead, although existing incumbents will be paid the new group 5 rate. As announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 July 1992, Official Report, column 288, the Government have not accepted the other recommendations affecting the judiciary.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom's presidency of the EC.

Mr. Waldegrave: Deregulation is primarily the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. However, the aims of the citizens charter are relevant to deregulation. During the United Kingdom presidency, our European partners will have an opportunity to learn how the charter is helping to raise standards of public service in this country. In particular, on 3 and 4 December there will be a major conference in London on service for the citizen.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Jackson: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Treaties

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy to include in his plans for developing the citizens charter a right for citizens to be informed of the effect of the more important treaties.

Mr. Waldegrave: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Researchers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consideration he is giving to taking steps to help British researchers, who have recently completed PhDs, to stay in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jackson: The Government provide substantial funding to maintain a healthy science base in this country and to ensure continuing opportunities for our scientists. We are consulting on our longer-term strategy for science and technology, including the career structures available to scientists.

Framework Research Programme

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what new ground rules he is proposing for the £4 billion framework research programme.

Mr. Jackson: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Benevolent Fund

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) of 15 June, Official Report, column 359, if he will list the total amount transferred to the Duchy of Lancaster benevolent fund in each year since 1981-82; and what proportion transferred in each year resulted from the value of intestate estates.

Mr. Waldegrave: Amounts transferred to the Duchy of Lancaster benevolent fund in each year since 1981-82 were:

1981-82	NIL
1982-83	150,000
1983-84	150,000
1984-85	150,000
1985-86	200,000
1986-87	250,000
1987-88	400,000
1988-89	494,701
1989-90	335,981
1990-91	531,715

Amounts paid to the duchy of Lancaster by the duchy solicitor, which are represented by devolutions in the duchy's accounts, include accrued interest and unclaimed assets of dissolved companies. The greatest single element is represented by intestate estates.

From these sums deductions are made to cover the duchy's palatinate and special costs. The balance is then paid over to the benevolent fund. It is not possible to calculate the proportion attributable to intestate estates which is transferred to the fund.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Dioxin

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department intends to analyse garden soil in the area surrounding the Coalite plant in Derbyshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The results of analyses of soil samples taken by the Department on farms near to the Coalite plant have been published. In addition, the results of a soil survey conducted by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in the Bolsover area are expected to be published in due course. These analyses will give a comprehensive picture of dioxing levels in soils in the area and therefore it is not necessary to analyse garden soils.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department intends to carry out analyses of the garden vegetables in the areas surrounding the Coalite plant in Derbyshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply to him on 15 July 1992. The Department has no plans to analyse garden vegetables.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will release the full analyses done on the soil samples from the farms near the Coalite plant in Derbyshire, including the concentrations of individual dioxin and furan congeners;

(2) if he will release the full analyses done on milk and animal tissues taken from farms near the Coalite plant in Derbyshire, including the concentrations of individual dioxin and furan congeners.

Mr. Soames: Yes. The data are voluminous and I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House when these have been compiled into a suitable form.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the results of the dioxin analyses of herbage samples from Woodhouse farm, Bolsover including toxic and dioxin furan isomers, as well as the total toxic equivalents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Further samples are being obtained and the full results published along with other data derived from the research work carried out on the farm.

Feedstuffs

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will report on progress on the review of animal feeding stuffs regulations being carried out by the expert group on animal feeding stuffs.

Mr. Gummer: The expert group on animal feedingstuffs started its review of animal feedingstuffs legislation in February 1991. I am pleased to be able to say that it has completed this task and that the report is published today together with the Government's response. Copies of both are being placed in the Library of the House.

EC Policies

Mr. Cash: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reforms he will propose to the trade and agricultural policies of the European Community in order to conform with the objectives established in proposed articles 130u(1) and 130v of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Curry: Suggestions for changes to existing policies should follow ratification of the treaty on European union by all member states. However, the Government, in determining their approach to European Community proposals, already take account of the implications for developing countries.

Moorings, Kingswear

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now confirm the approval in principle given by his Department on 13 February to the Dart harbour and navigation authority and subsequently submitted by it on form FHG2 with updated tender prices and site investigation and design supervision fees for the upgrading of the commercial fleet moorings at Kingswear, south Devon.

Mr. Curry: Officials from this Department wrote to the consulting engineers co-ordinating the grant application for the Dart harbour and navigation authority on 10 July, seeking further information on the terms of the proposed leasing agreement and on the anticipated level of fisheries use. Once these queries have been resolved, a final decision on the grant application will be made.

Rabies

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals have been agreed or are due to be agreed with regard to rabies controls on pet animals being imported into the United Kingdom other than those which are commercially traded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Commission is understood to be considering a proposal for rabies controls on pet animals. The Commission and the Council have agreed that any arrangements for pet animals must provide at least the same level of protection as have been agreed for commercially traded cats and dogs.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the current status of the agreement reached on rabies control; and if he will outline the steps to be taken before it can be implemented.

Mr. Gummer: The directive covering commercial trade in rabies-susceptible animals was adopted formally at the Council of Ministers on 13 July. Detailed implementing rules need to be decided by standing veterinary committee procedure before the necessary amendments to national regulations can be made.

Organic Food

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what analysis has been carried out as to the effect of the introduction of the United Kingdom register of organic food standards on the sale of (a) organic fruit and vegetables and (b) organic bread; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom register of organic food standards was established in 1987. Since then, UKROFS has been defining organic standards and establishing mechanisms for enforcement. A proper record of the sales of organic produce is only now possible because UKROFS has created standards that define organic produce. UKROFS standards provides an assurance to consumers as to the reliability of the organic produce that is being purchased. This can only be good for the sales of organic produce, such as organic fruit and vegetables and organic bread.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his reasons for deciding that trading standards officers should not be involved in the monitoring, certification and enforcement of organic food standards.

Mr. Gummer: Trading standards officers are involved in the enforcement of organic food standards at retail level. Monitoring and certification at production level is the task of the United Kingdom register of organic food standards together with the various private sector organic bodies. A trading standards officer is a member of the board of UKROFS.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the producers of organic food stuffs about the introduction of the United Kingdom register of organic food standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom register of organic food standards was established in 1987. Its board includes members of the major organic sector bodies in the United Kingdom as well as consumer, trading standards, food processing and retail interests. I have received no recent representations from producers regarding the introduction of UKROFS standards.

Bovine Tissues

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has concerning experiments with bovine tissues from which the infectious agent has not been capable of experimental transfer to test animals; which tissues are used; which test animals were challenged and how many; what were the ages of these animals; and what was the length of the experiment.

Mr. Soames: Transmission studies of a variety of tissues from confirmed BSE cases are in progress. The information in respect of terminated experiments in which no signs of a scrapie-like disease have been observed are as follows:

Mice challenged by feeding at 4-6 weeks of age

Tissue	Number of mice	Duration of experiment (days)
		C57Bl[1]	CRH[1]	RIII
Udder and milk	19	571	(689)	—
Supramammary LN	10	667	—	—
Placenta (A)	18	673	(699)	—
Placenta (B)	24	—	—	754
Spleen (A)	20	690	—	—
Spleen (B)	24	—	—	841
Carcase and mesenteric LN	18	680	(683)	—
Brain and CSF	8	—	(678)	—

[1] C57Bl, CRH and RIII are different strains of laboratory mice LN = Lymph node.

Mice challenged parenterally at 4-8 weeks of age

Tissue	Number of mice	Duration of experiment (days)
Muscle semitendinosus	24	870
Muscle diaphragma	24	888
Placenta	24	774
Buffy coat (of blood)	24	916
Semen	24	925
Bone marrow	24	793
Spleen	235	918

More than 50 other tissues are currently being tested by parenteral challenge of susceptible mice, but none of these experiments has yet reached its end point.

Farm Woodland Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether farmers are entitled to a free visit when applying for a grant under the farm woodland scheme; whether approval from the Forestry Commission is necessary before grants under this scheme are paid out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: General advice about woodland establishment and management, and detailed advice on the grant aid available for these activities, is available to farmers free of charge from ADAS in England and Wales and from the Scottish agricultural colleges in Scotland. Entry into the farm woodland premium scheme, which offers annual payments to farmers to offset income forgone when trees are planted on agricultural land, is conditional upon the proposed planting having been approved by the forestry authority for establishment grants under the woodland grant scheme.

Whales

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to raise the issue of the protection of whales through international forums other than the International Whaling Commission.

Mr. Gummer: It is the policy of this Government to work for effective measures for the conservation and protection of whales and other cetaceans through the International Whaling Commission and other relevant international forums.

Small Cetaceans

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 241, whether the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development discussed the International Whaling Commission's report on small cetaceans.

Mr. Gummer: The report on significant direct and incidental catches of small cetaceans by the scientific committee of the International Whaling Commission was submitted by the IWC to the UNCED secretariat in July 1991. The report was not discussed at the UNCED conference. However, papers before the conference recognised the work of the International Whaling Commission in conserving and managing whale stocks, its studies on other cetaceans and the role of other relevant organisations—for example, those established under the Bonn convention.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Finance Bill

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what extra costs were incurred by his Department as a result of the Standing Committee considering the Finance Bill sitting after the House adjourned on 16 June, 23 June and 30 June.

Mr. Dorrell: It is not possible to give a precise figure for the extra costs involved to Her Majesty's Treasury as a result of the Finance Bill Standing Committee sitting after the House adjourned on 16, 23 and 30 June. However, the total overtime and allowances entitlement for staffing costs would be in the region of £1,000 if they were claimed.

Inland Revenue Investigations

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the powers of the Inland Revenue when conducting investigations into the tax affairs of private individuals and small businesses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: I have no plans to review the powers used by inspectors of taxes in their normal investigation work. I would, however, refer my hon. Friend to my remarks during Standing Committee B's consideration of the Finance Bill, at columns 431-32.

Treaty of Rome

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what degree of convergence of economic performance among the member states of the European Community Her Majesty's Government plan to seek under the terms of the proposed amendment to article 2 of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Nelson: The United Kingdom believes that all member states should take the necessary steps to achieve sound public finances, price stability and flexible labour markets. These are the necessary conditions for non-inflationary growth and the reduction of unemployment.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the power granted to the Council to enforce its recommendations for broad guidelines of the economic policy of member states as defined by the proposed article 103(2) of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Nelson: Under article 103, the Council may formulate a draft for the broad guidelines of the economic policies of the member states and the Community. The Council's action towards member states deemed not to be complying with the guidelines is, however, limited to non-binding recommendations.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the requirement that the economic policies of member states be regarded as a matter of common concern in the proposed article 103(1) of the treaty of Rome will affect the management of the Government's economic policy.

Mr. Nelson: Article 103 develops existing procedures for multilateral surveillance of member states' economic policies. It provides for economic policy guidelines to be recommended by the Council, but these guidelines will not be binding upon member states. The Government do not expect the management of the United Kingdom's economic policy will be affected as they are already committed to sound fiscal and monetary policies and to achieving permanently low inflation.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the criteria for convergence of economic performance among the member states of the European Community as required by the proposed amendment to article 2 of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Nelson: The criteria are set down in article 109j of the Maastricht treaty. They include a high degree of price stability, convergence of long-term interest rates, no "excessive" budget deficit and membership of the narrow band of the exchange rate mechanism.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures the Government propose to take in order to achieve (a) the high level of social protection, and (b) the high level of employment required by the proposed amendment to article 2 of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Nelson: The Government's policies are directed to the achievement of sustained non-inflationary growth. This is the best means of promoting employment growth and social protection.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have to alter its policies of indirect taxation as part of the harmonisation of legislation in this area under the proposed article 99 of the treaty of Rome.

Sir John Cope: The Government have no plans to alter their policies on indirect taxation in the context of the provisions of article 99 of the treaty of Rome. This article, as the legal base for fiscal matters, provides for unanimity in decision making, and is not materially altered by the draft Maastricht treaty.

Pension Plans

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to bring deposit-based insurance and pension plans within the scope of the Financial Services Act 1986.

Mr. Nelson: I have no plans to bring deposit-based personal pension plans within the Financial Services Act 1986. Personal pension plans constructed as long-term insurance contracts already fall within the definition of investments under the Financial Services Act.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom's presidency of the EC.

Mr. Dorrell: My ministerial colleagues have met their EC counterparts and European Commissioners on a number of occasions since 18 April. The importance of minimising the burdens on business of Community legislation is well understood by this Government. During the United Kingdom presidency, the Government will continue to press the case for minimising burdens on business.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies have been undertaken as to the effect of economic and monetary union.

Mr. Nelson: Studies include the European Commission report "One market, one money: An evaluation of the potential benefits and costs of forming an economic and monetary union", which is available in the Library. An account of the agreement at Maastricht was published in the Treasury bulletin for winter 1991-92, which is also available in the Library.

Benefits

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the gain to public funds if (a) all social security benefits and welfare payments and (b) all social security benefits and welfare payments other than child benefit were made inclusive in the taxable income of recipients.

Mr. Dorrell: The estimated direct revenue yield in 1992-93 from making all social security benefits and welfare payments liable to tax is about £2 billion. Excluding child benefit and one-parent benefit would reduce the yield to about £1 billion.

Joint Nature Conservation Committee

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the main recommendations and conclusions of the Treasury's staff review of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for North Cornwall (Mr. Tyler) on 13 July 1992, Official Report, column 418.

VAT

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, under the Maastricht treaty, decisions to establish uniform rates of value added tax and uniform VAT exemptions would be taken by unanimous decision or by qualified majority voting.

Mr. Lamont: European Community decisions relating to the rates and structure of VAT are covered by the provisions of article 99 of the treaty of Rome, and as such are subject to a unanimous decision by member states.

This position is not affected by the draft Maastricht treaty.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all grants and subsidies received by farmers upon which VAT is chargeable; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 10 July 1992]: Some grants to farmers can be regarded as consideration for a supply of services and hence taxable because the recipient undertakes to refrain from doing something such as producing milk. Farmers receive grants and subsidies from a number of Government Departments, but no central list is maintained by any one Department and such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Capital Expenditure

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has anything to add to the statement made by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 7 May, Official Report, column 168, in respect of capital expenditure by local borough and district councils which has not been authorised in some manner by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Portillo: No.

Civil Servants

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants in grades 7 and principal and above were employed at 1 October 1981 and 1 October 1991.

Mr. Nelson: The information readily available relates to 1 January 1981 and 1 April 1991 and is published in "Civil Service Statistics", copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

With the introduction of unified grading between 1984 and 1986 principal grade and equivalents were replaced by grade 7, senior principal by grade 6. Data comparable to unified grades are not available for years before 1986.

Iraqi Funds

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the total value of Iraqi funds blocked in the United Kingdom;

(2) what steps he is taking so that the claims of creditors who carried out legitimate trade with Iraq prior to the invasion of Kuwait can be met from Iraqi funds frozen in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nelson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Antrim, East (Mr. Beggs) on 13 July, Official Report, column 422.

EC Budget Control

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the total cost of fraudulent practices involving EC finances in the Community as a whole and in the United Kingdom; and what action he is taking to ensure that the budgetary control committee's efforts in the European Parliament are made worth while.

Sir John Cope: Because of the nature of fraud, it is impossible to estimate the total cost of fraud against the European Community budget. However, in its annual report on the fight against fraud in 1991, the Commission has provided the following figures of irregularities notified to the Commission for the European Commission as a whole and for the United Kingdom:

Own resources notifications: 2nd half 1990 to 1st half 1991

	Mecu	£ million[1]
Total	59·4	41·4
of which United Kingdom	13·1	9·1

European Agriculture Guidance and Guarantee Fund, guarantee section notifications: 1991

	Mecu	£ million[1]
Total	67·2	46·8
of which United Kingdom	5·1	3·6

Structural funds notifications: 1 November 1990- to 31 December 1991

	Mecu	£ million[1]
Total	1·5	1·0
of which United Kingdom	0·2	0·15

[1] Converted at the central rate in the ERM of £1 = 1·435 ecu.

In part, these figures reflect the success of detection and efficiency of notification.

I shall meet the European Parliament's budgetary control committee in the autumn. This will be an opportunity to discuss fully the Parliament's concern to make sure that the Community makes every effort to combat irregularity including fraud. The Government are determined to ensure that further progress is made to reduce the scope for irregularity including fraud and will carefully consider any suggestions which the European Parliament may have.

Computer Organisation (Transfer)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the transfer of Chessington computer centre and the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency to the Minister for the Civil Service will take place.

Mr. Lamont: The transfer of responsibility for the Chessington computer centre will take place today. A transfer of functions order in respect of the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency is being laid today and the transfer will take place on 6 August. A supplementary estimate to reflect these changes will be presented in due course.

Death Benefits

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if provision has been made for the payment of improved death gratuities and dependants' benefits to beneficiaries under the European Parliament (United Kingdom representatives) pension scheme.

Mr. Portillo: The European Parliament (United Kingdom representatives) pension scheme—EP (UKR) PS—follows the parliamentary contributory pension fund—PCPF—in its provisions. The Parliamentary Pensions (Amendment) Regulations 1991 made changes to the death gratuities and dependants' benefits payable with effect from 2 April 1991 under the PCPF in respect of members who died on or after 6 April 1988. An order amending the provisions of the EP (UKR) PS will be made as soon as possible. Payment will, however, be made in the meantime to those who will be eligible to benefit from the new provisions.

Parliamentary approval will be sought later this year in an order under the European Parliament (Pay and Pensions) Act 1979. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £50,000 will be met from repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund. Once the order has been approved, the Contingencies Fund will be repaid upon approval of the Contingencies Fund repayment vote in 1993-94.

Government Holdings

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he proposes to examine options for the sale or redemption in 1992-93 of part of the Government's holding of privatised companies' debt or loan stock.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government are considering options for the redemption or sale of part of their holding in privatised companies' debt and loan stock. No decisions have been taken about the timing of the debt or loan stock which will be realised, although it is likely that about £1 billion will be involved. We have begun to appoint advisers to examine the options.

Expenses incurred in connection with the redemption or sale of part of the Government's holding will be met from receipts. Parliamentary approval for this new service will be sought in a winter supplementary estimate for Her Majesty's Treasury's sale of shares in British Telecommunications plc vote—class XVIII, vote 19. Pending that approval, expenses will be met from advances from the Contingencies Fund.

Once the realisation exercise is complete, and the final costs are known, a supplementary estimate will be presented to provide substantive provision for expenses and compensating provision for appropriations-in-aid. The balance of the receipts will be paid into the Consolidated Fund.

Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if any amendments are proposed to the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992.

Mr. Dorrell: The Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970 contains a provision under which, if certain conditions are satisfied, assets transferred from one company to another as part of a company reconstruction or amalgamation are deemed to have been disposed of for an amount that gives rise to neither a gain nor a loss. This provision enables the rationalisation and reorganisation of businesses to take place without the immediate tax charge that would ordinarily arise when assets are transferred from one company to another.

When the original legislation was consolidated in the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992, there was an error in a cross-reference involving the measures relating to transfers of life assurance business. If not corrected, this would exclude a transfer of insurance business to or from the United Kingdom branch of an overseas life assurance company from the relief conferred by the original legislation.

No transfers of insurance business have been affected by the legislation in the consolidated act so far, and the Chancellor proposes to introduce legislation in next year's Finance Bill to correct the error in the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992. The legislation will apply to transfers of insurance business which take place after today.

Civil Servants' Shareholdings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Building Societies

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Income Tax (Building Societies) Regulations 1986 on composite tax rate for building societies raised additional taxation on (a) cash flow or (b) accruals.

Mr. Dorrell: The regulations changed the way in which building societies accounted for composite rate tax. They included provision to ensure that accrued interest taken into account under the old system did not come into account again, when paid, under the new system. The Inland Revenue estimates that tax due in 1986-87, the first year of payment under the new rules, plus instalments of transitional tax due later, was about £100 million less than would have been due in that year had the old system continued. This difference is a little greater than the figure of £76 million given to my hon. Friend in response to an earlier question—Official Report, 15 July 1992, column 40: the Inland Revenue has corrected some errors in entering the data underlying that earlier reply. The full information for societies grouped by reference to their accounting date is shown in revised form in the table:

Accounting periods ending	Number of societies	Amount of tax that would have been due in 1986-87 if old system had continued £ million	Amount of tax due in 1986-87 under new system plus instalments of transitional tax not due till later £ million	Increase or decrease in tax payable under new system £ million	as percentage of old
April 6 to 30 August (end of first complete quarter)	6	8	14	+6	+75
September to November	7	340	409	+69	+20

Total	144	2,944	2,844	−100	−3
of which instalments due after 1986-87			35

Mortgage Lenders

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will outline the present system for regulating the activities of centralised mortgage lenders; and whether he will specify the total amount of mortgage lending undertaken by such bodies in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nelson: Because they do not carry on a deposit-taking business, centralised mortgage lenders are not subject to regulation under the Banking Act 1987 or the Building Societies Act 1986. However, the Consumer Credit Act 1974—for which responsibility lies with my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade—and the subordinate legislation made under it provide a system of licensing and other control of traders concerned with the provision of credit. It is likely that centralised mortgage lenders will require consumer credit licences and be subject to the controls on licensing administered by the Director General of Fair Trading.

Table L9.4 in the June 1992 edition of "Financial Statistics" gives details of loans for house purchase by "miscellaneous financial institutions", the bulk of which is believed to be accounted for by centralised mortgage lenders. At end-1991, the stock of loans for house purchase by miscellaneous financial institutions totalled £25·9 billion.

Crown Estate Commissioners

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many fishing ports are owned or managed by the Crown Estate Commissioners.

Mr. Lamont: None. Where the commissioners own land required for a port, it may be leased to the operators of the individual ports.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many miles of the coastline of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland are owned or managed by the Crown Estate Commissioners.

Mr. Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Ministerial Staff

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff were employed in all ministers' private offices in May 1979; and how many are employed today.

Mr. Nelson: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Tilbury Ferry

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Attorney-General if he will institute proceedings against the Crown Estate Commissioners for failure to provide a ferry service between Tilbury and Gravesend.

The Attorney-General: No.

Social Security Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received from the Independent Tribunal Service regarding the payment of fees to members of social security appeal tribunals; and how he has responded to those representations.

The Attorney-General: I have received no such representations.

South African Security Personnel

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration has been given to launching prosecutions arising out of the activities of Captain Pamela du Randt and Mr. Leon Flores under the Prevention of Terrorism Acts.

The Attorney-General: This matter has not been the subject of consideration by the Crown prosecution service. The investigation of alleged criminal offences is a matter for the police who are responsible for the initial decision whether to charge. In appropriate cases the police may consult the CPS.

HEALTH

London Health Services Inquiry

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress Professor Sir Bernard Tomlinson is making in his inquiry into London's health services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Tomlinson inquiry is making good progress and is on course to report in the early autumn. To ensure that our decisions on its recommendations are acted upon decisively and rapidly, I will, in consultation with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education, establish a special unit to implement our decisions and to help manage the process of change. The special unit will be part of the National Health Service Management Executive. I will give further details when the Tomlinson inquiry reports.

Maternity Services

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women have elected for (a) hospital birth and (b) home birth for each year since 1990; and if she will provide an estimate of the number of birth complications at each location.

Mr. Sackville: The figures relating to place of confinement for births in 1990 and 1991 are shown in the table.

Information is collected centrally on the method of delivery, including caesarian sections and instrumental deliveries, but this is not available in terms of the location of the delivery.

Maternities 1990-91 England—Place of confinement

	1990	1991
Hospital	654,594	647,710
Home	6,953	7,439

All psychiatric institutions.
Homes for unmarried mothers.
Remand Homes.
Reception Centres.
Private Houses (other than the mother's usual residence).

Paediatric Pathologists

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the health regions of England which currently have paediatric pathologists in post; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not held centrally. Information on doctors' specialties is held with varying degrees of disaggregation in the Department of Health's medical manpower census. Doctors with responsibilities in paediatric pathology are often recorded either as paediatricians or pathologists and the regional count of paediatric pathologists is therefore incomplete. A recent ad hoc inquiry relating to perinatal pathology found that every region had at least one perinatal or paediatric pathologist in post.

Abortion

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the numbers of national health service abortions under 13 weeks since the last menstrual period, and the numbers of these operations involving admission and discharge on the same date, performed on women resident in each regional health authority and in each district health authority area in England and Wales in the latest available year.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Overseas-qualified Doctors

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish an estimate of the number of overseas-qualified doctors currently working in the United Kingdom according to each standard United Kingdom region.

Dr. Mawhinney: The table gives the number and whole-time equivalent figures for hospital and community health service medical staff who qualified overseas, by region, in England and Wales, as at 30 September 1990, the latest date for which figures are available.

Information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the achievements of her Department and her policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if she will publish the performance indicators by which her Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Sackville: The Government continue to place a high priority on helping small businesses, through improvements to the business climate, through deregulation and through specific programmes of support and assistance.

Chronic Illness

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all chronic illnesses which are readily indentifiable and require life-long medication.

Dr. Mawhinney: The definition of which illnesses are chronic and which require lifelong medication are matters of clinical judgment, depending in part on the individual patient's condition.

There are a small number of conditions for which lifelong medication is recognised as essential and for which there is exemption from prescription charges. The limited list of these specific medical conditions was drawn up in 1968 with representatives of the profession and updated in 1983.

The conditions are as follows:

a permanent fistula which requires continuous surgical dressing or an appliance;
Diabetes mellitus;
Myxoedema;
Hypoparathyroidism;
Diabetes insipidus or other form of hypopituitarism;
Addison's disease or other form of hypoadrenalism;
Myasthenia gravis
Epilepsy for which one requires continuous anti-convulsive therapy;
a continuing physical disability which prevents one from leaving home without the help of another person.

Continence Services

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the progress being made by the task force established to oversee implementation of the agenda for action on continence services;

(2) what action her Department is taking to collect models of good practice for the delivery of continence services and supplies; and how these are being disseminated to the relevant authorities;

(3) if she will make a statement on whether her Department will be carrying out a public awareness initiative of incontinence;

(4) what progress her Department has made on the improvement in training and education of all people providing continence services as recommended in the agenda for action on continence services;

(5) how provision for incontinence services is being addressed by local authorities and health authorities under the new community care and health arrangements; and what advice her Department is giving to those authorities on the need for joint planning in this field.

Mr. Yeo: The task force is taking forward the recommendations on cost effectiveness, GP, nurse and other professional training, and publicity. Research is being commissioned on the effectiveness of different service models, with a view to helping health authorities adopt best practices. The Department is making a one year grant of £35,000 towards setting up a resource centre to be known as the Continence Foundation. In the spring of next year, the Royal College of Physicians plans to hold a conference on continence services with the Department's support. The results will be published and practical service needs emphasised. A public awareness campaign is planned for 1993-94 to encourage people to come forward for advice and assessment. Discussions on professional training continue with the professional bodies responsible for curricula and training delivery including the English National Board, on nursing. Material is being considered for distribution to GPs and GP trainers later in the year. The National Health Service Management Executive continues to keep local NHS services under review.

Health Authority Appointments, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of chairmen and non-executive directors of health authorities and trusts in Doncaster neither live nor work within the Doncaster metropolitan borough council; and if she will make it her policy to take account of residential qualifications in making future appointments.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not held centrally. Chairmen and non-executives are normally expected to live or work in the area served by the health authority or trust.

Legionnaire's Disease

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what inquiries and written reports from relevant agencies are required following an outbreak of legionnaire's disease in a hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: A case of legionnaire's disease in a hospital would be investigated by the hospital's control of infection doctor, and his colleagues, who may seek advice from external sources, including the local consultant in communicable disease control, if he considers this necessary. In the event of an outbreak an infection control action group would be established, the local consultant in communicable disease control would be involved, and the group would prepare a report for the health authority and/or local authority. In addition the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1988 impose a duty on the local authority proper officer, who in many cases is the consultant in communicable disease control, to immediately inform the Chief Medical Officer of any serious outbreak of any disease. A voluntary system of reporting of cases or outbreaks of communicable disease to the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre also exists in England and Wales.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the numbers of hospital-acquired cases of infection from legionnaire's disease nationally in 1990 and 1991; and in which hospitals they occurred.

Dr. Mawhinney: A total of 187 cases of legionnaire's disease were reported in England and Wales to the national surveillance scheme for legionnaire's disease at the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre in 1990. Three of these cases were associated with hospitals and four other cases may possibly have been associated with a hospital stay.

In 1991 there were 111 cases—provisional—of legionnaire's disease in residents of England and Wales. Three of these cases were associated with a hospital and a further 10 cases may possibly have been associated with a hospital stay.

Cases are reported under a voluntary national surveillance scheme and identification of individual hospitals would jeopardise national infectious desease control.

Geriatric Patients

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines her Department has issued to health authorities about moving geriatric patients without relatives outside their home district for continuing care.

Mr. Yeo: The guidance on discharge procedures, HC(89)5, a copy of which is available in the Library, makes it clear that patients and, with their agreement, carers and relatives, are fully consulted at all stages on the arrangements made for their future care needs. This is also one of the nine national standards set out in the patients charter. A thorough assessment of the health and social care needs of each patient should be carried out, prior to discharge, to ensure that any services required are provided in the most appropriate way.

Disability

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will discuss with regional health authorities the training of informal care providers in the prevention and treatment of pressure sores and incontinence for the physically disabled;

(2) what plans she has to help local health authorities to set realistic objectives and targets for services for physically disabled people;

(3) what plans she has to encourage the funding of rehabilitation programmes under the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990;

(4) what plans she has to discuss establishing new methods of measuring the performance of services for the disabled.

Mr. Yeo: Rehabilitation spans the responsibilities of health authorities, social services departments and a number of other agencies including the employment services. Health authorities fund rehabilitation services out of their general allocations and existing guidance sets out the range of services we would typically expect to see.

The professions involved have done much to promote rehabilitation in recent years, and we are considering what further action is needed to develop services to meet the needs of people with disability or chronic illness and to identify and disseminate good practice including methods of measuring the performance of services, the setting of realistic but challenging targets and the provision of training.

Health authorities are responsible for purchasing services to meet the health care needs of their populations. The assessment of needs for rehabilitation services is a complex matter. Special co-ordination is needed in the case of young people leaving full-time education and seeking to live as independently as possible. The Department will shortly make available to health authorities an epidemiologically-based assessment of the needs of young adults with physical disabilities to assist in deciding what services to purchase.

We will encourage the development of good practice in the prevention and management of complications which often impede rehabilitation. We reaffirm the view expressed in our consultative document on the Health of the Nation, Cm 1523, that an annual reduction of at least 5 to 10 per cent. in the incidence of pressure sores is a reasonable target for health authorities and will initiate steps to identify and disseminate the best ways of achieving this. In July 1991 we published the agenda for action on continence services, which commended to health authorities the elements of an effective local service. We shall be taking further steps to keep key professions well informed and adequately trained on good practice, and to identify the prevention and treatment services which are most effective, taking account of the role of informal care providers.

We will also be taking action to encourage the development of clinical protocols, standards of good practice, targets and performance indicators for services used by the people with impaired hearing or vision.

We are providing £1 million to improve rehabilitation services following brain injury, and we are also funding a major research study of the 12 sites around the country receiving these funds to evaluate their services.

There is insufficient knowledge about appropriate performance targets to make rehabilitation one of the key areas in our White Paper on the health of the nation but the Department will work with relevant experts to ensure that rehabilitation can become a national key area in due course. In the meantime we will pursue with regional health authorities where developments have progressed sufficiently the possibility of its adoption as a key area in those regions.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to discuss the dissemination to the physically disabled of the services available to them under the national health service.

Mr. Yeo: From 1 April 1992, the patients charter requires regional health authorities to set up general information services for the public. This will empower the patient to make more informed choices about health care, with improved access to information about the range of treatments available, greater knowledge of their condition and detailed information on waiting times.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to improve respite care for the physically disabled.

Mr. Yeo: We are looking to health and local authorities to develop respite care services as part of the implementation of the White Paper, "Caring for People". We recognise the contribution which such services can make to providing practical support for carers.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to implement sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

Mr. Yeo: The requirements of these sections are now, to a very large extent, reflected in our new and wide-ranging reforms of community care, which demonstrate our commitment to high quality care and which are responsive to the needs and wishes of service users and carers. The need to implement these sections of the Act will be reviewed in the light of several years' experience of the community care arrangements.

Resource Management

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what expenditure was incurred on developing resource management in England by each health authority in each year since 1988-89; and what financial benefits have been identified and evaluated to date.

Mr. Sackville: The sums made available by the Department to regional and special health authorities to develop resource management in the years 1989-90 to 1991-92 are shown in the table. Regional and district health authorities and individual hospitals have provided some additional funding for individual projects. In 1988-89, the Department contributed £2·3 million to projects in six acute resource management pilot sites.

The resource management programme aims to secure improvements in patient care through better management of resources at hospital level, and is not concerned solely with financial benefits. Assessment of benefits is an integral part of resource management projects in individual hospitals, but there has been no comprehensive national survey of those assessments.

Dentistry

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will now issue guidance on the criteria to be used by family health service authorities in measuring cross-infection rates in dental surgeries.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have no plans to do so.

Ms. Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her plans to recruit salaried dentists in the event of large numbers of dentists leaving the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: Health service guidance contained in HSG(92)27, a copy of which is in the Library, was issued to family health services authorities in June 1992 and advises on the action to take if they wish to employ a salaried dentist. It is for the FHSA to decide, in the light of the circumstances in its locality, whether it should seek to employ a salaried dentist. Any application made to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for approval of such employment will be dealt with speedily. There is no reason to believe that large numbers of dentists intend to leave the national health service.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the new schedule of dental fees which she announced on 25 June was sent to the Government's printers with instructions to print it; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Tuesday 23 June 1992; this being the date on which, pursuant to regulation 19(3) of the National Health Service (General Dental Services) Regulations 1992, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State amended the statement of dental remuneration.

Ms. Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give an estimate of the anticipated delay in treating national health service patients requiring orthodontic treatment costing in excess of £200, as a result of the new regulations requiring prior approval to be sought from the Dental Practice Board for patients (a) under 18 years of age, (b) 18 to 25 years of age and (c) 25 years of age and older.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 13 July at columns 517-18. The age of the patient is irrelevant to this process.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will negotiate a new system of dental remuneration.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown) on 9 July at column 337.

Ms. Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many orthodontic national health service patients required treatment costing in excess of £200 in each year since 1987 for patients (a) under 18 years of age, (b) 18 to 25 years of age and (c) 25 years of age and older.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ms. Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will consider raising the limit of £200 per patient on orthodontic treatment not requiring prior approval from the Dental Practice Board; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We see no reason to raise the prior approval limit in respect of orthodontic treatment. The changes to regulations and the scale of fees which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 23 June took account of concerns raised by orthodontists, in ways which will significantly reduce the effects on orthodontists of lowering the prior approval limit. The Dental Practice Board has estimated that some 70 per cent of all orthodontic treatment will be able to proceed without the need for prior approval.

Ms. Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff have been employed by the Dental Practice Board in each year since 1987; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested is as follows:

Year ending 31 March	Staff[1]
1986-87	1,631
1987-88	1,497
1988-89	1,369
1989-90	1,268
1990-91	1,220
1991-92	1,126

[1] Full-time equivalent of permanent and temporary staff including allowance for overtime employed on average during the year.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will instruct the Staffordshire family health services authority to employ a salaried dentist as a matter of urgency.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is for family health services authorities to decide whether they should apply for authority to appoint a salaried dentist.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out the objectives of each division and branch of her Department.

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health's objectives for 1992-93 and beyond are set out in a statement of aims, goals and priorities, publication of which was announced by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State, in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) on 10 March at column 434. Each part of the Department has its own more detailed objectives flowing from the statement.

GP Fund Holding

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has issued on the scope of community health services to be covered by general practitioner fund holding from April; and whether health visitors, district nursing, occupational therapy, speech therapy, physiotherapy or community psychiatric nursing services are to be included in general practitioner fund holding financed services.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guidance is to be issued soon. Occupational therapy, speech therapy and physiotherapy are already included in the fund holding scheme. Health visiting, district nursing, community psychiatric nursing as well as community mental handicap nursing are to be added from April 1993.

Mental Illness Hospitals

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the specialist mental illness hospitals planned for closure by 1997, by district health authority concerned, together with the total number of beds currently in each and the number of beds currently occupied by patients.

Mr. Yeo: It is planned that the following mental illness hospitals should close by 1997:

Hospital	District health authority	Number of beds
St. Mary's Morpeth	Gateshead	389
Clifton	York	97
De La Pole	East Yorkshire	390
Scalbor Park	Airedale	140

St. Augustine's	Canterbury and Thanet	282

Hospital	District health authority	Number of beds
Tooting Bec	West Lambeth	600
Maidstone (Psychiatric wing)	Maidstone	390

The number of beds in each hospital currently occupied by patients is not held centrally.

Clinical Standards Advisory Group

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the membership of her Clinical Standards Advisory Group; and what is the scope of its work on hospital-acquired infection.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Clinical Standards Advisory Group is as follows:

Sir Gordon Higginson (Chairman)
Professor June Clark
Professor Rhys Davies
Sir Terence English
Miss Pam Hibbs
Miss Jennifer Hunt
Mrs. Rosemary Jenkins
Miss Elizabeth McLean
Professor John Murray
Professor John Richmond
Professor Michael Rosen
Mr. Derek Seel
Professor Andrew Sims
Dr. Nuala Sterling
Professor Victor Tindall
Dr. Colin Waine
Professor Sir Dillwyn Williams

The group has been giving preliminary consideration to the possibility of a study on hospital-acquired infections. We look forward to receiving in the near future the group's specific suggestions on the scope of any such study.

Computers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the value for money of the expenditure on computers by health authorities in England over the last five years; and what action has been taken by the chief executive to ensure such purchases of systems and hardware are adequately evaluated.

Mr. Sackville: The implementation of computer systems is a local responsibility. Local managers take investment decisions in line with their business requirements, and in doing this are expected to obtain value for money. They are expected to identify the potential benefits of any investment before decisions are taken and to assess whether those benefits are actually realised.

The National Health Service Management Executive is responsible for providing leadership and advice and establishing a strategic framework for computer developments. In particular the executive has been developing national standards within which local managers can evaluate commercial systems. The aim is to publish revised guidance on procurement, investment appraisal and benefits realisation later this year. Further support is being provided through a national training strategy for managers which will develop the skills required to choose, implement and manage information systems.

Regional Health Authority Members

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the present remuneration and expiry of term of office of each member of each regional health authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: All regional health authority non-executive members receive remuneration of £5,000 per annum. The names and terms of office of non-executive members of regional health authorities are as follows:

Wheelchairs and Artificial Limbs

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to discuss the timely provision of wheelchairs and artificial limbs.

Mr. Yeo: The purchase of appropriate services for the provision of wheelchairs and artificial limbs is a matter for district health authorities. The quality of service is monitored by regional health authorities and the NHS Management Executive keeps it under review.

Sexual Health

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what performance indicators she now requires from the annual reports of directors of public health in national health service districts on activities promoting sexual health.

Mr. Sackville: In July 1991 regional health authorities were asked to undertake a comprehensive review of their family planning services. Regions were asked to report by the end of June 1992 on the criteria they have set purchasing authorities for securing more effective family planning services and the specific targets that will be set for district health authorities and family health services authorities for 1993-94. Criteria and targets will depend on the priorities set as a result of assessment of local needs. Careful consideration will be given to the reports from regions and, in the light of these, to the future development of family planning service provision.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what visits she has made to her EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans she has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have had no such meetings. We expect to meet a number of the Health Ministers of other member states during the presidency to discuss matters on the agenda of the Health Ministers Council.

Civil Servants' Shareholdings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, her Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if she will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in her Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within her Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department's staff rules place a duty on every member of staff who comes into contact with a matter concerning a business organisation in which he or she has an interest, including shareholdings, to disclose that interest to his or her senior manager and to ask that some other official deal with the matter. Staff rules are given to and apply to all civil servants working in the Department, including its agencies. Individuals and their managers are expected to consult the Department's establishment officer about the desirability of acquiring or retaining shares where this might give rise to a potential conflict of interest. The Department's establishment officer has been consulted on such matters on two occasions since the Department separated from the former Department of Health and Social Security.

Wheelchair Access

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will hold discussions about providing access for people in wheelchairs to national health service buildings which they need to enter.

Mr. Yeo: Health authorities should ensure compliance with the patients charter standard that buildings can be used by people in wheelchairs. The Department has issued guidance to health authorities on the design of premises to take account of the special needs of physically disabled people.

Hospital Accounts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to collect information on the number of firms refusing to supply, or delaying supplies, to health authorities or trusts because of delays in settling accounts.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

Medical Practitioners

Ms. Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the expected costs of compensation for individual medical practitioners whose legal status is not recognised by the current United Kingdom system of accreditation, as a result of EC directives 75/362 and 75/363 and of the Frankovitch case in the European Court of Justice.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is not possible to make such an estimate.

Hospital Trusts

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out her reserve powers to override the decisions of hospital trust management.

Dr. Mawhinney: The powers of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to make directions to national health service trusts are laid down in the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990, schedule 2, paragraph 6.(1) and 6.(2). These powers will not be used routinely, and only under the most exceptional circumstances will there be any intervention in trusts' affairs.

Dog Bites

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been treated for dog bites in national health service hospitals in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: There were 1,134 hospital admissions for dog bites in 1989-90. Information about dog bites treated in accident and emergency departments is not collected centrally.

Census

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will consider bringing forward the publication of the 1991 census data for Staffordshire to make it available for submissions by local authorities in the county to the Local Government Commission.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Swindon (Mr. Coombs) on 14 July. All county monitors will be published by October, and corresponding small area statistics will be available this year.

Heart Disease

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the waiting period for examinations for heart complaints (a) on Merseyside and (b) in Liverpool at the most recent date; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Donald Wilson, chairman of Mersey regional health authority, for details.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths have occurred (a) in Liverpool and (b) on Merseyside in each of the past five years from heart disease; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is shown in the table.

Deaths in Liverpool and Merseyside from heart disease (ICD 390-429), 1987 to 1991

Year	Liverpool	Merseyside
1987	2,120	5,913
1988	1,975	5,778
1989	2,010	5,949
1990	1,844	5,542
1991	1,838	5,588

Residential Homes

Ms. Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will be giving guidance to local authorities about the legal implications that will arise after 1 April 1993 from residential homes having contracts with both local authorities and residents.

Mr. Yeo: The Department issued guidance last year to local authorities about contracting with residential homes in "Purchase of Service—Practice Guidance and Practice Material for Social Services Departments and Other Agencies", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Baseline Statistics

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the baselines referred to in the "Health of the Nation" White Paper for (a) the death rates for coronary heart disease and stroke in 1990, (b) the death rate for CHD for those aged 65 to 74 years in 1990, (c) the death rate for stroke for those aged 65 to 74 years in 1990, (d) the death rate for breast cancer in those invited for screening in 1990, (e) the incidence of invasive cervical cancer in 1986, (f) the death rate for lung cancer under the age of 75 years in 1990, (g) the suicide rate in 1990, (h) the suicide rate of the severely mentally ill in 1990, (i) the incidence of gonorrhoea in 1990, (j) the rate of conceptions amongst under 16-year-olds in 1990, (k) the death rate for accidents among children under 15 years in 1990, (l) the death rate from accidents among children aged 15 to 24 years in 1990 and (m) the death rate from accidents among people over 65 years in 1990, for each national health service region and each health district.

Mr. Sackville: Information relating to coronary heart disease, stroke, breast cancer, cervical cancer, lung cancer, suicide and road traffic accidents is available in the public health common data set for 1991, published by the Department of Health. Copies are available in the Library.

Information at regional and district level about the severely mentally ill, incidence of gonorrhoea, under-16 conceptions and all accidents is currently not available in the form requested. The Department will be working with regional health authorities to develop baseline data for these areas.

Tuberculosis

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the number of people contracting tuberculosis (a) in each of the last five years and (b) in each of the last six months;

(2) what evidence her Department has of any causal link between poverty, poor housing and tuberculosis;

(3) if she will make a statement about the incidence of tuberculosis in the United Kingdom;

(4) what plans she has to reduce the incidence of tuberculosis.

Mr. Sackville: For notifications of tuberculosis in England and Wales for the last five years I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 7 July at column 150. The breakdown for the first six months of 1992 is:

	Number
January	508
February	453
March	460
April	574
May	462
June	494

Notifications of TB fell progressively from 1948 to 1987, since when the numbers have levelled out. Rates are higher in inner cities, to which several factors contribute. Discussions are proceeding between the Department and the national health service on how TB can be reduced in those areas.

The national schools' BCG immunisation programme is to continue at least until 1995-96, when the results will be known of a Public Health Laboratory Service survey of tuberculosis in the general population. Immunisation will continue to be offered also to other high-risk groups as set out in the HMSO publication "Immunisation Against Infectious Diseases". A copy of the 1992 edition will be placed in the Library as soon as it is available.

Royal London Hospital

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will request the board of the Royal London hospital trust to inform her how and in what manner its plans for reduction of staff and services will (a) affect the level of services provided by the hospital to future in and out-patients resident in the borough of Newham, (b) the operation of Newham district hospital and the support available to it and (c) medical education; and if she will publish their reply.

Dr. Mawhinney: The provision of hospital and community health services for the residents of the borough of Newham is a matter for Newham health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Newham health authority, Mrs. R. Walters, for further information.

Weight Loss

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department will carry out an investigation into the prescription of fenfluramine hydrochlorides, and in particular, duromine, as an aid to weight loss.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will investigate the use of prescribed drugs for the prime purpose of weight loss.

Dr. Mawhinney: No. Guidelines on the prescribing of these drugs are contained in the British National Formulary which is sent to all doctors.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she has any plans to issue guidance to doctors in private practice on the question of prescribed drugs being made available for the prime purpose of weight loss.

Dr. Mawhinney: No. The British National Formulary already contains guidance on this point.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to review NHS contracts so as to restrict the involvement of doctors in the commercial activities of slimming clinics, in particular their power to prescribe drugs in such circumstances.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on the number of qualified NHS doctors who are involved in the commercial activities of organisations calling themselves slimming clinics.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not held centrally.

Community Care

Ms. Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has (a) to evaluate local authorities' community care plans, (b) to provide local authorities with her Department's comments on their plans and (c) to intervene should a local authority be found to have failed to follow guidelines in consulting other agencies in the preparation of its community care plans; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Local authorities' final draft community care plans were evaluated during the course of the April round of regional health authorities/social services inspectorate monitoring, and comments were made to authorities on their overall progress towards implementation. The Social Services Inspectorate is undertaking a further analysis of the final plans and, where serious gaps in the planning process have been identified SSI is notifying the authorities concerned and seeking remedial action.

Ms. Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local authorities met the deadline of 1 April for submitting their community care plans to her Department.

Mr. Yeo: Only a very small number of authorities failed to meet the deadline for publication of community care plans. Of these, one has not yet published its plan but all the others did so soon after 1 April.

Southmead Health Care Trust

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the level of staffing of junior doctors at Southmead health care trust, Bristol and the current number of hours they are required to work;

(2) if she will take action to ensure that full houseman cover is available at Southmead health care trust.

Mr. Sackville: The appropriate level of medical staffing is a matter for the trust to determine, having regard to the ceilings set in "Achieving a Balance" and the advice given in "The New Deal on Junior Doctors' Hours".

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the proposed closure of the paediatric renal unit at Southmead health care trust, Bristol.

Mr. Sackville: I understand that in the light of representations which have been made about the proposed closure of the unit, the Southmead health services trust has decided to re-examine the decision to close it. A further review of the options for the future of the unit will now be carried out and it will stay open, at least until the review is complete.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will call for a full report from the Southmead health care trust, Bristol on representations made to the trust management by doctors on emergency medical cover in the hospital.

Mr. Sackville: I understand that the chief executive of the Southmead trust has asked the acting director of operations to undertake an immediate inquiry into the allegations about patient deaths. I am confident that the trust board will take whatever further action is necessary.

Mr. Mike Shannon

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the issues considered when deciding the redundancy pay of Mr. Mike Shannon, former chief executive of Warrington district general hospital; and what was the payment paid to him.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. D. Hannah, the chairman of Warrington health authority, for details.

Nurses (Grading)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to promote a fast track approach to dealing with the outstanding number of nurse clinical grading review appeals.

Mr. Sackville: The Nursing and Midwifery Staffs Negotiating Council has recently reached agreement on streamlining the appeals process including a facility for referring appeals direct from the employing authority to national level. The National Health Service Management Executive's director of personnel wrote to regional general managers and chief executives of NHS trusts on 31 March 1992 urging them to adopt the new procedures.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Radioactivity Monitoring

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what seashore monitoring for radioactivity is carried out by his environment department.

Mr. Atkins: The environment service of the Department of Environment for Northern Ireland monitors the gamma dose rate in the air over intertidal sediments around the coastline of the Province. The results are consistent with normal background levels of radioactivity.

The environment service also arranges for analyses of sea water, seaweed, fish, nephrops and winkles on a quarterly basis. These results are published annually and indicate that the radioactivity is of negligible radiological significance to the Northern Ireland public.

Ferry Links

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to improve ferry links between Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: In recent years, there has been considerable investment in infrastructural improvements to the ports of Belfast and Larne supported by grants from the European regional development fund. This has enabled a continuing improvement to the ferry services operating between Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Rural Housing

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to improve rural housing in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but the chief executive has advised me that following extensive consultations the Housing Executive completed a review of its rural policy and in June 1991 published a revised policy statement titled "The Way Ahead". This sets out a strategy for improving rural housing in the short, medium and long term. The executive, as part of its short-term strategy, has already designated 67 rural priority areas in which grants are actively targeted and where an enhanced grants package is available for the provision of mains water, sewerage and electricity services. Allied to this, the demolition criterion has been relaxed and the provision of amenity blocks introduced which will allow a greater number of properties to qualify for grant aid. The scope of the improvement grant scheme has also been widened to include a replacement option where this is shown to be more feasible on technical grounds than improvement.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed in (a) the shipbuilding industry and (b) the tourist industry in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: At present, there are approximately 2,100 workers employed in the shipbuilding industry in Northern Ireland. The information requested on the tourism industry is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current level of unemployment in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: At 14 May 1992, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 103,796 unemployed claimants in Northern Ireland, representing 14·2 per cent. of the work force.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Atkins: The Government continue to place a high priority on helping small businesses in Northern Ireland, through improvements to the business climate, deregulation and specific programmes of support and assistance. Direct comparisons between 1990-91 and 1991-92 are not possible as the Northern Ireland industrial development agencies concentrated on implementing the Government's new economic development strategy for Northern Ireland in 1991-92. This focuses on assisting companies to develop their growth potential and competitiveness. Measures operated in 1991-92 by the Department of Economic Development through the Industrial Development Board and the Local Enterprise Development Unit, to assist small business include:

Activity	Performance
Sectoral activity	Examination of competitive performance begun in 20 sectors (new programme) 6 sectoral task forces established (new programme)
Strategic development planning scheme	21 companies assisted (new programme)
Growth opportunities	40 companies assisted (new programme)
Marketing, quality, research and development, product development support	805 companies supported
Exhibitions, trade missions	396 companies participated

Moneyrea

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total electorate of Moneyrea ward in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Hanley: The parliamentary electorates taken from the electoral register published on 15 February each year are as follows:

Electoral Register	Electorate
1982	1,796
1983	1,827
1984	1,818
[1]1985	2,049
1986	2,087
1987	2,114
1988	2,110
1989	2,138
1990	2,241
1991	2,337
1992	2,336

[1]The Local Government (Boundaries) Order (NI) 1984 gave effect to the recommendations of the Local Government Boundaries Commissioner altering ward boundaries.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the enrolment at Moneyrea primary school in each of the past 10 years; and how many children were refused places in this school in each of those 10 years.

Mr. Hanley: The number of pupils enrolled at Moneyrea primary school in January in each of the last 10 years was as follows:

Year	Number
1983	145
1984	138
1985	132
1986	134
1987	139
1988	134
1989	136
1990	133
1991	129
1992	136

I will write to the right hon. Gentleman about the number of children refused places once the school has reopened after the summer break.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the estimated population of Moneyrea ward in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Hanley: I shall write to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Vehicle Inspectors

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many spot inspections, as distinct from annual inspections, were carried out by the Department of the Environment from 1 April 1991 to 31 March 1992 on vehicles belonging to private operators; and if he will publish the results of such inspections.

Mr. Atkins: From 1 April 1991 to 31 March 1992, the Department of the Environment carried out roadside examinations on 1,203 vehicles, including lorries, buses and private cars. As a result of these examinations, 241 minor defects were drawn to the operators'/owners' attention. Seventy-four delayed prohibitions and 18 immediate prohibitions were issued in respect of more serious defects.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many spot inspections, as distinct from annual inspections, were carried out by the Department of the Environment from 1 April 1991 to 31 March 1992 on vehicles belonging to Ulsterbus; and if he will publish the results of such inspections.

Mr. Atkins: My Department does not record the roadside examination of vehicles by the names of the operators.

Pharmacies

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what locations new pharmacy retail outlets have been approved by the pharmacy practices committees of the Eastern health and social services board in each year since 1989; and in 1992 up to 30 June; and how many applications were refused for each of those periods.

Mr. Hanley: I shall write to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Aircraft Noise

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce regulations to control aircraft noise.

Mr. Atkins: Aircraft noise at airports is subject to control under the provision of section 12 of the Aerodromes Act (Northern Ireland) 1971. There are no present plans to invoke these provisions.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will undertake a review of the machanisms for controlling aircraft noise.

Mr. Atkins: I have plans to do so as part of a general review of current airport legislation.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Mates: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Civil Servants (Shares)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mates: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Police Stations (Lay Visitors)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the value of lay visitors to police stations in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Mates: The lay visiting scheme was established by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland in April 1991. It is non-statutory and was set up to enable members of the community to observe, comment and report upon the welfare of persons in police custody and the operation by the police of the rules under the police and criminal evidence legislation governing the welfare of those held in custody in police stations. The scheme constitutes an important and effective element in promoting community confidence in the police and has demonstrably been a success.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the cost of the lay visitor system in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Mates: I understand from the Police Authority for Northern Ireland that during the financial year 1991-92 the approximate cost of administering the lay visiting scheme was £27,000.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many visits were made by lay visitors to police stations in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Mates: I understand from the Police Authority for Northern Ireland that from April 1991, when the lay visiting scheme was established, to 31 March 1992, 230 visits were made to designated police stations.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many lay visitors have attended police holding centres in Northern Ireland; and what is the number of lay visitors in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Mates: The Police Authority for Northern Ireland currently has 46 lay visitors, none of whom has visited the holding centres since their terms of reference apply only to police stations designated under the police and criminal evidence legislation.

Youth Training

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of youth training trainees in Northern Ireland who left schemes without receiving any recognised qualifications for the previous five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Atkins: The number of youth training trainees in Northern Ireland who left schemes without receiving any recognised qualifications was 6,541 in 1990-91—66 per cent. and 7,893 in 1991-92—47 per cent. Data on recognised qualifications gained were not collected prior to April 1990.

Higher Education

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total amount spent on higher education excluding student awards for the last five years in current and real terms and the percentage that is of total Government spending.

Mr. Hanley: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Student Entitlements

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated cost of restoring student entitlement to (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) unemployment benefit in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Water Disconnections

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by district office the number of water consumers disconnected from the mains water supply because of arrears in each year since 1987 and the number reconnected after arrears were paid.

Mr. Atkins: The table shows the number of consumers disconnected in each water service division since 1987. Figures for the number of reconnections after payment of arrears are not available.

Division	1987	1988	1989	1990	1991
Northern	78	76	31	22	99
Southern	120	139	69	40	100
Eastern	79	132	125	163	96
Western	41	61	67	33	90

Public Bodies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which non-departmental public bodies are sponsored by his Department; which of these are audited by the National Audit Office; which firms of private accountants audits each of the others; by what method of tendering contracts to such firms are awarded; and for what duration.

Mr. Mates: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Questions

Mr. Page: To ask the Lord President of the Council what calculation has been made of the savings that might be achieved if Ministers were to make available to the proposed data network for Parliament, standard replies, with appropriate updates, to routine inquiries made by hon. Members on behalf of their constituents.

Mr. Newton: No calculation has, as yet, been made of any potential savings but the Information Committee will be considering the potential advantages of a data network for Parliament and the possible uses to which it might be put. I understand that it hopes to report to the House later in the Session. Any decision to install such a network would need the agreement of the House and of the Finance and Services Committee.

Office Cost Allowance

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to implement the report of the Top Salaries Review Body in respect of the office cost allowance.

Mr. Newton: I set out the Government's plans in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, South-West (Mr. Page) on Thursday 9 July, Official Report, column 284 and in the debate on Tuesday 14 July.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

European Year of the Elderly

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has for his Department to celebrate in 1993 the European Year of the Elderly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Privy Council Office has no plans to mark this occasion.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make a statement on the achievements of the Privy Council office in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Newton: The functions of the Privy Council Office do not include the provision of assistance to small businesses.

EMPLOYMENT

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Local Office Stourbridge

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) when her Department first considered building a new jobcentre and benefits office in Coventry street, Stourbridge; when it was decided not to go ahead with the scheme; what was the estimate of the cost of the scheme; how much had been spent by her Department and the Property Services Agency in preparing the scheme; and what was the proposed date of opening of the centre;

(2) when her Department considered building a new jobcentre and benefits office at Scotland house, Stourbridge, how much it will cost; how much area it will take up; and when it will be ready to open.

Mr. McLoughlin: Questions on operational matters in the Employment Service executive agency are the responsibility of the agency's chief executive, to whom I have referred this question for reply.

Civil Servants (Shares)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, her Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if she will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in her Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within her Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department of Employment group personnel handbook and the Employment Service personnel handbook give the following specific and identical guidance on dealings in securities and other assets. Staff must not use or appear to use their official position for personal gain. They must not buy or sell something when, as a civil servant, they have information concerning its value which is not publicly known. They should also avoid dealing in an asset at a time when their official activities involve them in giving advice, or taking decisions which may affect its value.

Comprehensive information is not readily available on the number of occasions on which staff have reported shareholdings to established officers.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will set out the objectives of each division and branch of her Department.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Inspectors

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the ratio of field inspectors to registered premises for (a) the factory inspectorate, (b) the agricultural inspectorate, (c) the quarries inspectorate, (d) the nuclear inspectorate and (e) the mines inspectorate in (i) 1980, (ii) 1985 and (iii) 1990.

Mr. McLoughlin: The ratios of field inspectors in the Health and Safety Executive (HSE)[1] to registered premises were:

	1980 (1 January)	1985 (1 April)	1990 (1 April)
(a) Factories	1:466	1:695	1:690
(b) Agricultural[2]	—	1:2,116	1:1,619
(c and e) Mines and quarries[3]	1:98	1:117	—
(c) Quarries	—	—	1:667
(e) Mines	—	—	1:21

[1] The register of premises maintained by HSE is thought to be seriously incomplete because of the rapid turnover in businesses and because a number fail to notify as required by the Factories Act 1961. Moreover at least 100 inspectors inspect transient sites—mainly in construction—rather than fixed premises. The ratio has to be considered in that light. Informed estimates of the total number of premises subject to HSE inspection suggest total numbers in excess of 1 million.

[2] Agricultural inspectors joined the Health and Safety Executive from Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries and Food (MAFF) in 1976. The register of workplaces was held by MAFF until after the beginning of 1980.

[3] Combined figures for mines and quarries (quarries inspectorate joined the factory and agricultural inspectorate division on 1 November 1989).

(d) Nuclear installations inspectors in the Health and Safety Executive are all based in headquarters. The numbers of inspectors in the nuclear safety division and the number of relevant sites were as follows:

	1980 (1 January)	1985 (1 April)	1990 (1 April)
Inspectors	99	105	160
Sites	28	29	30

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many mines inspectors are due to retire in each year between 1992 and 1996.

Mr. McLoughlin: The numbers of mines inspectors currently employed by the Health and Safety Executive who will have reached retirement age in each calendar year between 1992 and 1996 are as follows:

	Number
[1]1992	1
1993	3
1994	2
1995	1
1996	1

[1] From 1 July.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the ratio of qualified factory inspectors to trainees on 1 April in each year between 1987 and 1992.

Mr. McLoughlin: The ratios of qualified factory inspectors to trainee factory inspectors at 1 April were:

	Ratio
1987	6·7
1988	8·1
1989	7·1
1990	4·7
1992	3·4

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) factory inspectors, (b) agricultural inspectors, (c) quarries inspectors, (d) nuclear inspectors, (e) mines inspectors and (f) factories inspectors resigned between 1987 and 1990, inclusively; and how many years of experience had they between them, in total.

Mr. McLoughlin: The number of inspectors who resigned from 1 January 1987 to 31 December 1990 were:

	Number
Factory inspectors	42
Agricultural inspectors	5
Quarries inspectors	1
Nuclear inspectors	3
Mines inspectors	0

These inspectors had, in aggregate, 416 years of civil service employment.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the labour costs associated with (a) the factory inspectorate, (b) the agricultural inspectorate, (c) the specialist inspectorate, (d) the quarries inspectorate, (e) the nuclear inspectorate and (f) the mines inspectorate; and for (i) clerical and administrative staff and (ii) inspectors under each category both in actual amounts and as a percentage of the Health and Safety Executive's total labour costs in each year from 1987 to 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information is not available in the form requested. The table gives payroll budgets for the divisions of the Health and Safety Executive, in which inspectors are principally employed. Separate figures for inspector grade and other staff are not available.

Payroll Budgets—HSE Divisions[1]

1987-88
Field operations division	22,019	36·2
Mines inspectorate	3,836	6·3
Nuclear safety division	4,821	7·9
Technology division	6,236	10·3
1988-89
Field operations division	24,414	36·5
Mines inspectorate	3,722	5·6
Nuclear safety division	5,815	8·7
Technology division	6,875	10·3
1989-90
Field operations division	25,673	35·9
Mines inspectorate	3,373	4·7
Nuclear safety division	7,377	10·3
Technology division	7,004	9·8
1990-91
Field operations division	37,308	44·4
Mines inspectorate	3,085	3·7

	£000s	Percentage of HSE total
Nuclear safety division	9,394	11·2
Technology division	5,500	6·5
1991-92
Field operations division	41,368	40·2
Mines inspectorate	3,218	3·1
Nuclear safety division	10,446	10·1
Technology and health sciences division	8,631	8·4

[1] Because of reorganisations of HSE's divisional structure, figures for different years are not directly comparable.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factories there are which are liable for visits from the factories inspectorate.

Mr. McLoughlin: On 31 March 1992, the latest date for which information is available centrally, 417,316 fixed premises—which include all registered factories—were registered with HSE's factory inspectorate. There are no reliable estimates of the number of unregistered factory premises. All fixed premises, whether registered or not, are liable to a visit by HSE inspectors.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the last new mines inspector was recruited.

Mr. McLoughlin: The last mines inspector was recruited in November 1988.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many trainee (a) factory inspectors, (b) agricultural inspectors, (c) quarry inspectors, (d) nuclear inspectors, (e) mines inspectors and (f) factories inspectors were employed, giving the number for each year from 1987 to 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: Only two grades of staff in the Health and Safety Executive are designated as training grades: factory inspectors class II—for the first two years—and assistant agricultural inspectors—for the first three years. The numbers employed were:

	Trainee factory inspectors	Assistant agricultural inspectors
1 April 1987	81·0	36
1 April 1988	65·0	25
1 April 1989	75·0	23
1 April 1990	111·0	26
1 April 1991	144·5	43

A wide range of training, both internal and external, is provided both for new recruits and for more experienced staff in the various occupational groups employed by HSE.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many premises were registered with (a) the factory inspectorate, (b) the agricultural inspectorate, (c) the quarries inspectorate, (d) the nuclear inspectorate and (e) the mines inspectorate in (i) 1980, (ii) 1985 and (iii) 1990.

Mr. McLoughlin: The table shows the available information on the number of workplaces registered with the factory, agricultural, quarries, nuclear installations and mines inspectorate in 1980, 1985 and 1990.

Number of workplaces registered

	1980[1]	1985[1]	1990[1]
Factory inspectorate	309,915	395,860	386,144
Agricultural inspectorate	—	319,567	239,632
Quarries inspectorate	[2]9,021	[2]8,800	6,000
Nuclear inspectorate	28	29	30
Mines inspectorate	—	—	729

[1] Figures for 1 January 1980 and 31 March 1985 and 1990.
[2] Combined figure for mines and quarries—quarries inspectorate joined the factory and agricultural inspectorate division on 1 November 1989.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current number of factory inspectors.

Mr. McLoughlin: On 1 July 1992, the Health and Safety Executive employed 705 factory inspectors.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many Health and Safety Executive inspectors with over (a) 10 years, (b) 15 years and (c) 20 years experience have left the Health and Safety Executive since 1 January 1987.

Mr. McLoughlin: Since 1 January 1987, the following numbers of inspectors have resigned:

(a) 28 with 11 to 15 years experience,
(b) 10 with 15 to 20 years experience,
(c) 3 with over 20 years experience.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many premises registered with the Health and Safety Executive have not been inspected since 1 January 1986.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information about the number of fixed premises registered with the Health and Safety Executive that have not been inspected since 1 January 1986 is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of the Health and Safety Executive's expenditure was provided directly from the Government in grant aid for the years (a) 1975-76 and (b) 1990-91.

Mr. McLoughlin: The proportions of the Health and Safety Executive's expenditure provided by grant in aid for the years 1975-76 and 1990-91 were 98 per cent. and 75 per cent.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what specific resources have been allocated to the Health and Safety Executive to ensure that employers will comply with regulations enacting (a) the framework directive—89/391/EEC—(b) the workplace directive—89/654/EEC—(c) the manual handling of loads directive—90/269/EEC—(d) the use of personal protective equipment directive—89/655/EEC—(e) the display screen equipment directive—90/270/EEC—(f) the carcinogens directive—90/394/EEC—and (g) the biological agents directive—90/679/EEC.

Mr. McLoughlin: In recent years, the Government have provided the Health and Safety Commission—HSC—with the resources it has sought for the Health and Safety Executive in public expenditure survey bids. HSE's staffing is now at its highest level ever.

In the course of its inspection, advice and enforcement activities, the HSE promotes compliance with all relevant health and safety legislation. HSE's plans for implementing the large number of new EC requirements are set out in the HSC's plan of work for 1992-93 and beyond.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) doctors and (b) occupational nurses were employed by the Health and Safety Executive in (a) 1979 and (b) 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: On 1 April 1979, HSE employed 86·5 doctors and 91 nurses. Corresponding figures for 1991 were 56·5 and 53·5 respectively.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans the Government have to increase the staffing levels of the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. McLoughlin: On 1 July 1992, the Health and Safety Executive's staffing was at its highest level ever, at 4,404 including 1,499 inspectors. As set out on pages 42 and 43 of the Health and Safety Commission's plan of work for 1992-93 and beyond, published in March this year and available in the Library, it is planned to increase total staffing to 4,523, including 1,592 inspectors, by 1 April 1993.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many complaints in total from employees concerning health and safety at work were dealt with by Health and Safety Executive area offices in the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. McLoughlin: The table shows the information which is available on the total number of complaints received and dealt with by the agricultural, factory and quarries inspectorates—AI, FI, QI—in the Health and Safety Executive area offices for the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91:

Year (1 April—31 March)	Number of complaints
1988-89	[1]15,217
1989-90	[2]19,591
1990-91	18,625

[1] AI and FI only.
[2] Includes QI figures from 1 November 1989 when the inspectorate joined the factory and agricultural inspectorate division.

Information is not separately available on the number of complaints received from employees about health and safety at work.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will publish the Health and Safety Executive report entitled report of the working group on improving the impact of the division's work; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many telephone inquiries the Health and Safety Executive public inquiry points dealt with in total in the years 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. McLoughlin: The number of telephone inquiries dealt with by the public inquiry points are as follows:

	Number
1988-89	67,664
1989-90	92,537
1990-91	92,134

Pregnant Employees

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what plans she has to amend the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 so that an employee can claim unfair dismissal because of a pregnancy without qualifying condition;

(2) what plans she has to seek to amend the law, to make the dismissal of pregnant women unlawful without qualifying condition, and to introduce 14 weeks' maternity leave, without qualifying condition.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government's election manifesto undertook to give effect to the provisions of the EC directive on pregnant workers which gives the right to 14 weeks' maternity leave and protection against dismissal on grounds of pregnancy. The Government will, of course, honour their manifesto commitment. However, the directive has yet to be adopted.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what recent representations she has received regarding the employment rights of pregnant women; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Since the general election my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment has received 12 letters from Members of Parliament and Members of the European Parliament about the pregnant workers directive, including one passed to this Department from the Prime Minister's office. My right hon. Friend has also received three letters from MPs about other aspects of maternity rights. In addition, my right hon. Friend has received a number of letters from trade unions and others.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps her Department is taking to publicise to employers and employees their obligations and rights with regard to pregnant women.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department has published a booklet which sets out the maternity rights available to employees and the obligations of employers. The booklet is widely available at Employment Service offices. There is also a simple fact sheet on the same subject mainly intended for employers.

Unfair Dismissal

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will amend the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 to abolish the necessity to have a qualifying period of two years' continuous employment to claim unfair dismissal, where an employee alleges that the reason for the dismissal was an attempt to enforce a statutory right.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many complaints were made to industrial tribunals in each of the last five years for which records are available for unfair dismissal because of pregnancy; how many and what percentage were settled before hearing; how many and what percentage reached a hearing; and how many and what percentage were successful.

Mr. McLoughlin: The table sets out the information on claims to industrial tribunals of unfair dismissal on the grounds of pregnancy under section 60 of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 in the five financial years to 31 March 1991.

Year	All cases	Settled before hearing	Per cent.	Reached full hearing	Per cent.	Successful at full hearing	Per cent.
1990-91	47	36	(76·6)	11	(23·4)	4	(8·5)
1989-90	44	34	(77·3)	10	(22·7)	5	(11·4)
1988-89	92	60	(65·2)	28	(30·4)	12	(13)
1987-88	115	85	(73·9)	28	(24·4)	12	(10·4)
1986-87	169	126	(74·6)	43	(25·4)	25	(14·8)

Child Care

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps she is taking to encourage the improvement of child care after school and during holidays.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government have announced their intention to pay grants through training and enterprise councils for the establishment of after-school and school holiday child care schemes. The Department is consulting relevant organisations about implementation of this grant programme. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment has had discussions with the working group which advises her on women's issues and expects to announce further details of the programme later this year.

Qualifications (Recognition)

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which diplomas, certificates and other formal qualifications will be subject to directives for mutual recognition under article 57 of the treaty on European union.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The treaty on European union —Maastricht—does not directly affect the principles of mutual recognition. It changes the procedure for agreement on any new directives, which might be proposed in future.

There are already two directives which cover this area under the Single European Act which is based on articles in the treaty of Rome.

The first general directive for mutual recognition came into force on 4 January 1991 for degree level qualifications —although as yet not all member states have implemented it.

The second general directive has been agreed and will be in force in June 1994. It extends the system for recognition to include qualifications awarded on completion of higher education courses of one to three years and equivalents including national and Scottish vocational qualifications.

Ratification of the European economic area agreement will extend mutual recognition to the European Free Trade Association countries.

Training

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what steps she intends to take to ensure that the United Kingdom provides national retraining programmes and professional child care for women at the workplace, on an equal basis with other EC member countries;

(2) what steps she intends to take to bring the level of investment in training for women in the United Kingdom to a level comparable with that in other EC countries.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We already have substantial arrangements for training for women, in particular within the employment training programme. There are flexibilities within the programme which allow women to reconcile their training with their domestic commitments and which offer support towards the cost of child care.

Investment in training provision is further encouraged by the investors in people initiative, which rewards employers who develop all their employees, and by a new national training award for the training of women.

I will also be introducing a grant to help set up out-of-school child care provision, which I hope will have the involvement of employers. My Department will continue to encourage employers to provide workplace child care facilities for all employees with children.

Against this background, I have written to all training and enterprise council chairmen specifically asking them to help by devising local strategies to take forward action on women's issues. Training will have a key role in these.

At a European level, the United Kingdom is an active member of the IRIS network of training schemes for women which promotes interchange of ideas and good practice, and through which good United Kingdom practice is widely shared with our European partners.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will provide tables showing the latest results from the youth training leavers survey for each TEC—training and enterprise council—area in England and Wales and each LEC—local enterprise company—area in Scotland broken down to show the number and proportion of youth training leavers who (a) had worked towards a vocational qualification or credit, (b) had gained a vocational qualification or credit, (c) had not gained a vocational qualification or credit, (d) were awaiting results and (e) had completed their training.

Mr. McLoughlin: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on what occasions the European Commission has refused to pay grants from the social fund to the United Kingdom to assist industrial training; and what were the reasons for each refusal.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Commission has yet to make certain 1992 payments in respect of the fund's objectives 2 and 5b—areas of industrial and rural decline—and has provided no reasons for this delay. The Commission has now agreed to release all 1992 advances in respect of objectives 3 and 4—long-term unemployment and young people.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will provide tables showing the latest results from the youth training leavers survey for each TEC area in England and Wales and each LEC area in Scotland broken down to show the number and proportion of youth training leavers who were (a) in a full-time job with their work experience employer, (b) in a full-time job with another employer, (c) employed in their own business, (d) in a part-time job, (e) in voluntary work, (f) on a full-time course at a college or training centre, (g) on another youth training scheme, (h) doing something else or (i) unemployed.

Mr. McLoughlin: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she plans to publish (a) the monthly reports of supply and demand of youth training places in each TEC area which are required from 7 July and (b) the quarterly statistical stock takes by her Department of the youth training supply and demand position on the guarantee in each TEC area.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information on the numbers of young people covered by the YT guarantee will be subject to the new monitoring arrangements which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment announced in the House on 7 July. Information gathered in the quarterly stock takes is in the form of estimates that are not sufficiently reliable to merit publication.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list the number of young persons in the Durham constituency who have gained full-time employment after completing the youth training scheme.

Mr. McLoughlin: It is estimated from the latest available information that 60 per cent. of youth training trainees who completed their agreed training in the Durham training and enterprise council area during April to September 1991 were in full-time employment six months after leaving.

Severe Hardship Payments

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many cases were referred to a training and enterprise council guarantee liaison officer after a young person had been on severe hardship payments for eight weeks; and of these how many young people were found a youth training place by the guarantee liaison officer, in (a) January, (b) April and (c) July.

Mr. McLoughlin: The following information has been provided by the Benefits Agency:

(a) January 258 referrals;
(b) April 579 referrals;
(c) July (information not yet available).

The information relates to referrals to TECs in England and Wales and local enterprise companies in Scotland.

Information on the numbers of young people who were found a YT place by a guarantee liaison officer as a result of the referral is not available.

Travel-to-Interview Scheme

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when she expects to announce the results of the review of the travel-to-interview scheme; if she will introduce provision for assistance for multiple job search expenses within the daily travelling distance; what changes to the eligibility rules and total resources allocated to the scheme are being considered; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Neil Mulberry

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the date on which she will provide redundancy payment to Mr. Neil Mulberry.

Mr. McLoughlin: I have written to my hon. Friend, giving full details of this case.

Noise at Work Regulations 1989

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate has been made of the cost to employers of complying with the Noise at Work Regulations 1989 in 1990 and 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Health and Safety Commission published a consultative document in 1987 on the draft Noise at Work Regulations. This included an assessment of the costs and benefits of the proposed regulations, which estimated their total cost to be between £240 million to £320 million, spread over a working lifetime. The main costs were likely to arise from the requirement for noise assessments—£20 million—personal protection programmes for those exposed to noise above 85 dB(A)—£127 million—and those for noise reduction measures for exposures above 90dB(A)—£85 million to £175 million.

Social Fund

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations she intends to make over delays in processing European social fund payments for voluntary sector projects.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following vigorous representations by the Department, the European Commission has now agreed to release all ESF moneys due to the United Kingdom in respect of first advances for projects operating in 1992 under objectives 3 and 4 of the fund—long-term unemployment and young people. Representations continue over the Commission's inexcusable and unexplained delay in releasing 1992 advances in respect of certain programmes under objectives 5 and 2b—areas of industrial and rural decline.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the proposed budget of the European social fund.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The European Commission has proposed that the total European social fund budget for 1993 should be some £4,185 million—at the current exchange rate.

Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what amendments have been made to SI 1991 No. 2431 on the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988, in regard to item II in schedule 2, following the fifth report of the Joint Committee on Statutory Instruments, 1991-92, HC 14-v.

Mr. McLoughlin: I will write to the hon. Member.

Employment Service

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the main achievements of the Employment Service as a next steps agency in 1991-92; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: I am delighted to announce that the Employment Service met or exceeded the great majority of its performance targets in 1991-92. It helped 1·332 million unemployed people back into work; and exceeded its targets for paying benefit accurately and on time. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment has received the ES annual report and accounts for 1991-92 from the chief executive.

As a next steps agency, the ES operates under a published framework document agreed with my right hon. Friend. The start of the review of the current ES framework document, due for completion by the end of March 1993, was delayed by the general election. My right hon. Friend has, therefore, extended the life of the current ES framework document by six months. At the same time, she has extended the contract of employment of the current ES chief executive, Mr. Mike Fogden, by six months, to March 1993. My right hon. Friend has also agreed a number of technical amendments to the current ES framework document, which take effect immediately.

I have arranged for copies of the ES annual report and accounts for 1991-92 and the full textual changes to the ES framework document to be placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Radioactive Materials

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 6 July, Official Report, column 45, if he will list each of the sites that exceed the threshold for exemptions from the Radioactive Substances Act 1960.

Mr. Aitken: My Department is reviewing holdings of radioactive substances which exceed statutory exemption limits. The review is expected to be complete by the end of this year. It would be premature to provide the list the hon. Gentleman requests until that time.

Polaris

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what studies have been carried out into methods of disposal of Polaris missiles;

(2) by what means Polaris missiles will be disposed of.

Mr. Aitken: Disposal of Polaris missiles will be undertaken as the force is phased out and progressively replaced by Trident. Various methods for the disposal of the missiles are currently under consideration.

Trident

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to fit global positioning system units on British Trident missiles.

Mr. Aitken: None. However, global positioning system units will be fitted to each of the four Vanguard class Trident missile submarines, and will act as a check system for the submarines' primary inertial navigation system.

HMS Vanguard

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will define the terms "in-service date" and "formally operational" as used by his Department; and if he will make a statement on the difference between the in-service date of HMS Vanguard and the date upon which it will be fully operational.

Mr. Aitken: The in-service date is defined normally as the date by which the equipment will contribute to the operational capability of the service concerned. For Royal Navy vessels other than strategic ballistic nuclear submarines, the in-service date represents the date of acceptance from the contractor of the first of class; such vessels become formally operational after a series of trials. For Vanguard class submarines, trials will precede the in-service date, at which point they are expected to become fully operational.

Weapons (Soviet Union)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the purchase and subsequent dismantling of weapons of the former Soviet Union in order to prevent these weapons from being sold on the open market.

Mr. Aitken: This option has been rejected. It would not deal with the problem of the huge size of the military industries of the former Soviet Union, and could act as an incentive to further arms production.

Porton Down

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the establishment of an ethics committee to oversee scientific procedures on animals at the chemical and biological defence establishment, Porton Down.

Mr. Aitken: All scientific procedures carried out on animals at this establishment are undertaken within the provisions of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. This imposes strict controls on the use of living animals in research and requires each programme of work to be justified in advance. The Act also established an Animals Procedures Committee which advises the Home Secretary on such matters as the legitimate requirements of science and industry and the protection of animals against avoidable suffering and unnecessary use in scientific procedures. I see no need to establish an ethics committee.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what would be the defence implications of United Kingdom participation in a multilateral, verifiable fissile materials cut-off.

Mr. Aitken: Unlike the nuclear super powers, the United Kingdom does not have large stocks of surplus fissile material upon which to draw. United Kingdom production will continue to be kept at the minimum level necessary to satisfy our nuclear deterent and naval reactor needs.

Civil Servants' Shareholdings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The rules of conduct governing share ownership are set out in departmental standing instructions available to both industrial and non-industrial staff. These make it clear that there is to be no conflict of interest between private and official interests.

My Department's next steps agencies are subject to these same rules.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what visits he has made too his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom's presidency of the EC.

Mr. Aitken: My right hon. and learned Friend has made no such visits. However, as the Minister with responsibility for deregulation matters within the MOD, I can confirm that this Department will play its full part in taking forward the Government's commitment to deregulation and competition.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when it is expected the Royal Navy will take delivery of the Ferranti data link stimulator for the type 23 frigate.

Mr. Aitken: The data link stimulator is scheduled to be delivered to the type 23 shore integration facility early in 1993.

Minesweepers

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what have been the consequences for the training of reservists of the withdrawal from service of two Royal Navy River class minesweepers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have been no consequences for the training of reservists as such following the withdrawal from service of two River class minesweepers, although some reservists now have to travel to other units for their sea training.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many River class minesweepers are in service with the Royal Navy; and where they are based.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are a total of 12 River class minesweepers. Two—HMS Ribble and HMS Helmsdale—are maintained in reserve at Portsmouth. HMS Blackwater is deployed operationally as part of the fishery protection squadron and is based at Rosyth. The nine remaining vessels are used by the RNR and are based as follows:

HMS Waverney	South Wales
HMS Helford	Ulster
HMS Orwell	Tyne
HMS Carron	Severn
HMS Humber	Mersey
HMS Spey	Forth
HMS Dovey	Clyde
HMS Itchen	Solent
HMS Arun	Sussex

Army Recruitment

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total cost of the present recruitment campaign for the Army running in national cinemas.

Mr. Aitken: The cost is £255,000.

Army Redundancies

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimate of the costs of the present programme of redundancies in the Army.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The cost to the Army in 1992-93 of the first tranche of redundancies is in the order of £210 million. As I said in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Mr. Merchant) on 8 July 1992, Official Report, column 185, details of the criteria of phase 2 of the redundancy programme will be announced shortly but it is likely that it will affect some 6,500 personnel. Final decisions on the size and make-up of this tranche, and of any further measures, have not yet been made.

Nuclear Storage Bases

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the purpose of the convoy which arrived at Coulport nuclear storage base on 10 July.

Mr. Aitken: It is not our practice to comment on operational matters.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what obligations the EC directive 89/618/Euratom places upon the United Kingdom Government in relation to the transportation of convoys to nuclear storage bases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The United Kingdom Health and Safety Commission has issued a Consultative Document—CD37—setting out its proposals for the adoption of EC directive 89/618/Euratom within United Kingdom regulations. The Ministry of Defence will of course comply with the proposed United Kingdom regulations in the form in which they are finally implemented.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what obligations and procedures exist to provide advance notice to (a) the public and (b) relevant local authorities of convoys destined for nuclear storage bases;

(2) what discussions took place with the appropriate local authorities concerning the convoy which went through their districts on the way to the Coulport nuclear weapons storage base on 10 July.

Mr. Aitken: Any arrangements for liaison in connection with military convoys depend on the nature of the cargo being carried.

Gurkhas

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it remains his policy to reduce the brigade of Gurkhas to around 2,500 men after the withdrawal from Hong Kong in 1997.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Menwith Hill

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 364, what communications are leased exclusively for defence purposes; and what are the indirect links between Menwith Hill station and Hunterstones tower.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Various communications links are leased exclusively for defence purposes, but I am unable to comment further on their precise nature for reasons of national security.

Chemical and Biological Weapons

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) under what defence agreement information from the defence microbiology division at the chemical and biological defence establishment, Porton Down, is passed to the United States Department of Defence;

(2) how many personnel from the United States Department of Defence are stationed either permanently or temporarily at the chemical and biological defence establishment at Porton Down; and for what purpose;

(3) what quantity of VX nerve gas is currently stocked by his Department;

(4) in what years CS gas was produced at his Department's establishment at Nancekuke, Cornwall; and in what quantities it was manufactured each year;

(5) pursuant to his answer of 26 June, Official Report, column 359, what other uses have been made of shellfish toxins by his Department; and whether his Department has collaborated with the United States Department of Defence in the studies and tests involving shellfish toxins;

(6) how many times personnel from the United States Department of Defence have visited the chemical and biological defence establishment, Porton Down, in each year since 1979; and what was the purpose of these visits;

(7) in which years his Department's scientists carried out studies and tests on quantities of VX nerve gas prepared by the United States of America; what was the purpose of these tests and studies; and how many British service personnel have been subjected to tests involving VX nerve gas;

(8) what use the chemical and biological defence establishment Porton Down, has made of the protein saxitoxin;

(9) how many tests have been carried out since 1967 involving the incapacitating agent BZ and British service personnel; when these tests were carried out; whether all the personnel were volunteers; and whether BZ is currently stocked by any of his Department's establishments;

(10) what information about its research into CR gas the United Kingdom has passed onto the United States of America; under which defence agreement this information was exchanged; and when the information was transferred.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: These matters are for the chemical and biological defence establishment under its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what tests and studies his Department has conducted on the chemical agents picloram and cacodylic acid; when these tests and studies were carried out; whether they were carried out on humans; and whether the results of these tests and studies have been passed on to the United States Department of Defence.

Mr. Aitken: The substances picloram and cacodylic acid are herbicides. No work has been carried out on these materials by my Department.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Ministry of Defence scientists first conducted research into CR gas; and in which Ministry of Defence establishment these scientists were working.

Mr. Aitken: This is a matter for the chemical and biological defence establishment under its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive of CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy on the use of CR gas (a) within the United Kingdom and (b) outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The MOD's policy for the use of CR gas is in accordance with the draft text of the chemical weapons convention currently being negotiated in Geneva.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Britain and the United States exchanged technical and scientific information on (a) binary nerve gas technology and (b) VX nerve gas; and under which defence agreements these exchanges took place.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 21 May 1992, Official Report, column 255-56, concerning international agreements on chemical and biological defence.

Under the agreements relating to research information has been exchanged on a continuing basis on the potential hazard from chemical and biological agents including VX nerve gas and possible binary gases with the aim of ensuring that the protective measures for the United Kingdom armed forces are as effective as possible.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 June, Official Report, column 411, at which establishment in Australia the environmental testing of the S10 respirator took place in the 1980s; and whether any other British equipment related to chemical and biological warfare has been tested in Australia or New Zealand since 1962.

Mr. Aitken: Environmental testing of the S10 respirator was carried out by the Australian materials research laboratory.

I understand that the Australian Government carried out tests of United Kingdom agent monitoring equipment in the mid-1980s in support of Australian defence requirements.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many research projects at the chemical and biological defence establishment at Porton Down have been funded by the United States Department of Defence since 1979; and what is the total worth of these projects.

Mr. Aitken: This is a matter for the chemical and biological defence establishment under its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive of CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much CR gas is stocked by his Department; and how much stock has been purchased from external sources or produced internally by his Department.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It would not be in the national interest to disclose the size of our stockpile or its source.

Dr. Liam Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key performance targets have been set for 1992-93 for the chief executive of the chemical and biological defence establishment.

Mr. Aitken: The chief executive of the chemical and biological defence establishment at Porton Down is responsible for research to ensure that the United Kingdom Armed Forces are provided with effective protective measures against the threat that chemical and biological weapons may be used against them. He has been set the following challenging key performance targets for 1992-93:

Improved Delivery of the Programme

1. In 1992-93 to achieve, within agreed timescales, 85 per cent. of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment programme milestones required by the service chiefs of staff and other customers.
2. In 1992-93 to achieve 80 per cent. of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment programme milestones required by service chiefs of staff and other customers to agreed cost and to seek progressive improvements in performance in future years.
3. To sustain the CB research programme and the capability of CBDE to respond effectively to operational emergencies by maintaining scientific and technical staff to at least 66 per cent. of the total planned manpower.

More Efficient Use of Resources

4. To increase the overall efficiency of CBDE by more than 2·5 per cent. over the financial year 1992-93 with emphasis on improving output efficiency.
5. To establish a database by 31 March 1993 to enable the percentage of indirect to direct costs to be determined more accurately with a view to improving value for money for MoD by reducing the percentage of indirect costs in subsequent years.
6. To complete the programme of efficiency reviews of the remainder of the support services by 31 March 1993 and initiate market testing, where appropriate, and to implement the recommendations which would lead to greater efficiency.

Development of Management Systems

To extend the improved resource allocation and cost attribution system by inclusion of major and minor works and maintenance costs by March 1993.

Quality and the Customer

8. To improve the means of assessing the quality of the scientific and technical outputs by March 1993 and to apply this to the outputs for MoD and other key customers by March 1994.

Members of Parliament (Consultation)

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his reply to the hon. Member for South Antrim on 14 July, what facilities are extended to the relevant hon. Member when consultation is decided upon.

Mr. Aitken: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Crown Estate Commissioners

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much property is leased by his Department that is owned or managed by the Crown Estate Commissioners; and how much was paid in rent, leases or fees to the Crown Estate Commissioners for such property for each of the last five years.

Mr. Aitken: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Bullying

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the reason Private Patrick Callaghan and Private Bryson Dart of the 1 Battalion Worcester and Sherwood Foresters have been kept in custody in Cyprus; for how long they have been kept in custody; when they can be expected to face an inquiry after their allegation of bullying; what promises were made to them and their families that there would be no retribution following their allegations; and why they are not allowed to carry on with their normal duties while awaiting the investigation.

Mr. Aitken: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he will take following Private Anthony Evans's case to ensure ethnic minorities in the British Army are not subjected to bullying or racism in the future.

Mr. Aitken: It has been made clear throughout the services that bullying and racism will not be tolerated. Measures have been introduced to eradicate this form of unacceptable behaviour.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what compensation Private Anthony Evans, formerly of the Royal Regiment of Wales, will receive for the loss of his Army career and the mental and physical injury he suffered during his service in the Army.

Mr. Aitken: The Army Board is awaiting comments from Anthony Evans's solicitors on the findings of the board of inquiry held to consider his allegations. Once those comments have been received the Army Board will consider the question of compensation.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the extent of bullying and racism in the British Army; and what steps have been taken to eradicate them.

Mr. Aitken: The Army takes a serious view of all forms of bullying and racism; all service personnel are aware that behaviour of this kind will not be tolerated. Any allegations or complaints of ill-treatment are investigated. Depending on the strength of the evidence, disciplinary action will be taken against the perpetrators.

A range of measures to combat bullying and racism have been introduced, including the banning of initiation ceremonies. These measures include the establishment of additional posts in the training organisation to allow officers and NCOs to devote more time to their supervisory role. Posts have also been established for the Women's Royal Voluntary Service to help combat bullying.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disciplinary action will be taken against Army personnel involved in Private Anthony Evans's case; and when it will be made public.

Mr. Aitken: Disciplinary action was taken in 1991 by the commanding officer against those held to be responsible. The disciplinary action taken is a private matter between those individuals concerned and their commanding officer.

Defence Structure

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes are planned to the defence structure of the United Kingdom in order to support the European union as a cohesive force in international affairs in accordance with article J1(4) of the treaty on European union.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We plan no such changes. The Maastricht agreements make clear that the Western European Union will "elaborate and implement decisions and actions of the Union which have defence implications"—(article J.4.2.), and that the union's common foreign and security policy "shall respect the obligations of certain Member States under the North Atlantic Treaty and be compatible with the common security and defence policy established within that framework"—(article J.4.4.).

Troops (Sunderland Polling Station)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why troops were posted at Dykelands road polling station in the Sunderland, North constituency on 9 April.

Mr. Aitken: The Dykelands road polling station is situated within a Territorial Army centre occupied by 251 Field Ambulance (V). For security reasons it was necessary to position TA soldiers at the entrance in order to search the bags of those entering and to escort them to the room which was being used as a polling booth. Both male and female soldiers carried out these duties and they were unarmed.

Antares

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Commander in Chief Fleet has completed his consideration of any further disciplinary action following the court martial arising from the sinking of the Antares; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. The Commander in Chief Fleet is considering the matter.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what instruction non-commissioned officers and soldiers have in the provisions of the Race Relations Act 1976.

Mr. Aitken: During basic training, soldiers receive instruction on a wide range of interpersonal skills, which includes the avoidance of all forms of discrimination and stresses their unacceptability in the armed forces.

Nuclear Proliferation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the policy underlying the omission of mention of United Kingdom obligations under article VI of the nuclear proliferation treaty in the preparation of paragraphs 135-137, on nuclear proliferation, on page 22 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1992", Cm 1981.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom's obligations under the nuclear non-proliferation treaty are a matter of public record.

Nuclear Warheads (Expenditure)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under which top level budget holder, as set out in figure 13 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1992", Cm 1981, is the expenditure included on (a) nuclear warhead testing and (b) nuclear warhead design and development.

Mr. Aitken: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, further to paragraphs 342-348 on defence and the environment, in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1992", Cm 1981, if he will set out the present programmes managed by his Department for the minimisation and disposal of toxic and radioactive wastes and details of future plans developed by his Department to deal with these wastes, respectively.

Mr. Aitken: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

ADMINISTRATION COMMITTEE

Members (Identification)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what arrangements have been made to help police officers at the entrance to the Palace of Westminster and its outbuildings to recognise and identify recently elected hon. Members; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: While the Administration Committee has general oversight of arrangements for access to that part of the Palace under the control of the House, day to day responsibility rests with the Serjeant at Arms. I shall ask him to write to the hon. Member.

Executive Agencies' Answers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what plans he has to change the arrangements for publishing answers to hon. Members' questions received from the next steps agencies.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: At its meeting on 8 July the Committee resolved that, from the first sitting day after the summer recess, letters sent to Members by agency chief executives in response to parliamentary questions should be printed among the written answers in the daily Official Report, beneath a standard form of reply given by the Minister with responsibility. The Cabinet Office has been advised of this decision and is understood to be considering its implications.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sport

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he expects to make a further announcement about the business sponsorship incentive scheme for sport.

Mr. Mellor: The scheme is due to be launched in September this year. All those likely to have an interest will be sent detailed guidance on the scheme and the application procedure.

Sports and Arts

Ms. Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the pursuits his Department has classified as (a) sports and (b) arts within the remit of his Department.

Mr. Mellor: My Department makes no such classifications. We are concerned with the promotion of all sport and active recreation and with the encouragement of artistic activities generally which bring pleasure to many.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Mellor: Divisions and branches within my Department pursue objectives in support of my responsibilities, which cover the arts, the Government art collection, broadcasting, film, tourism, heritage and sport. The spread of responsibilities between divisions is as follows:

Arts Division

Arts Council. Crafts Council. Business sponsorship of the arts. Local authority arts funding issues and arts taxation. EC and Council of Europe cultural policy.

Museums and Galleries Division

National and local museums and galleries in England.

Libraries and Information Division

Libraries and information services. British Library, public libraries in England.

British Library St. Pancras Project

Management of British Library's St. Pancras Project.

Works of Art Unit

The mobile heritage; export licensing of antiques.

Historic Royal Palaces Agency

An Executive Agency set up 1 October 1989. Responsible for managing the Historic Royal Palaces open to the public.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom's Presidency of the EC.

Mr. Mellor: I have made no such visits since 18 April. However, I can confirm that this Department will play its full part in taking forward Her Majesty's Government's commitment to deregulation.

Barcelona Olympics

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what ministerial and other representation Her Majesty's Government will have at the Barcelona Olympics.

Mr. Mellor: I shall be attending the Olympic games in Barcelona as will my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, my right and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for National Heritage. Her Majesty's ambassador in Spain will also be attending.

European Arts Festival

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many copies of the guide to the European arts festival have been printed; what are the actual costs of its preparation, printing and distribution, respectively; and what steps were taken by Her Majesty's Government to encourage or assist in promoting the events listed therein.

Mr. Mellor: More than 1 million copies of the festival programme have been printed and are being distributed throughout the country. Design and other preparatory costs were £14,000; printing, £98,000; and distribution, £41,000.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, ministerial colleagues and I were present at the launch of the festival on 1 July. We look forward to attending a number of events during the festival. We will take every opportunity to draw attention to this rich and varied programme that should appeal to everyone. I have written to all Members of both Houses enclosing a copy of the programme.

My Department continues to work closely with the festival director in promoting the festival overall. The promotion of individual events rests mainly with the local organisers, with the full support of the festival team.

Civil Servants (Shareholdings)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions since April on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the Next Steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service and Science on 7 July, Official Report, column 101. My Department has not issued any further guidance to staff; nor have any shareholdings been reported to our establishment officer.

Historic Royal Palaces

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what targets he has set for the Historic Royal Palaces agency.

Mr. Key: The following targets have been set for the Historic Royal Palaces agency for the financial year 1992-93:

	Target
Financial Targets:
Commercial surplus	£ 3·8 million
Call on taxpayer	£10·0 million
Visitor Rating Targets:[1]
Value for money	0·7 to 1
Enjoyment	1·3 to 1·7
Helpful and friendly staff	1·3 to 1·7
Efficiency Target:
2 per cent. saving on running costs
Conservation Target:
Complete surveys and draw up programme of works for:
Contents by March 1993
Buildings by November 1993
Citizen's Charter:
To implement its provisions within the Agency
Contracting Out:
To complete the studies agreed by Ministers last December

[1] Visitor ratings are assessed from market research interviews with 900 visitors, undertaken by independent consultants each summer. 2·0 is Extremely Good; 1·5 is Very Good; 1·0 is Quite Good; 0 is OK; −1·0 is Quite Poor; −2·0 is Very Poor.

Tourism Council

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the outcome of the Tourism Council meeting in Luxembourg on 4 June.

Mr. Key: I represented the United Kingdom. Ministers agreed on a decision for a Community action plan to assist tourism for a three-year period, commencing on 1 January next year. Ministers also noted two factual Commission documents which outline Community policies and measures affecting tourism and the Community resources available for tourism.

Crown Jewels

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the ownership of the Crown jewels.

Mr. Mellor: The Crown jewels are owned by the sovereign in right of the Crown.

Welsh Television

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has had concerning renegotiation of the television franchise for Wales and the west; what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Independent Broadcasting Authority on the future status of undertakings made in the course of successful franchise applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: None. These are matters for the Independent Television Commission.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has had concerning the maintenance of a Welsh identity in the commercial television franchise for Wales after 1 January 1993 (a) in the Welsh language and (b) in the English language.

Mr. Mellor: We have received no such representations in either Welsh or English.

Football (Safety)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultations he has had with the Football Licensing Authority concerning amendments to the model safety certificates for (a) premier and first division, (b) second and third division English League clubs and (c) Scottish Football League clubs.

Mr. Mellor: None.

Maastricht Treaty

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what grounds Her Majesty's Government agreed to the proposed article 128 of the treaty of Rome under the Maastricht treaty.

Mr. Mellor: The Community has increasingly become involved in cultural activity. Article 128 of the Maastricht treaty establishes this for the first time on a clear legal basis. The text underlines the importance of respect for national and regional cultural diversity and the fact that Community action will support and supplement action by the member states. At United Kingdom insistence, action can be taken only on the basis of unanimity.

Imperial War Museum

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress he is making in completing the redevelopment plans at the imperial war museum, Lambeth road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 15 July 1992]: I commend the success of the first development phase at the museum, which was completed in 1989. I have received the imperial war museum's 1992 corporate plan which indicates the programme and objectives for the next stage of development at the Lambeth road building, and this will be assessed against all other spending priorities on museums and galleries. It is hoped that an announcement on the Government's spending plans will be made in November this year.

DTI Inspections

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if he will list any advisers retained by his Department since 1987 who have been criticised in published reports by DTI inspectors;

(2) if he will list any public appointments by his Department since 1987 which have involved people from organisations criticised in published reports by DTI inspectors.

Mr. Mellor: The information is not held centrally in the form requested. My Department takes all the relevant factors into account when considering such appointments.

Public Bodies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which non-departmental public bodies are sponsored by his Department; which of these are audited by the National Audit Office; which firms of private accountants audits each of the others; by what method of tendering contracts to such firms are awarded; and for what duration.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 10 July 1992]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the table, which lists the executive non-departmental public bodies directly funded by the Department of National Heritage and gives details of their audit certification arrangements. The method of selecting auditors, including competitive tendering, varies between institutions. Reviews of appointments may be held annually or at other periods up to five years.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disposable Income

Ms. Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average disposable income of households, and of adults and children, within households, at 1989 prices, for each year from 1979 to 1989, inclusive, for the poorest and for the richest 20 per cent. of households, before and after equivalisation, based on the data collected for the households-below-average-income analysis.

Mr. Burt: The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The information that is available is in the table. HBAI presents figures in a standard format: only for years 1979, 1981, 1987 and 1988-89—that is, 1988 combined with 1989—before and after housing costs; equivalised for household size and composition; using the median as the average measure for subdivisions of the income distribution; and at April 1992 prices. This is in line with the recommendations made in the stocktaking report produced last year after consultation with independent external analysts.

It is not our practice to produce unequivalised information.

Average equivalised income at April 1992 prices

Before housing costs:

	1979 £	1981 £	1987 £	1988-89 £
Bottom 20 per cent.	96	94	100	100
Top 20 per cent.	289	298	376	402

After housing costs:

	1979 £	1981 £	1987 £	1988-89 £
Bottom 20 per cent.	81	78	80	81
Top 20 per cent.	253	262	329	355

Ms. Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the mean net disposable income, at 1989 prices, of the poorest 10 per cent. and 20 per cent. of United Kingdom households combined for each year 1979 to 1989, inclusive, before and after equivalisation and before and after taking housing costs into account, when ranked respectively (a) without adding the full value of free and subsidised school meals (b) adding that value and (c) adding that value and also the value in kind of services and other goods specifying the services involved.

Mr. Burt: The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The information that is available is in the table. HBAI presents figures in a standard format: only for years 1979, 1981, 1987 and 1988-89—that is, 1988 combined with 1989—before and after housing costs; equivalised for household size and composition; using the median as the average measure for subdivisions of the income distribution; and at April 1992 prices. This is in line with the recommendations made in the stocktaking report produced last year after consultation with independent external analysts.

It is not our practice to produce unequivalised information, nor to present mean averages for subdivisions of the income distribution.

Average equivalised income at April 1992 prices

(a) income excluding free school meals

Before housing costs:

	1979 £	1981 £	1987 £	1988-89 £
Bottom 20 per cent.	95	93	99	100
Bottom 10 per cent.	83	82	87	85

After housing costs:

	1979 £	1981 £	1987 £	1988-89 £
Bottom 20 per cent.	80	77	78	80
Bottom 10 per cent.	68	65	67	65

(b) income including free school meals

Before housing costs:

	1979 £	1981 £	1987 £	1988-89 £
Bottom 20 per cent.	96	94	100	100
Bottom 10 per cent.	84	83	88	86

After housing costs:

	1979 £	1981 £	1987 £	1988-89 £
Bottom 20 per cent.	81	78	80	81
Bottom 10 per cent.	70	67	67	66

(c) other incomes in kind included in the HBAI income measure are:
free meals and food provided by employers free coal and coke luncheon vouchers
free school milk
free welfare milk

These are included in the figures provided at (a) and (b) above.

Ms. Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was for each type of household in the family expenditure survey, the average disposable income at 1989 prices, including the value of free and subsidised school meals, of the poorest 10 per cent. and poorest 20 per cent. of households, after taking account of housing costs, for each year 1979 to 1989, inclusive, for each of the principal regions of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Burt: The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The information that is available is in the table. HBAI: presents figures in a standard format: only for years 1979, 1981, 1987 and 1988-89—that is, 1988 combined with 1989—before and after housing costs; equivalised for household size and composition; using the median as the average measure for subdivisions of the income distribution; and at April 1992 prices. This is in line with the recommendations made in the stocktaking report produced last year after consultation with independent external analysts.

Due to the small sample sizes figures for the bottom 10 per cent., split by family type cannot be reliably estimated —HBAI presents detailed breakdowns only for the bottom 20 per cent. For similar reasons, regional breakdowns of HBAI are not produced.

Average equivalised income at April 1992 prices for the bottom 20 per cent. by household family type

Couple with children	84	73	76	78
Couple without children	107	105	94	105
Single with children	69	72	75	70

Ms. Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the numbers of children of different ages in the poorest 20 per cent. and richest 80 per cent. of households, ranked according to the net disposable income of the households in which they live, before and after equivalisation, for 1979 and for 1989, on the basis of households below average income data drawn from the family expenditure survey.

Mr. Burt: Information for the years 1979 and 1988-89 —that is, 1988 combined with 1989—before and after housing costs, and equivalised for household size and composition is in the table. It is not our practice to produce unequivalised information.

Correspondence

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the disability living allowance unit in Blackpool intends to reply to the letters of 15 March, 10 May and 21 June from the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston regarding his constituent Mrs Mary Muir.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Pension Age

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how his Department publicised the consultation period for the discussion paper "Options for Equality in State Pension Age";

(2) if he will list the organisation and individuals to whom his Department circulated the discussion paper "Options for Equality in State Pension Ages" and those who responded to the paper.

Miss Widdecombe: A period of public discussion was announced in the statement of my right hon. Friend on 26 June 1991 and press releases were issued in the usual way. When the discussion paper was published on 18 December 1991, publicity was by means of a written answer on 17 December to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) column 145. Two press releases were also issued, the first on 18 December and the second on 17 June 1992. The latter was a reminder of the deadline for responses, 30 June. Both press releases inspired a large number of reports in the press, both national and local, and on radio and television.

The paper was circulated to pension industry organisations, the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress, the Equal Opportunities Commission, the Occupational Pensions Board and the Pension Ombudsman. Copies were also sent to the Social Security Select Committee and Members of Parliament. The publicity surrounding the publication of the paper resulted in inquiries from a number of interested organisations, to which copies were sent.

To date, more than 3,700 responses have been received from both organisations and individuals.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will delay any decision on the equalisation of the pension age to allow time for (a) a further period of consultation with organisations affecting women in the United Kingdom on the financial consequences for women which would result from raising the pension age to 63 or 65 years and (b) a wider consideration of other aspects of the pension systems which would discriminate against women or men.

Miss Widdecombe: The discussion period on state pension age ended on 30 June, and over 3,700 responses have been received. We now intend to examine those responses in detail and we will also be taking the opportunity of meeting the representatives of various organisations with an interest, including those concerned with the position of women. We will be announcing the Government's proposals on this complex and important issue in due course after consideration of the views expressed.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Miss Widdecombe: The Government continue to place a high priority on helping small businesses, through improvements to the business climate, through deregulation and through specific programmes of support and assistance.

Measures operated by the Department specifically to assist small business include increasing, from April 1992, the qualifying threshold for small employer's relief—SER —for statutory sick pay from £15,000 to £16,000.

Other measures aimed at business in general, which includes small business, include:

(i) Establishing a group of employers and employers' representatives specifically to consider the impact on employers of a combined Autumn and Budget statement in December. Small businesses are recognised as an important group to be consulted and are represented on the group.

(ii) Increasing the level below which deductions under pay-as-you-earn—PAYE—and national insurance contributions—NIC—can be paid to Inland Revenue quarterly rather than monthly to £450 for deductions made in periods beginning after 5 April 1992. Twenty-five thousand businesses should benefit from this increase, bringing the total number of businesses who could be helped by this measure to 725,000 —more than half of all employers.

The Department has a system to monitor proposals which have an impact on business, to ensure that the needs of small businesses are taken into account, although there are no performance indicators specifically for monitoring achievements in this area. However, we attach particular importance to action taken to help small firms and will continue to explore further ways of doing so.

Pension Premiums

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review any provision for the extended refund of pension premiums.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department, within its responsibilities for the regulation of occupational pension schemes, has no provision for the extended refund of pension premiums and therefore we have no plans to review.

Disability Allowances

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether a person in receipt of either (a) severe disablement allowance, (b) invalidity benefit, (c) income support with the disability premium, (d) community charge benefit with the disability premium or (e) housing benefit with the disability premium, who subsequently receives disability working allowance and who is then off work sick for over 10 weeks at the time of renewal claim for disability working allowance, will lose the right to renew their claim.

Mr. Scott: People who qualify initially for disability working allowance—DWA—by virtue of one of these benefits can claim again using the same qualifying benefit during the six weeks before and the eight weeks after their award expires—14 weeks in all. They also have to satisfy the remunerative work test in order to qualify for DWA and cannot do so in any weeks when off work sick. To satisfy this test, they must work 16 hours or more either in the week they claim or in one of the two weeks before or they must be expected by the employer to work 16 hours or more in the week after the week in which they claim. The effect of this is that depending on when illness begins, they would have to be absent from work for the whole of a period of 17 weeks spanning the date their award falls to be renewed to lose the right of renewal using one of these benefits.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to amend the disability living allowance to ensure that the criteria for award of the higher mobility component do not exclude people with dementia and other progressive neurological conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: New help is available to people suffering from dementia through the new, lower rates of both components of disability living allowance. We have no plans to amend the criteria for awarding the higher rate of the mobility component of disability living allowance.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households in Birmingham, Small Heath qualify for payments under the cold weather payments scheme.

Mr. Scott: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what dates cold weather payments were made in Birmingham, Small Heath in response to a forecast of a qualifying period; and if he will indicate the period taken for payments to be made once the system had been triggered.

Mr. Scott: Such information as is available is in the Library.

War Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 19 June, Official Report, column 704, on payment of war pensions in cases of post-traumatic stress, what is the reason for the different treatment of payment of arrears of war pension in relation to schizophrenia as compared with other conditions.

Miss Widdecombe: Until relatively recently, most cases of schizophrenia were regarded as being causally unrelated to service. When medical opinion changed it became possible to make awards of war pension. The discretionary powers of the war pension scheme were used to award arrears of pension, in appropriate cases, from February 1980, the date chosen to reflect the change in medical opinion. This date is under review following a recent High Court judgment.

Authoritative medical opinion has always accepted that the clinical entity now known as post-traumatic stress disorder could arise as the result of service. An award of war pension would therefore normally have been made from the date of claim.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 19 June, Offical Report, column 703, on statistics relating to war pensions, what estimate was made of the cost of answering the question tabled.

Miss Widdecombe: The cost was estimated as being as least £1 million.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom's presidency of the EC.

Mr. Scott: No such meetings have taken place. We have no plans to initiate special action in this area during the presidency. We will, however, continue to resist any EC initiatives affecting the Department which would impose undue burdens on business.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Scott: All parts of the Department, including its executive agencies and the divisions and branches of its central headquarters, share the purpose and aims set out in the department report "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1992-93 to 1994-95", Cm 1914.

The Department's purpose is to serve Ministers in the development and implementation of social security policy, pay social security benefits, arrange for the collection of national insurance contributions and carry out other services in accordance with the law.

The underlying aims are to:

provide a good service to customers, one which is professional, efficient, responsive and fair; support ministers in the development and implementation of policy, and in the preparations and passage of legislation;

manage the Department and its agencies efficiently, providing good value for money and maintaining the highest standards of propriety in the conduct of public affairs; provide relevant information about social security to individuals, groups and the community at large in a clear and comprehensible form; ensure correct payments are made—that benefit recipients are paid their correct entitlement and the scope for fraud and abuse is minimised; ensure compliance with the law relating to national insurance contributions by employers, employed earners and the self-employed; meet the needs of all staff as regards training and career and personal development, recognising and properly rewarding them for their contribution, and encouraging them to play a full part in the Department's work.

In addition, the objectives of the individual executive agencies are laid out in their business plans for 1992-93, copies of which are in the Library.

Civil Servants (Shares)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last fives years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff in the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: All staff in DSS and its next steps agencies are made aware of the guidance given in the civil service pay and conditions of service code relating to civil servants' shareholdings. The provisions apply to all staff equally. Staff are required to report shareholdings which may present a potential conflict of interest but no records are kept centrally of such reports.

Children

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to equalise benefits for men and women with dependent children on the death of their spouse.

Miss Widdecombe: This is one of the issues which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be addressing in his consideration of the equalisation of state pension age.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of dependent children aged under 16 years who are living in families receiving regular weekly payment of income support in April 1991 and April 1992; and how many of these dependent children were living in (a) one-parent families and (b) unemployed families.

Mr. Burt: The latest available figures are for May 1991. There were 2·37 million dependent children under 16 in families receiving income support, 1·49 million were in lone parent families and 0·64 million were in the families of claimants who were receiving income support on the grounds that they were unemployed.

Source: income support statistics, annual inquiry 1991.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will make it his policy to ensure that the value of benefits for children of war widows, other widows and invalidity pensioners, is increased in real terms in the 1993 benefit uprating.

Miss Widdecombe: The policy of successive Governments has been to take account of child benefit when setting the rates of benefits for children. We have no plans to alter this long-standing principle.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will publish tables similar to those in his answer of 11 May, Official Report, columns 43-44, showing the combined value of child benefit and child dependency increases, including figures for April 1992 and showing equivalent values at April 1992 instead of 1991 prices.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the tables.

Young People (Hardship Payments)

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many severe hardship claims were submitted by 16 and 17-year-olds in Scotland, Wales and each region of England in the last full year for which figures are available; and what percentage were successful.

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Occupational Pensions

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when provisions in the Social Security Act 1990 —section 11 and schedule 2—on inflation-proofing of occupational pensions will come into force; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The implementation of limited price indexation for occupational pensions was postponed because of the financial uncertainties for schemes caused by the Barber judgment. This has still to be clarified.

Social Fund

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of grants made and the number of loans provided, together with the number refused since the social fund was introduced.

Mr. Scott: The information was published on 8 July in the Secretary of State's annual report on the social fund —Cm 1992—which is available in the Library.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what increase in social fund allocations for 1992-1993 would be needed to enable monthly average expenditure to reach the levels of expenditure in March 1992.

Mr. Scott: Annual social fund allocations enable expenditure to be managed flexibly and effectively throughout the year. An increase of £37·6 million would be required if the initial annual allocation for 1992-93 had been based solely on expenditure levels for the single month of March 1992. For a variety of reasons, expenditure in March has traditionally been heavy. Over 10 per cent. of last year's annual expenditure was made in March 1992.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 8 July, Official Report, column 224, to the hon. Member for Hertford and Stortford (Mr. Wells), when he received the university of York report on the social fund; when examination of the report by Ministers started and was completed; and for what reasons it was decided that such examination was necessary before publication.

Mr. Scott: Research reports commissioned by the Department are routinely submitted for ministerial clearance prior to publication, as required by the Department's standard research contract. We received the final draft of the report in April.

Income Support

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the scale rate for supplementary benefit and income support for a couple with two children aged under 11 years for each year from 1979 to 1992 at (a) constant prices and (b) as a proportion of the median disposable income of a couple with two children.

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what assumption he bases the viability of income support for a husband and wife with two children at primary school.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 2.1 to 2.5 of the memorandum on benefit levels and a minimum income, dated 18 October 1989, and submitted to the House of Commons Social Services Committee. A copy of the complete memorandum is in the Library. Income support has been uprated each year by the retail prices index less housing costs.

Resettlement Units

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give further details on the plans to transfer Camden and Newbury resettlement units.

Miss Widdecombe: The Resettlement Agency is taking forward the plans announced on 5 February 1992 at column 210 to transfer two resettlement units.

A number of well-established housing associations and voluntary bodies have expressed an interest and will be submitting detailed proposals to the Resettlement Agency.

These will be evaluated and a final decision will be made on 29 September 1992 and the successful organisations will be informed shortly thereafter. Negotiations with these organisations for the handover of operations on 31 March 1993 will commence immediately.

Research

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all the research currently in progress which is being undertaken by, or has been commissioned by, his Department; if he will indicate in each case when he expects to receive the report and whether it is his intention to publish it; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: A list of all research currently in progress, with the expected timing of the first draft report, is in the table. Reports about pieces of research are normally published, either in the Department's own research series or by the contractor.

Project	Anticipated timing of first draft report
Study of invalidity benefit (IVB)	Early 1994
Study of statutory sick pay (SSP)	Summer 1993
Comparative study of financial provision for carers	End of 1992

National Insurance

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the amount of national insurance contributions outstanding from self-employed individuals;

(2) what is the amount of national insurance contributions outstanding from companies with more than five employees;

(3) if he will list the staffing levels for the departments concerned with collecting outstanding national insurance contributions for each of the past five years.

Miss Widdecombe: The amount of unpaid national insurance contributions due for self-employed individuals is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member and copies will be placed in the Library and the Public Information Office.

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the effect on employees' pension rights of non-payment of national insurance contributions by their employers.

Miss Widdecombe: Regulations provide that where a primary class 1 contribution payable by a secondary contributor on an employee's behalf is not paid, the contribution can nevertheless be treated as paid on the due date so as not to affect the employee's pension rights, providing certain conditions are met. It must be shown to the Secretary of State's satisfaction that the failure to pay the contribution has not been with the consent or connivance of the employee, nor attributable to any negligence on his part.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the expected saving at 1992 prices, in total and per 100,000 claimants, from the extension of the unemployment disqualification period to 13 weeks in 1986 and 26 weeks in 1988, respectively, and the cumulative saving from the two extensions; and what are his latest estimates of the actual savings.

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available as soon as possible.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will update the estimate of the cost of reducing the unemployment disqualification period to six weeks, given in his reply to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 21 January, Official Report, column 180; whether that estimate took into account the resulting savings in income support and housing benefit; what would be the net cost, taking these savings into account; on what assumption about the proportion of disqualified unemployment benefit claimants receiving income support his estimates are based; and what would be the net cost if that proportion fell to its May 1986 and November 1987 levels, respectively.

Mr. Burt: The estimate given in my reply to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North on 21 January remains at £35 million per annum at 1992 prices. This takes account of the resulting savings in income support and housing benefit.

The estimate is based on the assumption that 75 per cent. of those disqualified due to their misconduct or voluntarily leaving their employment without just cause receive income support.

The net costs, assuming May 1986 and November 1987 levels of disqualification, would be £40 million and £35 million respectively.

Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from the Independent Tribunal Service regarding the payment of fees to members of social security appeal tribunals; and how he has responded to those representations.

Mr. Scott: The President of the Independent Tribunal Service, His Honour Judge Holden, has made representations to the department about payment of fees to members of social security appeal tribunals. Our policy on fees for tribunal members is to pay a fee where membership requires specialist skills or knowledge. This is not the case for SSAT members.

Maxwell Pensions

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to obtain donations to the trust headed by Sir John Cuckney to compensate Maxwell pensioners; and what success he has had.

Miss Widdecombe: I understand from Sir John Cuckney that he and his fellow trustees will sign the trust deed on 17 July and that they have formally launched their appeal for contributions to the Maxwell pensioners trust. Pending the formal establishment of the trust, £170,000 has been paid into the holding account opened by the Department. This will be transferred to the trust's account when it is open. Donations to the trust are, of course, completely separate to any funds or assets recovered.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total sum of money so far recovered by the trust fund set up within his Department, headed by Sir John Cuckney, to recover assets lost by the Maxwell pension funds; if he will give a breakdown of the various sums recovered by source and amount of income.

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the replies to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 6 July at columns 88-89 and to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr Leighton) today.

Claimants (Relocation)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) whether he will review the rights of benefits claimants to relocate to areas of high unemployment without forgoing entitlements;

(2) if he will monitor the migration of benefits claimants to seaside resorts over the summer.

Mr. Burt: The Employment Service checks that unemployed people, including itinerants, are entitled to benefits in respect of unemployment, in accordance with social security legislation; in particular that they are available for work and actively seek it. Every effort is made to ensure that benefit is paid only where the conditions of entitlement are satisfied. The Government have no plans to restrict the movement of unemployed people: mobility of labour is essential for the efficient operation of the labour market and job creation.

Students

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will seek to amend legislation so as to enable students to claim benefits during the summer vacation if prevented by ill health from seeking work.

Mr. Burt: We have no such plans; the educational maintenance system is designed to provide for the needs of students. Vulnerable students, including those who are disabled or who are long-term sick, retain eligibility for housing benefit and income support throughout their course and may qualify for those benefits during the summer vacation if they are unable to work.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will review the obligation on local authorities to meet their share of the costs of housing benefits for unemployed persons moving in from other areas, where benefits are already being paid by relevant local authorities.

Mr. Burt: We have no plans to review the current arrangements which allow housing benefit to meet the commercial rent liability on a property occupied as the main home, providing the level of rent is reasonable. Local authorities are reimbursed for their benefit expenditure through subsidy arrangments.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Raoul Wallenberg

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to request the authorities of the former Soviet Union to publish their records relating to Raoul Wallenberg.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We understand that a Swedish-Russian commission has been set up to investigate the disappearance of Raoul Wallenberg: and that Russia has granted Sweden access to Soviet MFA and KGB files. We assume that the Swedish Government will publish any further details about Wallenberg's fate which are uncovered.

European Union

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy that no notification shall be given that the United Kingdom assents to the amendment of any part of any protocol annexed to the treaty on European union unless a draft of the notification has first been approved by an Act of Parliament.

Mr. Garel-Jones: All the protocols associated with the treaty on European union will be annexed to the treaty of Rome and would form an integral part of that treaty. The protocols—and any later amendments—therefore require ratification by member states. In the United Kingdom ratification does not require approval by an Act of Parliament but would only occur once any necessary domestic legislation was in place.

Maastricht

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the position of the United Kingdom as a signatory of the North Atlantic treaty will be affected by the implementation of a common foreign security and defence policy, pursuant to article B, title I of the Maastricht treaty.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The position of the United Kingdom as a signatory of the North Atlantic treaty will not be affected by a common foreign and security policy.

The Maastricht treaty—article J. 4.4—makes it clear that the foreign and security policy

"shall respect the obligations of certain member States under the North Atlantic Treaty and be compatible with the common security and defence policy established within that framework".

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government will lay before Parliament a consolidated text of the treaties establishing the European Economic Community, the ECSC and Euratom, as amended by the treaty of Maastricht.

Mr. Garel-Jones: There will be no official Community publication of this nature until after the treaty on European union has been ratified by all 12 member states and has entered into force.

However, in view of the interest expressed in this House and elsewhere, the Government will be producing their own consolidated text of the treaty establishing the European Economic Community as amended by the treaty on European union. This text will be laid before the House in the normal way in good time for the consideration in Committee of the European Communities (Amendment) Bill.

The text will inevitably be informal at this stage and may differ in some minor respects from that produced by the European Community official publications office in due course.

Fissile Materials

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards a multilateral, verifiable fissile materials cut-off.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's Government welcome the US decision on 13 July to end production of weapons grade fissile materials. It is in response to a bilateral initiative from the Russians and does not depend on United Kingdom agreement. United Kingdom production will continue to be kept at the minimum level necessary to satisfy our deterrent and naval reactor requirements.

EC Decision-making

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to undertake a study into the decision-making structure of the European Community with reference to economic convergence and allocation of resources.

Mr. Garel-Jones: There are no plans to undertake any such study. Under the convergence decision of 1990, individual member states are putting forward convergence programmes for discussion within the Council of Ministers as part of the regular process of multilateral surveillance. The Maastricht treaty would carry forward that process of multilateral surveillance, but economic policy would remain, as now, a responsibility of member states.

European Community

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what circumstances Her Majesty's Government are prepared to apply to the European Court of Justice for a ruling on the validity of a Commission proposal before it has been referred for deliberation by the Council of Ministers or other Community institutions.

Mr. Garel-Jones: There is no legal basis to challenge a Commission proposal for Community legislation before the court until that proposal has been adopted as a formal act.

Treaty of Rome

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent the proposed article 8c of the treaty of Rome will require a harmonisation of diplomatic practices among member states of the Community.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Consular protection services offered by the member states of the European Community to their respective nationals do not differ greatly. Some administrative changes will be necessary to give formal effect to article 8c of the treaty of Maastricht, and procedures need to be established. The details are being worked on at the regular meetings of the EC consular affairs working group.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the effect on the personnel, work load, organisation and financing of Her Majesty's foreign service in respect of obligations imposed by the proposed article 8c of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: An informal arrangement made in 1985 provides for the diplomatic missions of EC member states to give consular protection to the nationals of unrepresented EC states in non-Community countries. Article 8c of the Maastricht treaty is a move towards formalisation of this arrangement. We do not expect it to cause significant extra work for our posts.

Civil Servants

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The conduct of staff in the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth office is governed by diplomatic service and home service regulations. The latter also apply to staff at Wilton park, the diplomatic wing's next steps agency. They require staff to disclose in writing to the Department's administration full details of any personal business interests which might conflict with the Department's interests or general principles of conduct. The diplomatic wing does not maintain a central record of staff who have reported shareholdings. The conduct of staff in the aid wing is governed by the code and guide. In addition staff rules are issued individually to all members of staff in the ODA headquarters and its next steps agency, the Natural Resources Institute. The rules require individual officers to consult the principal establishment officer about the desirability of acquiring and retaining any shareholding which might raise a question of possible conflict with the interests of the Department. No such conflicts of interest are recorded in the last five years.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Goodlad: All the individual departments of the diplomatic and aid wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth office, and all our posts abroad—more than 200—set objectives annually. These objectives are framed in the light of the overall objectives for both wings, which are set out in the annual departmental report on the Government's expenditure plans. The report also contains more detailed objectives on the various FCO functions. A copy of the report is available in the Library of the House.

European Union (Public Information)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state his policy in respect of the proposals in each substantive clause of the European Union (Public Information) Bill.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Government have made information on the Maastricht treaty readily available to the public. The treaty was published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office on 7 May. Before publication, copies were supplied to Parliament in large numbers, and to the public on demand from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Memoranda were produced by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Her Majesty's Treasury outlining the content of the treaty. These are also available from Her Majesty's Stationery office. The Government are considering whether to issue additional information about the treaty and its benefits.

Shipbuilding

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the Government's attitude to the Commission's proposal for a Council directive providing for changes to the seventh Council directive on aid to shipbuilding of 2 December 1990 SEC 92 (991)—final;

(2) if he has given consideration to designating as an agenda B point at the Council meeting scheduled for 20 July the Commission's proposal for a Council directive providing for changes to the seventh Council directive on aid to shipbuilding of 2 December 1990, SEC (92) 991—final;

(3) what evaluation his Department has made of the effect of the United Kingdom and EC shipbuilding industries of the Commission proposal for a Council directive providing for changes to the seventh Council directive on aid to shipbuilding of 2 December 1990, SEC (92) 991—final;

(4) what account he has taken of the European Parliament's view on current EC proposals to aid shipyards in east Germany; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Government support the Commission proposal which will help alleviate the severe economic difficulties facing eastern Germany. The proposal contains safeguards which should ensure that the United Kingdom and other EC shipbuilding industries are not adversely affected. The European Parliament opinion on the Commission proposal will be discussed at a meeting of the Committee of Permanent Representatives today. The dossier would then normally go to a Council meeting for final adoption.

British Diplomatic Spouses Association

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what is the employment status of the chairman of the British Diplomatic Spouses Association; and if he will publish the job description as agreed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and specify the duties that are laid down towards the trustees of the association;

(2) what is his policy on charging organisations to which public employees are seconded, including ones which are wholly funded by Government, the full staff costs of the seconded employees; and what policy is followed in respect of the British Diplomatic Spouses Association;

(3) for what reasons his Department advertised the job of family welfare officer in its medical and welfare unit as carrying ex officio membership of the executive committee of the British Diplomatic Spouses Association;

(4) what is the value of support given by his Department to the British Diplomatic Spouses Association in (a) contributions to salaries, (b) staff secondments, (c) office and other facilities and (d) other support.

Mr. Goodlad: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Serbia

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to ensure that the sanctions on Serbia do not affect supplies of food and medicines.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: United Nations Security Council resolution 757 specifically exempts from the sanctions regime foodstuffs and supplies intended strictly for medical purposes. Exports of both categories have to be notified to the sanctions committee. To date approximately 70 per cent. of all applications received by the committee have been for foodstuffs and medicines and all have been passed without objection.

South African Security Personnel

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests Her Majesty's Government have made to the South African Government on the activities of South African security personnel Captain Pamela du Randt and Mr. Leon Flores.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests Her Majesty's Government have made to the South African Government about the activities of South African security personnel Captain Pamela du Randt and Mr Leon Flores.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The South African Government were informed of the suspected activities of these individuals in this country and we received the full co-operation of the SAG in our pursuit of this matter.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff his Department currently employs; what are the total personnel costs; and what were the staffing levels and personnel costs in 1970.

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 14 July 1992]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office expects to employ an average of 10,085·5 staff in 1992-93 at an estimated total personnel cost of £369·877 million. In 1970-71, 12,421 staff were employed; a comparable figure for total personnel costs for that year is not available. Actual salary costs for 1970-71 were £52·52 million and £186·6 million in 1992-93.

Subsidiarity

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC;

(2) what representations have been made by British embassies in the member states of the EC about the removal of unnecessary regulations affecting United Kingdom interests at a national and Community level in the last year;

(3) whether, during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC, he will arrange for a European Council of Ministers meeting to consider how the European Commission's deregulation efforts can be improved.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Lisbon European Council noted the importance of the principle of subsidiarity and invited the Commission and the Council to undertake urgent work on procedural and practical steps to implement the principle. It also called for a re-examination of existing legislation in order to adapt it where necessary to the principle of subsidiarity. We intend to take this work forward during the United Kingdom presidency. There will be an initial discussion in the Foreign Affairs Council on 20 July. The Government intend to ensure that the principle of subsidiarity is respected in all its aspects, including its presumption against over-regulation.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Kurdistan

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures have been taken to ensure the safety and security of non-governmental officers in Iraqi Kurdistan.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The safety of NGO officers is of great concern to us. They are working in Iraq under the inter-agency programme of the United Nations and we have raised with the UN the importance of arrangements for their safety. In addition, coalition forces are stationed in Turkey.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what attempts have been made to ensure that humanitarian aid administered in Iraqi Kurdistan is reaching the targeted groups; if he will give assurance that current levels of assistance will be maintained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We monitor progress with the United Nations and British non-governmental organisations to ensure the inter-agency programme of humanitarian relief is properly targeted. We continue to respond to requests for support and are keeping the situation under close review.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funds have been budgeted to directly support British based non-governmental organisations operating in Iraqi Kurdistan from 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993; and what funding has been set aside to support the activities of British based non-governmental organisations indirectly through support for the United Nations in the area in the same period.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We shall continue to consider on their merits requests from British non-governmental organisations to fund specific projects in northern Iraq, while taking account of other priority calls on available resources. We do not earmark for non-governmental organisations any specific part of our contribution to the United Nations programme.

International Decade of National Disaster Reduction

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution the United Kingdom is making to the International Decade of National Disaster Reduction and the discussions he has held with colleagues in the United Nations on this.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In the last financial year the Government spent nearly £600,000 for disaster preparedness projects under the International Decade of Natural Disaster Reduction. Commitments since April this year total over £250,000 so far. This is in addition to our continuing support for the Royal Society/Royal Academy of Engineering IDNDR committee. We are working closely with that committee, with other interested groups in Britain and through our embassies and high commissions overseas to see what more we can do. We are also in close contact with the United Nations IDNDR Secretariat in Geneva and with the disaster mitigation branch of the United Nations department of humanitarian affairs.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from the Royal Society as a result of his request to it to consider scientic options and proposals for the International Decade of National Disaster Reduction.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We continue to work very closely with the Royal Society on the British contribution to the International Decade of Natural Disaster Reduction, primarily through the joint Royal Society/Royal Academy of Engineering IDNDR committee. With that committee, we mounted a one-day IDNDR forum at the Royal Society on 27 March this year, bringing together key players from Britain and the United Nations to discuss disaster reduction. A report of the workshop is being produced and should be available soon.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Civil Service Shareholdings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Home Office staff handbook includes specific advice on shareholdings by staff, covering the issues of potential conflict of interest and the provisions of the Companies Securities (Insider Dealing) Act 1985 and the Financial Securities Act 1986. Further advice on the general principles of conduct and the need to avoid any conflicts between official duty and private interests is also included in the handbook. The handbook is issued to all non-industrial staff, and its provisions apply equally to staff in Home Office agencies. No cases have been recorded in the past five years of staff reporting shareholdings to personnel management units in the Home Office.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Objectives are set for each division and branch of the Home Office, but because of the breadth and diversity of the Department's activities, listing them would involve disproportionate cost. The principle objections for Home Office divisions are contained within the "Home Office" Annual Report 1992—Cm 1909,—12 copies of which are in the Library.

Primates

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will prohibit the use in British laboratories of primates that have been caught in the wild.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No. Where the use of primates in research is justified under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, there may be no alternative to the use of wild-caught primates if purpose-bred animals are not available. Inspectors do, however, encourage the use of propose-bred primates where such animals are available.

Immigration Controls

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implications of article 8a of the Maastricht treaty for Britain's current immigration controls.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I refer my hon. Friend to the explanatory memorandum on the European Commission communication on abolition of border controls—6497/92—which was submitted to the EC scrutiny committees on 19 June and in which the Government's position on this matter is fully set out.

Camp Hill Prison

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether medication at Her Majesty's prison Camp Hill is being administered by the qualified hospital officers, and taken by prisoners in the sight of hospital officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Health care staff supervise the taking of medication during the day. At night some prisoners are entrusted to take their medication unsupervised; in other cases supervision is undertaken by discipline staff. These arrangements are under review.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the monthly cost of medication at Her Majesty's prison Camp Hill.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The cost of drugs and dressings dispensed in the four weeks ended 26 June 1992 was £2,049·91.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were on medication at Her Majesty's prison Camp Hill for the last date for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: On 29 June 1992, 92 prisoners received some form of medication.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were in the hospital at Her Majesty's prison Camp Hill on the last day for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The health care centre at this establishment no longer provides facilities for in-patient care. Patients in need of such care are transferred to the prison hospital at HM prison Parkhurst.

Security Companies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take action to make it a criminal offence for convicted criminals (a) to own or be directors of, (b) to be employed by or (c) to seek employment by a security company.

Mr. Jack: No.

Maastricht Treaty

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implications of article 8a of the Maastricht treaty referring to freedom of residence.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Article 8 confers on nationals of European Community countries the new status of citizen of the union. Article 8a provides that such citizens shall have the right to move and reside freely in the Community. This right will, however, be subject to the limitations and conditions set out in existing EC directives and regulations, under which, for example, residence may be refused on grounds of public policy.

Electoral Law

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to bring forward proposals to amend the electoral law, consequent to the Maastricht treaty.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Detailed arrangements for the provisions contained in the treaty to extend the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in European Parliamentary and local government elections to EC nationals in their country of residence have to be adopted unanimously by the Council of Ministers by 31 December 1993 and 31 December 1994 respectively. Until those arrangements have been agreed, we have no proposals for amending electoral law.

Police and Criminal Evidence

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish an inquiry into the ways in which the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 is operated by the police services in England and Wales.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Royal Commission on criminal justice is already considering this issue.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish an inquiry into the ways in which the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 is operated by the West Midlands police service.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No.

Gambian Nationals

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many nationals of The Gambia have been (a) admitted to the United Kingdom as visitors in each year from 1988 and (b) how many have been refused entrance at the point of entry.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is not available; citizens of The Gambia are not separately identified in the immigration statistics.

Bailiffs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislative proposals to make it illegal to operate as (a) a security business and (b) a bailiff's business unless registered as a plc.

Mr. Jack: We have no plans to do so.

Cruel Tethering

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been under the Protection Against Cruel Tethering Act 1988.

Mr. Jack: Section 1 of the Protection against Cruel Tethering Act 1988 amended the Protection of Animals Act 1911. It is not possible from the information held centrally to identify separately such offences under the Protection of Animals Act 1911. However, our statistics show that in 1989 and 1990 there were 1,050 and 1,167 prosecutions, respectively, under the Protection of Animals Act 1911, as amended.

Immigration

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is being made by the Government to bring into force EC Council directives 90/364/EEC, 90/365/EEC and 90/366/EEC which require member states to bring into force laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with the directives not later than 30 June; and whether, under those directives, the third country national family members in the ascending or descending line seeking to enter or remain in the United Kingdom with the EC national family member will be permitted to take employment.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The directives are being implemented administratively. It is planned to lay an order under section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972 before Parliament later this year to incorporate into United Kingdom law all the EC regulations and directives dealing with rights of free movement and residence, including the three referred to in the question. Directive 90/366, on the right of residence of vocational students, entitles the EC national to be joined by his or her spouse and children under 21. The other two directives, on the right of residence of retired persons and of persons not covered by other EC measures, make provision for spouses, children under 21 and other dependent relatives in the ascending and descending line. Under the directives the spouse and dependent children of the main beneficiary are, irrespective of nationality, entitled to take employment or self-employment. Non-EC national dependent relatives in the ascending line who wish to take employment or self-employment have to meet the relevant requirements of the immigration rules.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions are made for the grant of indefinite leave to remain to the third country national spouses of EC nationals exercising treaty rights in the United Kingdom in the event that the EC national does not apply for indefinite leave to remain or there is marriage breakdown.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Indefinite leave is normally granted to a non-EC spouse only if the EC national has acquired it or if the spouse qualifies for it in his or her own right under the immigration rules. A non-EC national cannot qualify for indefinite leave under the immigration rules on the basis of a marriage which has been dissolved. However, where such a person has been living in the United Kingdom for a substantial period as the spouse of an EC national, any application to remain following a divorce would be considered in the light of any compassionate circumstances.

Electoral Procedures

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to amend relevant legislation so as to bring the availability of marked registers after parliamentary elections into line with local and European elections.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The marked copies of the electoral register used at parliamentary elections are retained by the Clerk of the Crown and are available for inspection for one year after the election. The marked registers used at European parliamentary elections are retained by the returning officer for the constituency and are also available for inspection for one year. For local government elections, the marked registers are held by the proper officer of the relevant council, and can be inspected for a period of six months following the election. In all cases copies of the marked registers may also be purchased. In consultation with the political parties and the local authority associations we are conducting a review of electoral law in the light of experience at the recent general election, and this will be one of the issues considered.

Disabled People's Parking Spaces

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were undertaken in 1991 against able-bodied motorists misusing spaces reserved for disabled people.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is not available.

Crime (Unidentified Vehicle Keepers)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the use in the furtherance of crime of vehicles used by a group of individuals in circumstances where the identity of the individual keeper is concealed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We have found no record of recent representations on this subject. The targeting of offences involving the use of such vehicles is an operational matter and is therefore the responsibility of chief officers of police.

Wolds Prison

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contingency plans have been made to deal with circumstances resulting in the loss of control by Group 4 of the Wolds prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: For security reasons it is not our practice to publish contingency plans for any prison.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether circular instructions and standing orders issued by the Prison Department are applied to the Wolds prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. Group 4 Remand Services Limited is required to deliver standards of performance which are specified in the contract for the management of Wolds prison. Within that framework the company has freedom to decide on the best procedures for achieving the desired results.

Prison Mothers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances mothers in prison are separated from their babies six hours after birth.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The circumstances in which a mother in prison would be separated from her baby within hours of the birth are the same as in the community. Immediate separation would take place where the local social service department had obtained a care order because the child was considered to be at risk.

EC Visas

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the mutual recognition of visas within the EC.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Mutual recognition of short-stay visas is provided for in the draft external frontiers convention, signature of which remains stalled because of an objection by the Spanish Government to the convention's application to Gibraltar.

Prisoners, Northern Ireland

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the transfer of Northern Irish prisoners in English prisons to complete their sentence in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As I stated in my reply to a question by the hon. Member for Newry and Armagh (Mr. Mallon) on 12 June 1992, Official Report, columns 330-31, my right hon. and learned Friend is considering a report of the interdepartmental review on the transfer of sentenced prisoners with colleagues in Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Prisoners (Remission)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the reasons why persons imprisoned for non-payment of community charge are not entitled to remission.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: To qualify for remission a person has to be serving a term of imprisonment which under section 104(1) of the Criminal Justice act 1967 does not include "a committal in default to payment of any sum of money". Nor is the royal prerogative of mercy used to grant special remission in respect of civil cases.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what grounds criminals in prison are given remission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Remission of sentence is governed by the prison rules 1964. In general terms remission is granted on the grounds of a prisoner's industry and good conduct. The royal prerogative of mercy may also be used to grant special remission on exceptional grounds, including the recognition of assistance given to the authorities or for urgent compassionate reasons.

Speeding

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police authority forces now possess the technology to identify speeding motorists using photographic techniques.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand that a recent survey by the Association of Chief Police Officers traffic committee indicated that 18 forces in England and Wales were actively considering acquiring speed cameras or traffic light cameras or both and that a further three police forces expected to be equipped with speed cameras from 1 July. Nineteen forces already operate in-car video systems which can be used to identify speeding offences.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average cost of the equipment necessary to gather evidence of speeding using speed camera technology.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his question on 14 July, Official Report, column 531.

Polling Stations (Access)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will review the criteria for grants in respect of access to polling stations by disabled people;

(2) what steps he proposes to take to promote improved access to polling stations for disabled people.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Councils have a statutory obligation to place polling stations only in buildings which are accessible to disabled people, wherever this is practicable. We have provided guidance for acting returning officers to remind them of their obligations, and shall continue to do so. Where it is not possible to use a building affording easy access, we will provide grants towards half the cost of a temporary ramp, provided the local authority will meet the other half. We consider it reasonable to expect the local authority to contribute to the cost since the ramps may also be used at local elections and for other local activities. We will consider as part of our post-election review of electoral practice whether more needs to be done to help disabled people to exercise their right to vote.

Fire Services

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what correspondence his Department has had with the Northumberland fire authority about the level of provision within the county's fire service; and what indication has been given in the correspondence as to whether (a) day manning, (b) other systems involving full-time personnel or (c) wholly retained status would be regarded as acceptable for the stations concerned.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My officials have received correspondence from the chief fire officer of the Northumberland fire and rescue service drawing attention to financial issues affecting the service's budget and to plans for addressing identified over-provision in the service. My right hon. and learned Friend has recently approved the fire authority's proposal to replace the whole time crew at Alnwick fire station by a retained crew with the result that both firefighting appliances based at Alnwick are now crewed by retained firefighters. The chief fire officer has made clear the fire authority's intention to seek the approval of my right hon. and learned Friend, under section 19 of the Fire Services Act 1947, to the removal from the services establishment of the whole-time crews at Berwick and Hexham fire stations, subject to their replacement by retained crews. My right hon. and learned Friend would not approve such an application unless he was satisfied that the authority would be able to maintain the nationally recommended minimum standards of fire cover.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fire service personnel of sub-officer grade and below have been (a) made redundant or (b) given early retirement other than on health grounds in the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available figures, from annual establishment returns submitted to the Home Office by fire authorities each year, relate to discharges for other than medical reasons and dismissals after disciplinary proceedings. The establishment returns for fire authorities in England and Wales for the year to 31 December 1991 show that 36 whole-time fire fighters of the rank of sub-officer and below, and 118 retained or volunteer fire fighters, were discharged for other than medical reasons, and that seven whole-time fire fighters of the rank of sub-officer and below, and three retained or volunteer fire fighters, were dismissed following disciplinary proceedings.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, following Northumberland county council's refusal to accept that he is entitled to withhold permission for the closure of the Holy Island fire brigade, and following the Local Government Commissioner's finding that this constituted maladministration, he will arrange for a special inspection of the brigade's arrangements for fire cover on Holy Island.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Northumberland fire and rescue service was inspected by Her Majesty's inspector of fire services between 17 and 21 February 1992. In the course of the inspection, Her Majesty's inspector examined the fire cover arrangements on Holy Island. My right hon. and learned Friend does not propose to commission any further inspection of the fire cover arrangements on Holy Island. He hopes to reach a decision shortly on the Northumberland fire authorities application for approval to the removal from its establishment scheme of the volunteer fire-fighting crew on Holy Island.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what provisions exist in national conditions of service governing the terms of redundancy for firemen; what requests for advice he has received from fire authorities about redundancy terms; and what advice he has given;

(2) what provisions exist in national conditions of service relating to the pension entitlements of firemen who accept early retirement on other than health grounds, or are made redundant.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: National conditions of service for fire-fighters are a matter for the National Joint Council for Local Authorities' Fire Brigades and not for the Home Office. I understand that the council's scheme of conditions of service contains no provisions governing the terms of redundancy for fire-fighters. My officials have received a request from the chief fire officer of the Northumberland fire and rescue service for advice on the pensions implications of any redundancies, and are to discuss this with the chief fire officer at a meeting on 5 August. The pension entitlements of whole-time fire-fighters are governed by the Firemen's Pension Scheme Order 1992. Rule A14 of the scheme provides for the early retirement on efficiency grounds of a fire-fighter aged 50 or over who has completed 25 years' pensionable service.

Telephone Tapping

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 8 July, Official Report, column 199, if he will list the organisations which carry out telephone interceptions which have been authorised by warrant.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have nothing to add to my reply of 8 July.

Urban Areas (Crime)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who draws up the list of urban areas and housing estates regarded as at risk of serious disorder;

(2) if he will provide additional resources to find measures to tackle youth crime in the 16 urban areas or estates regarded as likely to be at risk of serious disorder.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There is no central list of areas regarded as at risk of serious disorder though local police forces naturally monitor areas of particular tension. The Government already provides funding for many initiatives aimed at tackling youth crime. In particular, the safer cities programme tackles crime in the inner cities through projects in 20 areas with high crime rates and other social problems.

British Diplomatic Spouses Association

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the British Diplomatic Spouses Association is a registered charity.

Mr. Jack: The British Diplomatic Spouses Association is registered with the Charity Commission as a charity.

Commercial Premises

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to amend legislation so as to make occupation of commercial premises without the owner's permission a criminal offence.

Mr. Jack: The Government are committed to strengthening the law against squatting and we issued a consultation paper examining possible options. The responses have raised a number of issues which are receiving careful consideration. Our aim is to ensure that any new measures are fair, easy to administer and effective.

Police Evidence

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive reports from the relevant police forces into the safety of the evidence used to convict Sam Kulasingham and Prem Sivalingham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The inquiry by the Essex police into this case is still continuing, but at this stage it is not possible to give any indication as to when it will be completed and a report submitted.

European Year of Civil Protection

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has held with his EC colleagues on the United Kingdom's and the Community's plans for the European Year of Civil Protection beginning on 1 July 1993.

Mr. Jack: At a meeting of the Council of Ministers held in November 1990 to discuss civil protection, my right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Ferrers and his ministerial colleagues endorsed a resolution, agreeing in principle that July 1993 to July 1994 should be designated the European Year of Civil Protection. Officials from member states are now working to produce a revised draft resolution.

New Age Travellers

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many hours of police overtime were worked by Avon and Somerset constabulary and Devon and Cornwall constabulary between 20 June and 11 July, as a result of the movements of new age travellers and rave parties;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 3 July, Official Report, columns 739-40, what further estimates he has of the costs of extra policing required by the movements of new age travellers and various rave parties between 20 June and 11 July in the counties of Avon, Somerset, Devon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire; and whether he will specify these by police authority.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Police and Fire Services

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will specify the change in the cost of providing police and fire services within the metropolitan county areas as compared with non-metropolitan areas during the financial years preceding, including and succeeding the abolition of the metropolitan county councils.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Durham Prison

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average number of hours per day inmates of Durham prison spend outside cells.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The estimated number of hours per day inmates of Durham prison spend outsde cells is 7·5 hours for convicted male inmates, 3·25 hours for male remand inmates and 9·5 hours for convicted female inmates.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of hours spent on education for each year since 1981 in Durham prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The total student hours spent on education for each year since 1985 in Durham prison are shown in the table. No figures are available for the years 1981-82 to 1984-85.

Year	Total student hours
1985-86	35,796
1986-87	48,284
1987-88	62,902
1988-89	70,245
1989-90	58,893
1990-91	57,818
1991-92	70,251

European Union

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the current requirements for the acquisition of a visa for entry into the United Kingdom will be affected by the proposed article 100c (1) of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Article 100c (1) will transfer into the competence of the European Community the determination of the third countries whose nationals are to be subject to a visa requirement for the crossing of external frontiers of member states. Decisions under the article, which will be taken by unanimity until the end of 1995 and by qualified majority voting thereafter, will depend on the outcome of discussions within the Community and cannot be predicted at this stage. The United Kingdom, like all member states, will be under an obligation to align its national visa requirements with such decisions.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alterations he proposes to (a) asylum policy and (b) immigration policy in the light of article K1 of the treaty on European union.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The chapter of the treaty dealing with co-operation in the fields of justice and home affairs, of which Article K1 forms part, will provide a new framework for intergovernmental discussions on these subjects but leave them within national competence. Of itself, therefore, the article does not entail alterations to the United Kingdom's policies on immigration and asylum.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what forms of co-operation he will propose in the area of combating international fraud under article K1 (5) of the treaty on European union.

Mr. Jack: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Wrongful Convictions

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many allegations of wrongful conviction upon indictment have been received during the last six months by C3 division of the Home Office with a view to a possible reference to the Court of Appeal under section 17 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968; and how many allegations have been dealt with.

Mr. Jack: During the six months ending 31 March 1992, the most recent period for which figures are readily available, 301 allegations of wrongful conviction on indictment were received and reviews of 283 cases were completed.

Maastricht Treaty

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of implementing title VI of the Maastricht treaty in so far as it relates to justice and home affairs.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Title VI brings together into a more coherent framework existing intergovernmental work in justice and home affairs matters. Additional support services may be needed, which will be negotiated in the usual way through the Community budget procedures. Otherwise, costs will arise only on a case-by-case basis from actions agreed between the member states and will be borne by the member states themselves.

Bail Statistics

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of (a) all defendants and (b) defendants charged with violent offences, sexual offences, drug offences, robbery, burglary, theft, fraud and criminal damage respectively were granted bail in England and Wales in the years 1980, 1985 and 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The percentages of all defendants granted bail in England and Wales in the years 1980, 1985 and 1990 are given in the following table:

All offences	1980	1985	1990
Summonsed	73	70	61
Arrested and bailed	23	25	34
Arrested and held in custody	4	5	6

These figures are published in chapter 8 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales". Reliable information on the breakdown of remands into bail and custody according to offence groups is not available centrally.

Police (Contracting Out)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to contract out police functions relating to the issuing of firearms licences and the escorting of heavy loads.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend is considering the responses to the recently concluded public consultation on Home Office proposals to establish a new civilian firearms licensing body. No decisions have yet been taken.

As to police escorts for heavy loads, my Department is considering the issues with the police service and local authority associations. No firm decisions have yet been taken.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to regulate unauthorised clamping of motor cars on private land and the charging of large sums for their release.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In the light of recent public concern about the activities of firms and individuals offering wheel clamping services on private property, the Government are considering whether any action on their part would be appropriate.

Mr. T. S. Gill

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce his decision in respect to inquiries being made about Mr. T. S. Gill, No. C42698, of Featherstone prison, since March 1991.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. and learned Friend has decided to refer Mr. Gill's case to the Court of Appeal under section 17(1)(a) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968. I will write to the hon. Member.

European Parliamentarians

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes the Government plans in the way Members of the European Parliament are elected in Great Britain or in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have at present no plans to change the way in which Members of the European Parliament are elected in Great Britain or in Northern Ireland.

Refugees

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Bosnian and Croatian refugees have been accepted in the United Kingdom to date.

Mr. Charles Wardle: About 1,100 citizens of the former state of Yugoslavia have sought asylum in the United Kingdom between December 1991 and the end of June this year on the basis of claims associated with the various conflicts in that area. The large majority of these applications are still under consideration. Separate figures for the numbers from Bosnia or Croatia are not readily available.

Race Relations

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made with the Commission for Racial Equality's investigation into treatment of psychiatric patients of different racial groups; what measures her Department has taken to support the CRE in its investigation; and whether she has been asked to authorise a notice under section 50 of the Race Relations Act 1976.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The CRE will be running a pilot study this month in a London psychiatric hospital to test the questionnaire and methodology for the former investigation.

In September, 10 psychiatric hospitals nationwide will form the basis of the CRE's general formal investigation into the treatment of ethnic minority psychiatric patients.

I have agreed to the appointment of an additional commissioner, Dr. Suman Fernando, a practising consultant psychiatrist, to assist in this general formal investigation.

I have not been asked to authorise a notice under section 50 of the Race Relations Act 1976 in connection with this investigation.

Dangerous Driving

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to increase the maximum penalty for causing death by dangerous driving and by careless driving while under the influence of drink and drugs.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Those whose dangerous or drunk driving has resulted in the tragic waste of another human life deserve to be punished accordingly. We are aware of public concern about the gravity of driving in a manner which causes fatal accidents and believe that the current maximum penalty of five years for these offences does not allow the courts adequately to reflect the seriousness of the worst cases. We intend, when parliamentary time permits, to increase the maximum penalty to 10 years.

Prisoners (Early Release)

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what directions he has given to the Parole Board as to the matters it should take into account when discharging its functions regarding the early release and recall of determinate sentenced prisoners under the Criminal Justice Act 1991.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have written to the chairman of the Parole Board to give him directions which the board should apply when considering the release and recall of prisoners. The directions are based on the need to protect the public from serious harm from offenders, the desirability of preventing further offending and of securing the offenders' rehabilitation. They will be applied to all parole-elegible prisoners from 1 October this year when part II of the Criminal Justice Act comes into effect.

Copies of the letter and the directions will be made available in the Libraries of both the Houses.

Feltham Remand Centre

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends to take to improve the regime in Feltham remand centre following the recent report from the Chief Inspector of Prisons on Feltham.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In addition to the work already under way to tackle the issues raised by the chief inspector in his report on Feltham, I have decided to set up a working group with the following terms of reference:

"To support and facilitate the enhancement of the regime at Feltham Remand Centre; to consider and plan for its long term future; and to make recommendations".

The group will act to help the governor put into effect as quickly as possible his plans to enhance the regime at the remand centre. It will also look at wider issues such as experience and good practice elsewhere in relation to young remands; the remanding practices of courts in the Feltham catchment area; and the long-term future of the remand centre.

Detainees

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were detained under Immigration Act powers (a) overnight, (b) between one night and one month and (c) for a period of more than one month in (i) Harmondsworth detention centre, (ii) the Queen's building Heathrow, (iii) terminal 4 Heathrow, (iv) The Beehive, Gatwick, (v) HM prison, Haslar and (vi) and other establishments, by name, during (1) 1991 and (2) 1992 to the latest convenient date; and of these people, how many in each category were (A) women, (B) children under 18 years of age and (C) men.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 3 July 1992]: The information readily available relates to the total number of persons whose detention spanned at least one night, and is given in the table. Information on the length of the period of detention, the numbers of persons detained at locations other than those listed, and the numbers of women, children and men detained, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Persons detained overnight or longer at certain locations[1]

Location	1991 (year)	1992 (January to May)
Harmondsworth[2]	1,119	192
Queen's Building, Heathrow	2,253	928
Terminal 4, Heathrow	2,058	653
The Beehive, Gatwick	2,897	1,557
Hasiar	519	143

[1] Unless otherwise stated, the data include persons initially detained elsewhere prior to being detained at the location given.
[2] Data mainly exclude persons initially detained elsewhere, and exclude illegal entrants and deportees detained.

Asylum

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will provide a breakdown by nationality of the number of passengers seeking political asylum who were detained under Immigration Act powers in 1991 in (a) prison department establishments and (b) immigration detention accommodation.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 6 July 1992]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 7 July, Official Report, columns 133-34.

Water Pistols

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to ban the import and sale of high-powered water pistols; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: I have been asked to reply.

There is no reason to believe that the high-powered water pistols currently on sale pose any undue safety hazards when used as intended. I do not propose to introduce a ban on their import or sale.

Bailiffs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take the necessary action to make it a criminal offence for convicted criminals (a) to own, (b) to be directors of, (c) to be employed by or (d) to seek employment by a business operating as bailiffs.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The Government has no plans to introduce a series of such offences. The Lord Chancellor's Department requires high standards of those who are recruited as county court bailiffs. Applicants are required to give information about previous convictions. The Department's policy is not to recruit or retain as a baliff any person with a criminal conviction which could conflict with his or her role as officer of the court. Applicants for certification under the distress for rent rules are required to disclose any convictions. The circuit judge dealing with the application would take this into account when considering whether to grant a certificate.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the President of The Board of Trade if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Heseltine: The current objectives of the various parts of the Department are set out in the HMSO publications "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1992-93 to 1994-95" for Trade and Industry—Cm 1904—and for Energy—Cm 1905. I announced on 3 July my plans for reorganising the combined Department. These plans include the introduction of the management information system for Ministers—MINIS—system of objective-setting and resource allocation. The first MINIS round will be completed by next spring, and the results—which will show the objectives of each division—will be placed in the Library.

Whales

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether he proposes to introduce a labelling scheme identifying products which contain material derived from whales.

Mr. Leigh: No.

Pyramid Selling

Mr. Cryer: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many breaches of pyramid selling regulations were prosecuted during 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 15 July 1992]: None.

Post Office

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what performance standards his Department has set for the Post Office in the past 12 months.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 15 July 1992]: The Post Office at present sets its own performance standards having consulted the Post Office Users National Council. For 1991-92, for example, Royal Mail successfully delivered 89·8 per cent. of first-class letters the next day, against a target of 87·2 per cent. For 1992-93, the target is 90·5 per cent. The Government proposed, however, in the citizens charter White Paper that performance standards should in future be set by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, who will be advised by the proposed new, independent, advisory regulator. The regulator will also monitor Post Office performance against these targets. These changes will require legislation.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what new information has been provided about compensation and redress when Post Office service falls below standard; and how this information has been made available to the public;

(2) when he last reviewed the Post Office compensation arrangements; and how frequently he intends to review them in the future.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 15 July 1992]: In line with the citizens charter, the Post Office was asked to carry out an urgent review of its redress schemes in consultation with the Post Office Users National Council. The Post Office, together with POUNC, reported in February this year. They agreed to a number of improvements which are now being implemented. The then Secretary of State, in a reply to a question from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield, (Mr. Burden) welcomed the reports—20 February 1992, Official Report, columns 262-63. In future, the Government also intend to introduce legislation to take powers for the Secretary of State to approve the Post Office's arrangements for compensation and redress, on advice on the proposed new independent advisory regulator. In the meantime, the Government will continue to review the Post Office's redress schemes from time to time as necessary.

Information on compensation and redress is provided to the public in a number of different ways. The Post Office's commitment to consumer care and details of contact points etcetra were set out in its leaflet "Putting the Customer First", of which 750,000 leaflets were distributed, mainly through post offices, in spring this year. Information on compensation and redress is also set out in the new "Post Guide", which is now being distributed to every household in the country on a rolling basis during the course of this year. The detailed rules are set out in codes of practice for the three Post Office businesses—Royal Mail, Counters and Parcelforce. The codes are all available at post offices.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he intends to introduce a new independent regulator to advise him on issues affecting the interests of Post Office customers.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 15 July 1992]: Legislation to give effect to the Government's proposed reforms of the structure of postal services, including the appointment of an independent advisory regulator, will be introduced as soon as parliamentary time allows.

British Goods and Services

Mr. Amess: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are his Department's objectives in promoting the sale of British goods and services.

Mr. Leigh: At home, my Department's objective is to help British businesses to produce competitive goods and services. Overseas, my Department's export promotion activities are aimed at increasing the United Kingdom's earnings, thus strengthening the United Kingdom's economic base.

Mr. Amess: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans his Department has to extend the buy British goods campaign.

Mr. Leigh: My Department has no buy British goods campaign. Such a campaign would be in conflict with the Government's free market policies. However, Ministers often point out the advantages of buying British goods and services where they are competitive in design, quality and price.

Animal Testing

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will seek to persuade his EC partners to agree to phase out testing of cosmetics on animals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh: The United Kingdom has called upon the European Community to set 1998 as a target date for the replacement of all skin and eye irritancy tests subject to there being validated non-animal alternatives. The Government is sympathetic to phasing out all animal testing for cosmetics where suitable validated alternatives are available.

Export Controls

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals the Trade Council expects to receive from the Commission on the harmonisation of extra-European Community export controls during the United Kingdom presidency.

Mr. Needham: I expect to receive proposals shortly from the European Commission on the harmonisation of export controls on dual-use goods.

Compliance Costs

Mr. Sproat: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the subjects of compliance cost assessments carried out since the publication of the White Paper, "Building Businesses Not Barriers".

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Compliance cost assessments—CCAs—are prepared for all policy proposals likely to affect business. A central list of CCAs going back to 1986 does not exist, and would require disproportionate time and effort to produce. Since 1989, details of new CCAs prepared by Departments have been published every six months. Currently the list appears in "Business Briefing", the weekly magazine of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce. CCAs are currently being produced by the Government at a rate of over 50 per annum. The deregulation unit is planning to set up a computerised database of CCAs.

Mr. Sproat: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will institute a review of the effectiveness of the compliance cost assessment system operated by his deregulation unit.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The effectiveness of the compliance cost assessment system is kept under continuous review by the unit.

Civil Servants (Shares)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My Department provides standing guidance supplemented from time to time by internal notices to all staff. The latest notice on shareholdings was issued in February 1991. Staff, including those in the Department's agencies, are required to report any possible conflict of interest to their senior line managers. Separate arrangements exist for the full disclosure of the financial interests of the most senior grades. In addition, all heads of management units are required to consider the potential for conflicts of interest within their area of responsibility, to provide, if necessary, specific guidance, with detailed reporting requirements and to take action in response to any disclosure of shareholdings by staff, to ensure that conflicts of interest do not occur.

Trade Marks

Dame Angela Rumbold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effect on British industry of the application of the registration of trade marks in Germany.

Mr. Leigh: My Department is not aware of any general problem for British industry in respect of the registration of trade marks in Germany.

Dame Angela Rumbold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to ensure harmonisation across the Community countries for registration of trade marks during the United Kingdom presidency.

Mr. Leigh: An EC directive to harmonise substantive provisions of trade marks laws was adopted in 1988. It requires member states to bring their laws into line with its provisions by the end of 1992. In the United Kingdom, we have prepared the necessary legislation, but the Bill is still awaiting a place in the parliamentary timetable. Implementation by other member states is a matter for them, and not the presidency; we understand that, by the end of last year, three of them—Denmark, France and Spain—had passed new legislation in order to implement the directive.

Dame Angela Rumbold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Community Trade Marks Office will be established.

Mr. Leigh: Progress on the regulation to establish the Community Trade Marks Office—CTMO—has been held up for some years, primarily because of the difficulty of securing agreement on the location of the office. This question has become linked with that of the seats of other EC bodies, and any decision will almost certainly be on a package of such seats. We will, however, be pushing hard during the United Kingdom presidency to try to reach agreement on all the other outstanding issues on the regulation, so that the regulation can come into force as soon as a decision is reached on location. The Commission has said that it expects the CTMO to come into operation around two years after the regulation comes into force.

European Space Agency

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the British contribution to the European Space Agency, the Hermes spaceplane and the Columbus project, in each of the last five financial years, together with the projection for the current year; if he will express these figures as a percentage of the total expenditure and of the German contribution; and if he will also express the annual British contribution in standard prices.

Mr. Leigh: United Kingdom contributions in each of the last five financial years and projected contribution in 1992-93 are:

	ESA		£ millions
	Historic prices	1992-93 prices	Hermes	Columbus
1987-88	81	112	0	5
1988-89	90	116	0	8
1989-90	88	106	0	6
1990-91	94	105	0	7
1991-92	100	105	0	11
1992-93	100	100	0	13

ESA accounts on a calendar year basis. The following percentages are therefore on that basis:

	United Kingdom contribution as a percentage of:
	ESA total expenditure	German contribution
1987	12	49
1988	8	37
1989	7	31
1990	6	23
1991	6	27

Net Book Agreement

Mr. Sproat: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the European Court's decision on the net book agreement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Until I have seen the text of the court's ruling, I cannot comment on it.

Mr. Sproat: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will now refer the net book agreement to the Office of Fair Trading.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The net book agreement falls within the Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976 and as such is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading to consider.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are his plans during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC for promoting deregulation both at a Community level and in member states' implementation of EC directives.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: During the United Kingdom presidency of the Community, the Government plan to introduce a resolution at the Industrial Affairs Council aimed at strengthening the Commission's fiche d'impact system of assessing the costs to business of Community legislation and encouraging the Commission to consult business more fully before proposing legislation. We will continue to attach importance to prompt implementation of Community directives by member states. In the United Kingdom, we will continue to press the Departments responsible to implement Community directives on time and with the minimum possible burden to business.

Mr. Sproat: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how he proposes to ensure that the work of the deregulation liaison Minister in each Department is monitored and that an overall view of the Government's achievements in the field of deregulation is brought together; and if he will publish an annual report of those achievements.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Progress under the deregulation initiative in all regulatory departments is co-ordinated and monitored by the deregulation unit in the Department of Trade and Industry. As the Minister with particular responsibility for the initiative, I take an active lead in liaising with deregulation Ministers in other Departments. Reports of progress and announcements are made regularly; the most recent such announcement was on 18 February, Official Report, columns 122-25. As stated by the Prime Minister on 19 May, Official Report, column 113, there is a ministerial committee on industrial, commercial and consumer affairs whose terms of reference are "to consider industrial, commercial and consumer issues, including questions of competition and deregulation".

Mr. Sproat: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom's presidency of the EC.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I and my ministerial colleagues have met our EC counterparts and European Commissioners on a number of occasions since 18 April. The importance of minimising the burdens on business of community legislation was emphasised in relevant meetings. During the United Kingdom presidency, I and my colleagues will attach great importance to making progress on minimising burdens on business.

European Atomic Energy Agency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to bring forward proposals during the United Kingdom presidency of the European Council to reduce the secrecy stipulations in article 194 of the treaty establishing the European Atomic Energy Agency.

Mr. Eggar: The Commission has the exclusive right to bring forward proposals in the fields covered by the treaty establishing the European Atomic Energy Community. We are not aware that the Commission has any plans to make proposals in respect of article 194.

Hospital Radio

Mr. Amess: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what conclusions his Department has drawn from recent tests concerning hospital radio receiving its own frequency;

(2) what progress has been made in securing an individual frequency for hospital radio.

Mr. Leigh: My Department—the Radiocommunications Agency—and the Radio Authority have recently completed the pilot experiment at East Surrey hospital, Redhill. The Radiocommunications Agency and the Radio Authority are meeting shortly to reach conclusions on the results of the experiment and discuss future plans for hospital radio.

Property Misdescriptions Act 1991

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the progress which has been made in drafting the orders which arise under the terms of the Property Misdescriptions Act 1991; if he will indicate when he expects the drafts of the proposed orders to be published; and when he intends to lay the proposed orders before the House.

Mr. Leigh: My Department circulated a draft Property Misdescriptions (Specified Matters) Order for public consultation last December. The proposed order is being redrafted in the light of responses to the consultation, and my hon. and noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Consumer Affairs and Small Firms intends to lay it before Parliament as soon as possible.

European Year of the Elderly

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has for his Department to celebrate the European Year of the Elderly in 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by the Prime Minister on 13 July, Official Report, columns 430-31.

Shipbuilding

Ms. Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with representatives of the United Kingdom shipbuilding industry on the current EC proposals to aid shipyards in east Germany; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I discussed the EC proposals to aid the east German shipbuilding industry during a meeting with a delegation from the Shipbuilders and Shiprepairers Association on 24 June.

RECHAR

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what payment has been received this year under the RECHAR programme; and when arrangements will be completed to allow RECHAR grants to be paid.

Mr. Sainsbury: For the RECHAR programmes, the United Kingdom has so far this year received payments of £33,793,000 from the European regional development fund.

The approval of projects is the responsibility of the programme monitoring committees, which are now meeting. Arrangements are in place for RECHAR grants to be paid in respect of approved projects once the normal conditions for payment have been met.

Bicycles

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on circumvention of the generalised system of preferences tariff by Asian bicycle companies.

Mr. Needham: Although this is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General, I have agreed to reply.

A number of investigations have been carried out by Customs and Excise to verify that bicycles coming from Asian countries have been manufactured in accordance with the rules of origin of the generalised system of preferences. No evidence has been found of circumvention. Customs continues to monitor imports to ensure that correct rates of duty are imposed.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has any plans to review the European Community policy whereby Chinese bicycles enjoyed generalised system of preferences duty free status; if he has any plans to impose anti-dumping duties on Chinese and Taiwanese bicycles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The operation of the European Community's generalised system of preferences scheme is due for review this year. The concerns of the bicycle manufacturers, along with those of other sectors of industry, will be considered during discussions in the Community. I have no plans to impose anti-dumping duties on Chinese and Taiwanese bicycles, since such action is a matter of Community competence. The European Commission is currently carrying out an anti-dumping investigation into imports of these bicycles.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many bicycles were imported from (a) China and (b) Taiwan in (i) 1990 and (ii) 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The number of bicycles imported into the United Kingdom from China and Taiwan in 1990 and 1991 were as follows:

	1990	1991
China	100,983	141,874
Taiwan	694,032	657,738

I have nothing to add to my earlier replies on this subject.

European Funds

Mr. Cash: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the United Kingdom's contribution to (a) the EC European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund, guidance section, (b) the European social fund and (c) the European regional development fund; and what was the United Kingdom receipt, by region, of these funds for the current year.

Mr. Sainsbury: Member states contribute to the EC budget as a whole rather than individual parts of it. The United Kingdom's share of contributions in 1992 is forecast to be around 17 per cent. before abatement. Forecast structural funds receipts in 1992 for the EC as a whole and for the United Kingdom are shown in the table. Figures showing receipts by regions of the United Kingdom are not readily available.

Forecast Structural Funds Receipts for 1992

£ million

	Total EC	United Kingdom
(A) European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund Guidance Section	1,874	80
(B) European Social Fund	3,370	411
(C) European Regional Development Fund	5,302	458
Total Structural Funds	10,546	949

Agencies

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets he has set the National Engineering Laboratory agency for 1992-93.

Mr. Heseltine: When the National Engineering Laboratory was launched as an executive agency in October 1990, it was set the longer-term target of recovering its full economic costs through arm's length contracts from customers by 1994-95. I congratulate the chief executive and his staff on the excellent progress they have made towards meeting this target.

In addition to building on the position reached in respect of the above target, the agency has been set the following targets for 1992-93:

Non-Department of Trade and Industry income as a proportion of full economic costs to grow by 10 per cent. compared with the results for 1991-92—as published in the agency's annual report 1991.

Fee earning hours on "arm's length" contracts, as a proportion of all hours, to increase by 10 per cent. compared with the published results for 1991-92.

Fee earning hours on "arm's length" contracts, as a proportion of available engineer hours to increase by 7 per cent. compared with the published results for 1991-92.

Per capita office space to reduce by 10 per cent. compared with 1991-92.

By 1 October 1992 to introduce a concise contract-completion questionnaire, to provide systematic feedback from all clients of all technical centres as part of NEL's commitment to deliver to its clients the standard of service they require.

To train at least 60 per cent. of staff in six of the basic competences they will require for operating in a commercial environment.

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets he has set the National Weights and Measures Laboratory agency for 1992-93.

Mr. Leigh: The agency has been set the following key targets for 1992-93:

to operate within its current expenditure budget;

to achieve the specific objectives set out in its 1992-93 to 1995-96 corporate plan, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House in April this year; to reduce the unit cost of a programme-hour by 1·5 per cent. in real terms.

The agency is also required to meet a number of other targets, including quality of service targets. Its achievements against these last year will appear in its annual report 1991-92, which is due to be published shortly.

These targets will be subject to annual review.

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets he has set the Insolvency Service executive agency for 1992-93.

Mr. Nell Hamilton: The Insolvency Service expects to deal with about 36,000 new insolvencies in 1992-93 and against this background I look to it to preserve the very considerably efficiency gains it has already achieved. The service will continue to bring proceedings for the disqualification of directors of failed companies where these are in the public interest, and to submit prosecution reports where there is evidence of criminal behaviour.

The quality of service targets for 1992-93 are:

to report to creditors on assets and liabilities within nine weeks in at least 75 per cent. of all cases.

to hold the initial meeting of creditors within 12 weeks in at least 80 per cent. of all cases.

to check and action at least 95 per cent. of payment requisitions within 10 days or by the due date.

to submit reports within 10 months in at least 80 per cent. of cases where there is evidence of criminality.

to submit disqualification reports within 15 months in at least 80 per cent. of cases where there is evidence of unfit conduct by directors.

I have set it a target of completing the administration of at least 24,000 cases in 1992-93.

I would like to congratulate the chief executive and his staff on their success last year in handling a considerably increased workload whilst managing to achieve most of their targets. For 1992-93, I have asked the chief executive to ensure a consolidation of the productivity gains already made. At the same time I have raised the target for a reduction in real terms of the average unit cost of the initial stage for bankruptcies and liquidations to 45 per cent. over the period 1990-91 to 1992-93.

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets have been set for the Companies House executive agency for 1992-93.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The chief executive of Companies House has been set the following quality of service and financial performance targets:

to make all documents available for public inspection within a maximum of five working days of receipt in Companies House;

to provide a two-hour search service for all customers, and to provide a one hour search service to all customers by April 1994;

to achieve a compliance rate for companies filing accounts and annual returns of 86 per cent. by June 1993 and 90 per cent. by June 1994;

to reduce real unit costs by 2 per cent. in 1992-93;

to achieve a 6 per cent. average annual return in the form of an operating surplus expressed as a percentage of average net assets employed at current values.

Executive agency status has led to significant improvements in efficiency and in the standard of service provided to Companies House's customers. The adoption of trading fund status last October has further increased the quality and flexibility of the agency's financial management, placing its finances on a more commercial footing.

The targets which I have set are designed to ensure that Companies House builds on these improvements in its performance, by requiring further increases in efficiency and improvements in the rate of compliance.

Urban Regeneration Agency

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what will be the relationship between English Estates and the proposed new Urban Regeneration Agency.

Mr. Heseltine: I greatly value the work English Estates does in the assisted areas and elsewhere to ensure the provision of premises and sites for new and growing businesses. I see great advantage in bringing this role within the remit of the new Urban Regeneration Agency. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and I have, therefore, agreed that the activities of English Estates should be subsumed within the new agency when it is set up.

Counterfeit Goods

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made in dealing with the problems of counterfeit consumer goods; and if he will give the latest estimate of the cost to the manufacturing industry of this illicit trade.

Mr. Leigh: The Government's role in combating counterfeiting is limited to providing the necessary legislative framework. Around three years ago, provisions came into force making the counterfeiting of a trade mark a criminal offence carrying heavy penalties. The enforcement of the law is the responsibility of local trading standard officers, who may act either on their own initiative or on intelligence from industry. There is also the possibility for industry to take civil action against counterfeiting. The Government have no figures of their own as to the extent of the trade in counterfeit consumer goods.

Electricity

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people were employed in the electricity division of the Department of Energy on 1 July 1990.

Mr. Eggar: One hundred and thirteen people were employed in the Department's electricity divisions as at 1 July 1990.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will seek to amend legislation so as to allow electricity companies to establish that premises are lawfully occupied before being compelled to connect supply.

Mr. Eggar: The obligation to supply electricity derives from section 16 of the Electricity Act 1989. Any dispute arising under that section may be referred to the Director General of Electricity Supply. The Government have no plans to amend this legislation.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations he has had with the Director General of Electricity Supply concerning his decision of 7 July on the target real rate of return on assets and annual maximum price change formula on domestic electricity prices via the cost passed through mechanism.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 13 July 1992]: I have consultations with the Director General of Electricity Supply from time to time on a range of issues. Licence conditions, including the price controls, are a matter for the director general.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the impact of the coal privatisation programme on the competitive position of Sizewell B with regard to the merit order; what further consultations he has had with the EC competition directorate general concerning the applicability of (a) the existing nuclear operating agreement and (b) the nuclear levy payments to Sizewell B in the period 1994 to 1998, (c) extension of life of the Magnox stations and (d) extension of life of the nuclear levy beyond 1998; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The capacity and output from Sizewell B is included in Nuclear Electric's contract with the regional electricity companies, which expires on 31 March 1998. The treatment of Sizewell B by the appropriate regulatory authorities will be no different from that of Nuclear Electric's existing stations. The commercial arrangements relating to Nuclear Electric's operations up to 1998, including Sizewell B, were notified to the European Commission in March 1990 under state aid notification procedures.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on eastern bloc and European nuclear safety of the $100 million fund set up at the Group of Seven to cover retrofitting Soviet-designed nuclear power stations;

(2) if he will make a statement on the conclusions of the G7 summit meeting on Soviet-designed eastern bloc nuclear reactor safety problems and Group of 24 Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries and European Bank for Reconstruction and Development retrofit safety programmes and the British nuclear industry contribution to those programmes.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 13 July 1992]: I welcome these important conclusions, which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister referred to in his statement to the House on 13 July 1992. As he explained, the G7 countries have given support to a multilateral programme of action to improve the safety of Soviet-designed nuclear power plants in the former Soviet Union and central and eastern Europe. The programme aims to achieve significant improvements in the short-term in operational safety and in strengthening regulatory regimes in those countries. A supplementary multilateral mechanism, details of which have still to be settled, will be set up to fund necessary short-term safety improvements which are not adequately covered by bilateral programmes of assistance.

At the same time, the programme lays the foundation for longer-term safety improvements by setting in train energy studies covering replacement sources of energy and the scope for, and cost implications of, upgrading nuclear plants of more recent design.

The G7 countries have urged other interested states to contribute to the programme. The group of 24 OECD countries—G24—will co-ordinate this assistance through existing but strengthened procedures. The European Bank for Reconstruction and Development will assist in the administration of the multilateral fund in close liaison with the G24 and will report on the potential financial requirements for future energy supplies.

The British nuclear industry is already playing an active part in bilateral and international assistance programmes and I expect it to make an enhanced contribution within the framework of the multilateral programme which has now been agreed.

EC Structural Funds

Ms. Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 6 July, Official Report, column 27, about the future of the EC structural funds, how he defines "appropriate" priority.

Mr. Sainsbury: The first priority for the European regional development fund is clearly objective 1. The Government consider that objective 2 comes next and should be given clear priority over other operations by this fund.

Multi-level Marketing

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will bring forward proposals to require all multi-level marketing associations to belong to an organisation enforcing the standards of the Fair Trading Act 1973.

Mr. Leigh: No. I have not seen any evidence of the need for such a requirement.

Offshore Licensing

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will make it his policy to withdraw from the 14 round of offshore licences those blocks of the Pembrokeshire coast that are likely to impact on the Skomer marine nature reserve;

(2) if he will make it his policy to withdraw from the 14 round of offshore licences those blocks in Cardigan bay which are likely to have impact on those areas which qualify for designation as special protection areas under the EC directive on the conservation of wild birds.

Mr. Eggar: Blocks to be offered in the second stage of the 14th round at the end of July are still under consideration. Potential impact on the environment will be taken into account before any blocks are released for licensing.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what environmental conditions are to be attached to exploration licences issued under the 14 offshore licensing round;

(2) what consideration will be given to the likely effect on the marine environment in assessing licence applications during the 14 offshore licensing round;

(3) whether he will withdraw from the 14 offshore licensing round those blocks which include marine sites of international nature conservation importance.

Mr. Eggar: My officials are currently finalising consultations with other Departments and interested parties to see which blocks can be offered for licence in the second stage of the round at the end of July. The Department of the Environment, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department, fishing organisations, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds are among those consulted. Where blocks covering areas of environmental importance are offered, the offers will be subject to conditions. These conditions, as in 12th round awards, will reflect the nature and degree of concerns at issue on each block. In the 14th round companies will be asked to provide an environmental statement covering the proposed operators' policy towards environmental protection and this will form part of the criteria by which applications are judged.

Economic Advice

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, what arrangements he is making for economic advice in his Department.

Mr. Heseltine: Dr. Walter Eltis, director general of the National Economic Development Office will be assisting me as my chief economic adviser on a part-time basis until his appointment as director general comes to an end on 31 December 1992 and thereafter on a full-time basis.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will respond to the fourth report from the Energy Select Committee of Session 1991-92, on renewable energy.

Mr. Eggar: I have today placed a copy of the Government's response to the Energy Select Committee report on renewable energy in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 14 May, Official Report, column 169, if he will break down the figures provided by (a) private sector, (b) generating boards and (c) the European Commission.

Mr. Eggar: The answer can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Fine Animal Hair Goods

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what specific steps he proposes to take to ensure that all member states honour the terms of the China/EC bilateral treaty, as it relates to the shipment of fine animal hair goods against agreed quotas; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy that any proven over-shipment of fine animal hair goods from China in the last five years will be compensated for in the round of negotiations leading to a new bilateral EC/China treaty to take effect in January 1993;

(3) if he will create a separate sub-limit exclusive to cashmere fibre within the next agreement with China on fine animal hair goods;

(4) what steps he is taking to address difficulties relating to trade in fine animal hair goods from the Republic of Mongolia.

Mr. Needham: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Libya (Sanctions)

Mr. Jessel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether, in relation to the application by Leppid Ace International Ltd., of King street, Twickenham, to export 5,000 handcuffs, and 1,000 wooden truncheons, helmets, anti-riot shields and field suits to Libya for use by the Libyan police, such exports are consistent with the United Nations resolutions on sanctions; what advice has been given by the United Nations as to whether the Libyan police are paramilitary in this context; whether the United Nations resolution is mandatory or discretionary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what measures the Government are taking to change the small firms loan guarantee scheme to meet their needs in 1992;

(2) what discussions he has had with external organisations regarding the future of the small firms loan guarantee scheme since 9 April;

(3) for each year of the operation of the small firms loan guarantee scheme what is (a) the number of companies assisted in that year which had by April gone into receivership and (b) the sum paid out to the lending banks under that scheme;

(4) how many firms have received money through the small firms loan guarantee scheme each financial year since its inception in 1981;

(5) what was the total sum guaranteed through the small firms loan guarantee scheme in each financial year from its inception in 1981.

Mr. Leigh: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Export Licence Fraud

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) of 6 July, Official Report, column 28, what plans he has to pursue further the issue of fraudulent export control licence documentation with Mr. Tim Kelsey.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 14 July 1992]: As I informed the House on 8 July, I had already asked Mr. Kelsey, through his editor, to supply any evidence he had about the fraudulent use of end-user certificates so that my Department might follow up his allegations. He has not done so.

Thermal Measurement Ltd.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he received the letter from the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth dated 27 April about Thermal Measurement Ltd.; when it was transferred to the Department of the Environment; when he notified the hon. Member of the transfer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 14 July 1992]: My hon. Friend wrote to me on 27 April. The letter was received on 29 April. Following advice from officials, the case was transferred to the Department of the Environment since it fell within their areas of responsibility. My hon. Friend was informed of this in a letter of 7 July. I understand that my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State replied to my hon. Friend on 14 July. I regret the delay in dealing with this case.

Orimulsion

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much orimulsion was imported in each year since 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 15 July 1992]: Imports of orimulsion in each year were:

	thousand tonnes
1989	47
1990	156
1991	465

Relocation

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the number of civil servants in his Department who could be relocated to provincial centres as part of the policy of devolving and decentralising Government Departments.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 13 July 1992]: I am currently reviewing the location of London-based DTI staff, but I expect there to be only limited potential for further relocation. Over 50 per cent. of DTI staff are already located outside London.

Cashmere

Sir David Steel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will urge all member states to (a) honour the China-EC bilateral treaty negotiated in their name as members of the European Community, (b) provide compensation by reduction of units equivalent to the ownership of cashmere from the next round of negotiations with China due to commence in September this year for the implementation in January 1993, (c) create a separate sub-limit exclusive to cashmere within the agreement, and (d) recognise that the same problems apply to future negotiations with Mongolia.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 15 July 1992]: I will write to the right hon. Gentleman.

Environment Awards

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the countries and projects, respectively, that won the European better environment awards for industry this year.

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

First prizes this year went to:

Good environmental management category—Techagri M, Srl, of Italy, for an integrated scheme, involving farmers and other sections of food production, that makes use of recycled by-products, to reduce greatly any need for chemical fertilisers.

Clean technology category—Shell International Chemie Maatschappij BV, the Netherlands, for a catalytic system to clean up poisonous gaseous oxides of nitrogen (NO_x) from industrial exhausts.

Eco product category—Papeteries Matussière et Forest, of Lyon, for a technological breakthrough in recycled paper.

Recovery of waste category—Hovione Socieda Quimica, of Portugal, for a treatment plant at an antibiotics factory to recover solvent waste chemicals.

Highly recommended award winners were:

Good environmental management—BP Exploration, UK, for the good management of its on-shore Southern England oil-field—Wytch Farm, Dorset.

Clean technology category—A combined British entry from the University of York and Contract Chemicals Ltd. for a new form of catalyst based on clay that has large potential to improve, environmentally, a range of chemical processes.

Eco product category—BP Chemicals, UK, for a new airfield runway de-icer that does no harm to fish or other life when it runs off into water-courses.

Recovery of waste category—a process for recycling scrap motor car tyres into useful material, from the Dutch firm, Vredestein Icopro BV.

Technology transfer category, for technologies that can be transferred to third world countries—the French operation, GPS Salt Producers and Organisation/Univers-Sel, that enables villagers in west Africa to recover salt without the need to burn timber.

Human Rights Ethics

Ms. Abbott: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy for the human rights ethics of a country to be taken into consideration prior to permitting trade between that country and Britain.

Mr. Needham: I will write to the hon. Lady.

Disclosure of Information

Mr. Duncan-Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to end unnecessary secrecy and to promote openness in his Department.

Mr. Heseltine: My officials are taking part in an interdepartmental review of restrictions on disclosure of information and will consider the scope for any relaxation in the present arrangements.

WALES

European Year of the Elderly

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for his Department to celebrate in 1993, the European Year of the Elderly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office will, of course, participate in events being organised at the UK level and we will also consider proposals for events in Wales as appropriate.

Ozone-Depleting Chemicals

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times the Government have utilised the powers to prevent emissions of ozone-depleting substances from industrial processes since the passing into law of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment on 15 July.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to introduce a mandatory recovery scheme for the recycling of CFCs.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him today by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside.

Local Government

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received which advocate the maintenance of each district council in Mid-Glamorgan in their present form; and if he will break the figures down according to current district council areas.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has received no representations advocating the maintenance of each district council in Mid-Glamorgan in their present form. There is widespread support, in Mid-Glamorgan as elsewhere, for replacement of the present district councils and county councils by unitary authorities.

Dentistry

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will extend the role of community dentists to include patients who are currently denied access to general dental practitioners who refuse to treat national health service patients.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The community dental service is obliged to provide facilities for a full range of treatment to patients who have experienced difficulty in obtaining treatment in the general dental service.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of those family health services authorities in Wales that have contacted his Department to express concern as to their inability to provide national health service dental services due to the shortage of dentists willing to be employed on family health services authority pay scales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No family health services authority in Wales has, to date, expressed concern to the Department that it would be unable to recruit salaried dentists.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the effect of the current dispute on the time taken for people to obtain dental treatment.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The time taken for people to obtain dental treatment will vary from area to area according to local circumstances. If patients are unable to obtain treatment within a reasonable period they should approach their family health services authority for assistance.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library the criteria each family health services authority in Wales uses to measure cross-infection rates in dental surgeries.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The measuring of cross-infection rates is a matter for each family health services authority. Information on techniques used by individual authorities is not held centrally. However, guidance on cross-infection control is issued by the Department from time to time and I refer to the answer which was given to the hon. Gentleman on 10 July 1991, Official Report, column 388.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of dentists in Wales in the national health service and that number as a percentage of dentists in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Provisional figures as at 30 September 1991 show that there were 832 dentists in the general dental service in Wales. This represented 4·5 per cent. of the United Kingdom figure of 18,621.

As at 30 September 1990, the latest information available, there were 292—207·9 whole-time equivalent—dentists in the hospital and community dental services. This represented 6·2 per cent. of the United Kingdom figure of 4,676, or 6·5 per cent. of the whole-time equivalent of 3,182·2.

Housing Associations

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps towards the withdrawal of the consultation document, "Improving the Effectiveness of Housing Association Development and Management".

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will continue to encourage housing associations to discuss with potential tenants their housing designs before commencing new build;

(2) if he intends to permit housing associations to continue to place contracts with builders for (a) 10 units, (b) 10 to 20 units, (c) 20 to 30 units, (d) 30 to 40 units and (e) 40 to 50 units;

(3) if he has any plans to reduce the provision of housing association new build in rural areas by introducing a minimum threshold number of new units to be contracted for in a limited geographical area;

(4) if he has any plans to introduce changes in the operation of housing associations that would reduce the percentage of new build provided by small builders.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: These are matters for Housing for Wales to consider in the first instance. The board has just issued a relevant consultation document entitled, "Improving the Effectiveness of Housing Association Development and Management".

Oystermouth Bus Station

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reason he decided to call in the planning application for the Oystermouth bus station, Swansea.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The application raises matters of more than local significance.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has visited the site of the proposed development at the Oystermouth bus station, Swansea.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the way in which his Department has dealt with the two planning applications for the development of land at the Oystermouth bus station, Swansea.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Both applications have been dealt with in accordance with the statutory procedures.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has agreed to an extension of time for the applicant to negotiate with Swansea city council on the proposed development at Oystermouth bus station, Swansea, after he had first called in the application.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Twice.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce a date by which he will decide whether to order a public inquiry into the current planning application to develop the Oystermouth bus station, Swansea.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A decision on whether to hold a public inquiry will be made in the near future.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate in relation to the current application before Swansea city council for planning consent at the Oystermouth bus station (a) the dates of any meetings he has had with any objectors, (b) those present at the meetings, (c) the dates of any meetings his officials have had with any objectors, (d) those present at the meetings with officials and (e) the number of representations he has had for the application to be called in; if he will place copies of the representations in (e) the Library; and when he made the decision to call in the application.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Several representations have been made including 15 in writing. It is not normal practice to place copies of representations on call-in references in the Library of the House. A decision to call in the application was made on 9 July 1992.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions his officials have had on the current planning application regarding the Oystermouth bus station, Swansea with officials of Swansea city council.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None apart from a response to a request from officers of Swansea city council on 10 July 1992 about any additional information required as a result of the call-in direction.

Environmental Protection Act 1990

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many industrial process operators have yet to apply for Environmental Protection Act 1990 authorisation in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The responsibility for implementing the provisions of part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 in Wales is split between Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and district councils. HMIP is responsible for dealing with applications for integrated pollution control from those industrial processes with generally a greater potential for pollution while district councils administer air pollution control over the less polluting processes.

These new controls are being phased in over a period of time—applications may be made up to September 1992 for local authority processes and to January 1996 for HMIP processes—and it would not be possible to estimate at this stage how many outstanding applications have yet to be made.

Any process operator who does not apply for authorisation within the allocated time is liable to prosecution.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what visits he has made to his EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department is committed to easing, wherever appropriate, the regulatory burdens on small businesses, especially through the deregulation initiative co-ordinated by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. I have made no visits to discuss deregulation with EC counterparts since 18 April.

Unwanted Medicine

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is planning to allow pharmacists to continue to make arrangements for the collection and disposal of unwanted medicines without having to complete consignment notes giving a description of the waste, its chemical constituents and their concentrations and total quantity and source.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Pharmacists receiving unwanted medicines are subject to a wide range of waste management controls including a requirement to complete consignment notes. Representations from the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain on the controls that apply to the disposal of unwanted medicines are being considered in the context of the review of the Control of Pollution (Special Waste) Regulations 1980.

Housing for Wales

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a list of any new appointments he has made during the last 12 months to the board of Housing for Wales, together with the name of the persons or bodies that made the nomination, a summary of the experience of the nominees in housing matters and the date of appointment.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Planning Applications

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each of the last three years in relation to every planning application he has called in for his own determination (a) the date he called them in, (b) the Ordnance Survey grid reference squares of the sites, (c) the precise reasons underlying his decisions to call them in and (d) the subsequent result of the decision.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is as follows. Decisions relating to applications for listed building consent are not included. All the applications were called in because it was considered that they raised matters of more than local significance.

Clinical Waste

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the landfill waste disposal sites in Wales licensed to accept clinical waste.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held centrally. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the district councils, which are responsible for licensing such sites.

Environmental Protection Act

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many additional posts have been created by local authorities in Wales to undertake work under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The number of full-time equivalent manual and non-manual staff employed on environmental health by Welsh councils was 1,460 on March 1992, an increase of some 8 per cent. on the March 1991 figures.

The Department does not have details of how this increase was distributed between the various environmental health functions.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. David Hunt: The Welsh Office's broad objectives are set out in "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1992-93 to 1994-96: Departmental Report by the Welsh Office", Cm. 1916.

Civil Servants (Shareholdings)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Guidance based on the civil service pay and conditions of service code covering the personal interests and conduct of civil servants, including the use of official knowledge for private gain, is contained in the Welsh Office handbook which is available to all staff. This instructs staff on the procedures to be followed when a potential conflict of interest arises. Staff are reminded of the guidance from time to time.

Any self-reported or otherwise reported private interest, including shareholding, of a member of staff is considered and recorded in order to highlight a potential conflict of interest. If there is potential conflict, appropriate action is taken to avoid it. No record is kept of the number of such reports.

The same arrangements apply to Cadw, the only next steps agency within the Welsh Office.

Skin Cancer

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of deaths in each year from 1988 to 1991 attributable to skin cancer in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The number of registered deaths to residents of Wales in each year from 1988 to 1991 where the underlying cause of death was skin cancer are shown in the following table:

	Malignant melanoma of skin (ICD 172)	Other malignant neoplasm of skin (ICD 173)
1988	47	36
1989	65	29
1990	75	30
1991	75	29

Source: Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.

Farming Accidents

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of deaths in farm accidents in Wales in 1991; what was the number as a percentage of farming fatalities overall in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: There were five fatal injuries in the agricultural sector in Wales reported to Health and Safety Commission enforcing authorities in 1990-91, representing 7 per cent. of the United Kingdom figure of 71 fatal injuries for the same year. Provisional estimates for Wales and Great Britain for 1991-92 are 10 and 57 respectively. Comparable figures for the European Community are not available.

Teachers

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) advisers and (b) advisory teachers have been employed in each local education authority area in Wales in each year since 1987.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information on (a) the number of advisers in each local education authority in Wales is not collected on a formal basis.

Information on (b) the number of advisory teachers has only been collected as a separate category since 1990 and this is shown in the following table:

(b) Advisory Teachers[1]

Authority	1991	1990
Dyfed	10	10
Gwent	22	17
Gwynedd	12	10
Mid Glamorgan	66	44
Powys	23	16
South Glamorgan	27	26
West Glamorgan	76	83
WALES	236	206

[1] The source of this information is the Department of Education Form 618G which states:
"Advisory teachers are defined as qualified teachers paid under the terms of the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document but employed for purposes other than teaching. Does not include advisers or inspectors paid on other scales".

Schools Inspection

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what estimate he has made of the number of people from Wales qualified to inspect schools in Wales;

(2) when he expects to appoint the Chief Education Inspector for Wales;

(3) how many inspectorate teams will be required (a) to inspect 25 per cent. of secondary schools in 1993-94, (b) to inspect 50 per cent. of secondary schools in 1994-95, (c)

to inspect 25 per cent. of primary schools in 1994-95 and (d) to complete a full inspection of all secondary and primary schools by 1997.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, North-West (Mr. Richards) on 15 July, in which I announced the appointment of the chief inspector for Wales from September 1992. Inspections by teams headed by a registered inspector will be carried out every five years and will start for secondary schools from September 1993 and for primary and special schools from September 1994. It will be for the chief inspector to decide which inspectors should be registered in the light of their qualifications, experience and following training by Her Majesty's inspector.

When the new system is fully in force in 1995-96, there will be inspections of some 45 secondary schools and some 360 primary, special and nursery schools a year.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in his explorations with Welsh TV concerning how the energy efficiency message can be promoted through popular television programmes in relation to the 1990-91 annual report of the ministerial group on energy efficiency.

Mr. David Hunt: My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary has responsibility for energy efficiency in my Department a task, which he has inherited from his predecessor. He will continue to explore with Welsh TV ways in which the benefits of energy efficiency can be promoted in their popular programme.

A494

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes a public inquiry on the A494 road widening project at Queensferry in Ewloe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: It is too early to comment on whether I will hold a public inquiry in respect of the proposed improvement of the A494 between River Dee and Ewloe. Once the public consultation exercise is completed I shall consider the comments received and decide whether to protect a route for planning purposes. Should I do so, draft statutory orders, as required by the Highways Act 1980, will be published in due course. Anyone wishing to comment or object to the orders will have the opportunity to do so at that time and depending on the objections received a decision will be made on whether to hold a public inquiry.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has so far received from residents concerning the A494 road widening scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department is currently undertaking a public consultation exercise in respect of proposals to improve a section of the A494 between the River Dee and Ewloe; 463 representations have been received to date.

National Curriculum Tests

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he intends to make for the national curriculum tests in Wales in 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The arrangements for the assessment of seven and 14-year-olds in schools in Wales will parallel those for schools in England as announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education. Additionally for schools teaching the subject of Welsh pupils will be assessed in their language skills in this subject where it is taught either as a first or as a second language.

The assessment of seven-year-olds will, in 1993, be extended to include the subjects of history and geography. Additionally provison is being made to extend the period in which teachers will be required to administer the tests until four weeks before the end of the summer term.

Next year's assessment of 14-year-olds will be the first under the statutory arrangements. They will cover the core subjects of English, Welsh, mathematics and science together with technology and Welsh second language. The key features will include:

assessment by means of a combination of teachers' own assessment and short, unseen written examinations. Pupils' oral skills in Welsh and their designing and making skills in technology will be tested by longer standardised tasks.

all results, which will be reported to parents, will be subject to a rigorous audit by independent examining bodies.

test results will be preferred to teacher assessments in determining overall subject scores but both are available in relation to the same attainment target with teacher assessments used in relation to those attainment targets which are not tested.

the tests will be conducted over a two-week period beginning 7 and 14 June so as to provide organisational flexibility for schools and to minimise the clash with the GCSE timetable in Wales.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Borrowings

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners, if he will give a breakdown of how much has been borrowed by the Commissioners for each year since 1989; and if he will set out the name of the lender and the rates of interest charged for each loan.

Mr. Michael Alison: As shown in their annual reports and accounts the additional net amount borrowed by the Church Commissioners in 1989 amounted to £133 million and in 1990 to £70 million. The total outstanding at the end of 1990 amounted to £518 million which was reduced to £383 million in the course of 1991 by net repayments of £135 million.

I will write to the hon. Member with further information.

SCOTLAND

European Year for Older People

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for his Department to celebrate in 1993, the European Year for Older People; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 13 July, which covered the United Kingdom position.

Scotland is represented at the United Kingdom advisory group and Scottish Office officials are working closely with those of the Department of Health in the preparations for the year. All the task groups include members from Scotland who are actively involved in the development of a United Kingdom programme which will include a range of Scottish events.

The Government have acknowledged the importance of the concerns of older people by including in the programme for the United Kingdom presidency of the EC a major international conference "The Social Integration of the Older Person", which will take place in St. Andrews on 30 September to 2 October 1992 and which will serve as a prelude to the European Year for Older People.

Assisted Places

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was (a) the expenditure on regional assistance, (b) the number of offers and (c) the associated numbers of (i) new jobs and (ii) safeguarded jobs for each assisted area in Scotland for the most recent available year;

(2) if he will give the expenditure on regional development grants in each of the assisted travel-to-work areas in Scotland for the latest available year;

(3) if he will give (a) the expenditure on regional enterprise grants and (b) the number of offers in each assisted travel-to-work area in Scotland for the latest available year.

Mr. Stewart: The information is given in the table.

[2] Includes payments on offers accepted in previous years.
[3] Forecast at time of offer.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each recipient company and the level of grant provided through regional assistance since 1984-85 in each of the assisted travel-to-work areas.

Mr. Stewart: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In the period 1 April 1984 to 30 June 1992, over 11,000 projects in Scotland have benefited from regional assistance grant offers. Details, including the level of grant, the company name and the location of the project, of projects assisted by regional development grant or regional selective assistance, where the grant exceeds certain values, are published quarterly in "Department of Employment Gazette"—tables 9.6 and 9.8. Similar details were published in "British Business" until this publication ceased in September 1989. Copies of both publications are in the Library. Details of projects receiving regional enterprise grants are not published.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many fishing vessels from Scotland have been registered in the United Kingdom fishing vessel register for each year for the last 20 years.

Sir Hector Monro: The fishing vessel register held by the Department of Transport does not identify where the United Kingdom vessels are based. However, table 1 in the publication "The Scottish Fishing Fleet at 31 December 1990"—ISBN No. 0748 006060—shows the number of fishing vessels based in Scotland each year from 1965 onwards and is available from the House of Commons Library. A similar publication for 1991 is due out shortly.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the fishing industry in Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: Given the poor state of a number of our main fish stocks, improved conservation has been a major priority of the Government over recent years. The need to reduce fishing effort is now paramount and our recent package, which includes a substantial financial commitment from the Government for vessel decommissioning is intended to achieve that. I am determined to do all I can to secure a good long-term future for the industry.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a table showing the amount of very sheltered housing for the elderly provided by (a) district councils, (b) housing associations and (c) other public agencies, for each district council area in Scotland as at 31 March 1991 or the latest date available.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Parliamentary Constituencies

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the possible implications of future changes in the structure of local government on the shape of parliamentary boundaries.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations. The Boundary Commissions Bill, which is now before Parliament, requires that the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Scotland, in carrying out its current review of parliamentary boundaries, has regard to local government areas which are in operation at whichever is the earlier of the date of its report or 1 June 1994.

Speeding

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many police forces in Scotland are fully equipped with remote red light cameras and speed camera technology to meet the requirements, introduced on 1 July, of the Road Traffic Act 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Peebles High School

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he intends to respond to Peebles high school board's response to consultation paper by Scottish Office Education Department "School Management: The Way Ahead"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I am at present giving careful consideration to the response from the Peebles high school board and to the other responses to the consultation paper on school management issued by the Scottish Office Education Department earlier this year. I intend shortly to bring forward firm proposals.

Road Safety

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve road safety education in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Housing Organisations

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives he intends to take in support of the work of housing associations and co-operatives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Scottish Homes

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will review the time scale which projects such as Maryhill housing association's Barnes road renewal are required to accept due to Scottish Homes's uncertainty over its own funding from year to year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The allocation of funds to individual housing association projects is entirely a matter for Scottish Homes and, as such, the hon. Member may wish to pursue her particular constituency interest direct with the chief executive of Scottish Homes. Scottish Homes is allowed to pre-commit up to 80 per cent. of any year's expenditure programme into the next year; this should minimise uncertainty for individual projects.

Electoral Registration

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to encourage and improve electoral registration in Scotland; what additional resources he intends to provide for this purpose; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Road Junctions

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the average cost to his Department of a trunk road junction alteration feasibility study; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The cost of a trunk road scheme feasibility study may vary considerably depending on factors such as the scale and complexity of the proposals and topographical constraints. To calculate an "average cost" for junction alterations would serve little practical purpose and could not be taken as an indicative figure.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland is he will state the total cost involved in preparing, printing and delivering his Department's publication, "A9 Trunk Road: North Kessock Junction"; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Potato Storage

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to reveal the successful applicants for the grant aid provided under the EC processing and marketing scheme towards the provision of potato storage facilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: It is for the European Commission to decide which projects should receive grant aid. Final decisions on the current round were taken earlier this month and I expect to be able to announce the outcome shortly. The next round should be decided by the end of December.

Housing Associations

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will give consideration to the difficulties caused to housing associations when they are expected to start work on projects based on agreement in principle, but with no guarantee of funding until completion.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am not aware of any such difficulties. The grant procedures operated by Scottish Homes do not allow housing associations to start site works until the scheme has been approved, and a formal commitment to funding has been given. Grant is paid out, thereafter, in tranches, as the works proceed.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Stewart: The Government continue to place a high priority on helping small businesses, through improvements to the business climate, through deregulation and through specific programmes of support and assistance.

Small businesses are of crucial importance to the Scottish economy and are continuing to benefit from the comprehensive schemes of support which the Government have introduced. My Department has overall responsibility for assisting small firms in Scotland while specific schemes are delivered mainly through Scottish Enterprise, Highlands and Islands Enterprise and the network of 22 local enterprise companies. In addition to providing services specific to Scotland, these bodies also have responsibility for the delivery and monitoring in Scotland of United Kingdom services on behalf of other Departments including the Department of Trade and Industry. Measures operated directly by my Department to assist small business includes the regional enterprise grant for investment, regional enterprise grant for innovation and regional selective assistance. For the period 1991-92 my Department made 106 offers of regional selective assistance to the value of over £14·5 million to small companies—those employing fewer than 200. This contributed to the creation of 2,120 planned new jobs and the safeguarding of 310 existing jobs. Under both the investment and innovation elements of the regional enterprise grants scheme, 360 offers to the value of £3·9 million were made in Scotland in 1991-92 to companies employing fewer than 25 people, contributing to the creation of 1,450 planned new jobs and the safeguarding of 1,210 existing jobs.

The success of these and other Government policies is demonstrated by statistics for VAT registration. A total of 9,800 additional companies registered for VAT in 1980. In 1990 the comparable figure was 14,900, an increase of 52 per cent. At the end of 1990 the total number of VAT-registered businesses in Scotland was 115,100, an increase of 21,700 or 23 per cent. on the comparable figure for 1979.

Electoral Registration

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the fee paid to each of the returning officers in Scotland for general election duties in March and April in the current year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Anglers

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he intends to respond to the representations made by the Scottish Anglers National Association; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Officials from my Department will be meeting the Scottish Anglers National Association to discuss their representations shortly.

ReChem

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to the amount and type of toxic materials deposited by ReChem in the City of Glasgow; if he will list all such sites; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: This information is not available centrally. The City of Glasgow district council is responsible for monitoring records of wastes consigned under the Control of Pollution (Special Waste) Regulations 1980 for disposal in the city of Glasgow. I understand that the council has no record of such wastes being deposited by ReChem.

Civil Servants (Shareholdings)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I shall reply to the hon. Member in writing as soon as the information is available.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Women's Refuges

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation making it a statutory requirement on local authorities to provide refuges for women.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Housing Capital Receipts

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the results of his review of housing capital receipts will be made known to the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Homelessness

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of (a) registered homeless and (b) unregistered homeless, in Scotland in each year since 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision is made in central Scotland for sites of special scientific interest of value to the migratory bean goose.

Sir Hector Monro: No sites of special scientific interest have been notified in central Scotland in respect of bean geese. Scottish Natural Heritage is investigating how the habitat used by the small number of bean geese which winter in the area might most effectively be protected.

Rescue Archaeology

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Government's policy with regard to rescue archaeology in Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: Our policy is to ensure that rescue excavations are carried out whenever possible, to record archaeological sites which would otherwise be lost. Where the threat is from development we look to the developer to meet the costs of the excavation.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance his Department has issued to planning authorities in respect of rescue archaeological excavations where the urgency has been caused by (a) natural causes and (b) a development project.

Sir Hector Monro: In the case of (a), none; in the case of (b) archaeological desk assessment guidelines.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been spent on or allocated to the work of the central excavation unit in 1989-90, 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 in (a) Orkney, (b) Shetland and (c) Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: The central excavation unit has not existed for a number of years. The amount of money spent by Historic Scotland and its predecessor body on rescue excavations in the years in question, with an estimate for 1992-93, was a follows:

	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	[1]1992-93
Orkney	0·098	0·108	0·151	0·102
Shetland	0·041	0·005	0·028	0·105
Scotland	0·996	1·373	1·605	1·016

[1] Estimated.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the annual budget of the central excavation unit was allocated in each of the last five years to rescue excavation in (a) Orkney, (b) Shetland and (c) Scotland; and what sum has been earmarked for each of these areas in the 1992-93 budget for rescue digs.

Sir Hector Monro: The central excavation unit has not existed for a number of years. The percentage of the annual budget for rescue archaeology in Scotland spent by Historic Scotland and its predecessor body in each of the last five years in Orkney and Shetland was a follows:

	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92
Orkney	16	13	10	8	9
Shetland	5	7	4	4	2

The percentage of the total archaeological budget for Scotland spent by Historic Scotland and its predecessor body on rescue archaeology was as follows:

1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92
94	86	81	85	87

Resources are not earmarked for particular areas but for projects. The amounts allocated for rescue projects in these areas in 1992-93 are as follows:

	£ million
Orkney	0·102
Shetland	0·105
Scotland	1·016

Conservation

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will request advice from Scottish Natural Heritage on the likely environmental effects of the ending of the conservation management agreements made under the Scottish island agricultural development programme, in March 1993.

Sir Hector Monro: There have been mutual benefits for farmers and crofters and the environment from the measures introduced on the Scottish islands under the agricultural development programme, and I have no reason to believe that these will not continue once the programme is completed next year. If necessary I will of course look to Scottish Natural Heritage for advice on this matter, but do not propose to do so at this time.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to provide continuing support for farmers and crofters in receipt of conservation management agreements under the Scottish islands agricultural development programme beyond March 1993.

Sir Hector Monro: Support for farmers and crofters to continue or to commence environmentally friendly farming practices is available to those who operate in environmentally sensitive areas. In the Scottish islands, part of the Western Isles is presently so designated, and the Shetland islands and the Argyll islands will be given this status on 1 April next year. Other sources of assistance are available to farmers who carry out works which bring environmental benefits, for example, through the farm and conservation grant scheme. More generally, support for conservation management is now inherent under the agreement to revise the common agricultural policy. It is now incumbent on all member states to bring forward further programmes to encourage environmentally sensitive farming.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the actual or planned expenditure, as part of the Scottish islands agricultural development programme, on conservation management agreements for (a) Shetland, (b) Orkney and (c) the inner Hebrides, for each of the five years of the programme.

Sir Hector Monro: Expenditure on environmental management measures in each of the five years of the agricultural development programme is as follows:

	Orkney £	Shetland £	Other ADP islands £
1988-89	22,082	4,147	[1]17,874
1989-90	139,433	22,193	[1]126,717
1990-91	259,117	44,673	[1]297,408
1991-92	133,336	65,250	[1]241,838
1992-93	185,000	55,650	[2]260,000

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what basis the then Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland made its selection of areas appropriate for designation as environmentally sensitive areas.

Sir Hector Monro: The then Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland put forward its list of priority areas for designation in a third round of environmentally sensitive areas in response to a request from the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department in terms of section 18(1) and (2) of the Agriculture Act 1986. The selection of areas for inclusion in the list was a matter for the council in the light of the guidance issued by the Department.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria his Department has set for the former Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland for application when it is considering areas in Scotland appropriate for designation as environmentally sensitive areas; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: When the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department asked the former Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland and the Countryside Commission for Scotland to consider areas in Scotland appropriate for designation in a third round of environmentally sensitive areas, it suggested that the areas should be of high conservation interest; that the conservation interest of the areas should, to a considerable extent, depend on maintaining or adopting particular farming practices; and that the areas should be relatively homogeneous in agricultural terms. In addition, the Department asked the council and commission to consider areas suitable for designation in order to protect or enhance heather or other upland vegetation.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what areas were recommended to him for designation as environmentally sensitive areas by the former Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland prior to the announcement in March 1992 of a further five areas in Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: The Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland's list of priority areas for designation in a third round of environmentally sensitive areas contained the following areas:

The Inner Hebrides (Islay, Jura, Colonsay, the west coast of Mull, Coll, the Firth of Lorn, Skye, Lochalsh and the Small Isles), the Cairngorms, Shetland, Orkney, South Lochaber, Deeside, and the Outer Hebrides.

The council also recommended the southern uplands as an area suitable for designation in order to enhance and restore upland plant communities. In putting forward these recommendations the council indicated that in its view a larger part of Scotland would also benefit from environmentally sensitive area designation.

West Lothian College

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the latest position on funding the development of West Lothian college.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

New Towns

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number and details of European regional development fund assisted projects within each of the Scottish new towns; and which will be subject to disposal on the dissolution of each of the development corporations.

Mr. Stewart: The European regional development fund —ERDF—has assisted or is assisting a range of projects in the Scottish new towns as follows:

	Number of projects	Eligible expenditure £ million	ERDF Grant £ million
Cumbernauld Development Corporation	15	12·7	5·8
East Kilbride Development Corporation	8	17·0	7·5
Glenrothes Development Corporation	15	2·6	0·9
Irvine Development Corporation	15	12·5	3·3
Livingston Development Corporation	51	26·4	9·9

Plans for the transfer and disposal of new town assets are currently being formulated in consultation with the development corporations and will take account of the conditions attached to ERDF grants.

Historic Monuments

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when staff at Historic Scotland commenced work for the paper on alternatives to scheduling to provide protection of monuments in Scotland; when it will be completed; and what its findings were.

Sir Hector Monro: Officials in Historic Scotland began an investigation of possible alternatives to scheduling last year. Their findings will be presented to the next meeting of the Ancient Monuments Board, in October.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when the consultants Peat Marwick McLintock commenced their review into the Royal Commission on Ancient and Historical Monuments (Scotland); how long the review took; when it was completed; how much it cost; and what its findings were;

(2) if he will instruct the Royal Commission on Ancient and Historical Monuments (Scotland) to inform Historic Scotland of all cases on damage to scheduled monuments caused by trees and vegetation; and if he will review the liaison mechanisms between the Royal Commission on Ancient and Historical Monuments (Scotland) and Historic Scotland to secure greater efficiency in the preservation of historic monuments.

Sir Hector Monro: I shall write to the hon. Member about these matters.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has made additional resources available for 1992-93 to Historic Scotland in line with the recommendations of the Ancient Monuments Board for Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: Resources have been redeployed within Historic Scotland to enable additional staff time to be devoted to scheduling in the current financial year, consistent with recommendation two in the Ancient Monuments Board's report for 1991.

Meeting, St. Andrews House

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he hopes to make a statement on the outcome of the meeting on 13 July at St. Andrews house, Edinburgh between the Minister and the hon. Members for Livingston (Mr. Cook) and for Linlithgow.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Balmoral Estate

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what grants have been given from (a) Scottish Natural Heritage or its predecessor bodies and (b) the Forestry Commission to the owners of the Balmoral estate, in each of the past 20 years.

Sir Hector Monro: Grants have been paid to the present owners and their predecessors, in respect of what now forms the Balmoral estate, under the following provisions:

Countryside Commission for Scotland:

The Countryside (Scotland) Act 1967.

Forestry Commission:

Dedication Schemes Basis II and III (planting, restocking and management grants).

Woodland Grant Scheme (planting grant).

Water

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) consultations and (b) meetings have taken place between representatives of (i) OFWAT, (ii) the National Rivers Authority and (iii) other bodies relevant to water and his Department in 1992; and if he will list the dates and locations of the discussions.

Sir Hector Monro: No departmental meetings have taken place with representatives of OFWAT during 1992. Many circulars and reports prepared by OFWAT are sent for information to the Scottish Office and contact with officials is sometimes necessary to seek clarification or further information on these. Consultations and meetings with NRA officials and the many other bodies concerned with water take place frequently in the course of normal business. It is not practicable to list dates and locations of all such contacts.

Mental Health

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing (a) the allocations made to local authorities as mental health specific grant in each year since 1985 in cash and constant terms and (b) the proportion of these allocations to projects helping people with dementia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The information required is not currently available, but I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce policies which will impact upon the provision of respite care in hospitals for people with dementia; what operational aspects of this provision are and will be subjected to compulsory competitive tendering; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve information collection systems in health services and local authorities so that accurate statistics can be collected on the numbers of people with dementia who receive services.

Mr. Stewart: Accurate statistics on those people with dementia receiving hospital treatment are already available.

A multi-disciplinary standing group on community care information requirements is currently being established by social work services group to ensure that local social work, health and housing information systems yield a common minimum set of data for use at local and national level. The group will consist of representatives of policy and statistical interests from social work, health and housing branches in the Scottish Office, and representatives from local authority social work, local authority housing and Scottish Homes and health boards.

At local level these matters are being addressed through joint planning mechanisms.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the results of arrangements to monitor the priority that dementia services are given in health board expenditure; how these compare with the recommendations contained in the SHARPEN report of 1988; and what plans he has to change these arrangements;

(2) if he will list those health boards and local authorities which have treated dementia as a separate special needs category in their community care plans; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what duties and responsibilities Scottish health boards have in relation to the development of preventative services in the community for people with dementia; how these are co-ordinated with other agencies; what plans he has to improve joint planning arrangements with agencies including local government; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what plans he has to increase the level of privatisation of long-term care for people with dementia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Housing

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make the sale of Scottish Homes stock in Glasgow open to competitive tender;

(2) if he will make it his policy to suspend the Scottish Homes transfer process in Glasgow while the National Audit Office is investigating the financial position of the Borders region transfer to Waverley Housing;

(3) what is Government policy towards the provision of additional inducements to non-profit-making businesses bidding for Scottish Homes stock;

(4) if he will separate the independent advice role in public sector stock transfer from the disposal agency, Scottish Homes;

(5) whether he is prepared to make finance available for independent advice for tenants targeted for change of landlords by Scottish Homes and various housing associations in Glasgow;

(6) if he will make it his policy to offer choices in stock transfer to tenants of Scottish Homes in Scotland in line with those available to new town tenants;

(7) what is the district valuers assessment of the current tenanted market value of Scottish Homes stock in north west Glasgow within the area being considered for sale to Cube housing association.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Law Commission

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to reply to the question from the hon. Member for Glasgow, Central of 18 June, relating to the Scottish Law Commission.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and will arrange for a copy of my letter to be placed in the Library.

Young People (Hardship Payments)

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he intends to take to reduce the number of 16 and 17-year-olds applying for severe hardship payments due to their inability to secure a place on a youth training scheme.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I am assured by Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise that there are sufficient youth training places available throughout Scotland for those young people who want one.

Liaison arrangements exist between the Benefits Agency's severe hardship claims unit based in Glasgow and these organisations and their networks of local enterprise companies, to provide additional help where required to young people claiming a severe hardship allowance while seeking a youth training place. I understand that these arrangements are working satisfactorily.

Elderly People

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the number of national health service beds for the long-term care of elderly people provided through contract arrangements with the private sector for each Scottish health board in each year since 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Dangerous Driving

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to increase the maximum penalty for causing death by dangerous driving or by careless driving while under the influence of drink and drugs.

Mr. Lang: The Government recognise understandable public concern about deaths caused by dangerous or careless driving. We propose to increase from five to 10 years the current maximum penalty for such offences at the earliest legislative opportunity. This will allow the courts to deal adequately with the worst offenders.

Parliament House Extension

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the extension to Parliament House to be completed; and what other plans he has for the provision of accommodation for the Supreme court in Edinburgh.

Mr. Lang: The extension to Parliament House will be completed and ready for use by September 1992. Following the completion of the new Edinburgh sheriff court house in 1994 it is proposed that the Lawnmarket building in Edinburgh, suitably refurbished, will be made available for use by the High Court of Justiciary and a phased programme of major repair and refurbishment work undertaken in the accommodation used by the supreme courts in Parliament House. I am inviting interested parties to comment on these proposals which are directed to ensure that the supreme courts in Edinburgh will have fully adequate accommodation well into the next century.

Fisheries Protection Agency

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish the annual report and accounts of the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency for 1991-92.

Mr. Lang: I have today published the report, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Historic Scotland

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the annual report and accounts of Historic Scotland for 1991-92.

Mr. Lang: I have today laid in the Libraries of both Houses copies of Historic Scotland's annual report and accounts for 1991-92.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when he last met representatives of Scottish chambers of commerce; and what matters were discussed;

(2) when he last met representatives of the Confederation of British Industry (Scotland); and what matters were discussed;

(3) when he last met representatives of the Scottish Trades Union Congress; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 June 1992]: My colleagues and I frequently meet representatives of these bodies, both formally and informally. Recent subjects discussed include the Scottish economy; the implications of European Community policies; business rates; local government reform; and other matters of interest to business and industry in Scotland. We place a high value on these contacts and look forward to a continuing exchange of views.

Islands Agricultural Development Programme

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the actual or planned expenditure on the Scottish islands agricultural development programme for (a) Shetland, (b) Orkney and (c) the inner Hebrides, for each of the five years of the programme.

Sir Hector Monro: Expenditure under the agricultural development programme for each of the five years is as follows:

	Orkney	Shetland	Other ADP Islands
1988-89	1,129,404	419,402	[1]1,351,562
1989-90	2,322,411	816,581	[1]2,619,463
1990-91	3,000,206	1,009,961	[1]3,002,429
1991-92	2,713,556	981,007	[1]2,865,758
1992-93	2,083,209	1,537,811	[2]2,279,363
Total	11,248,786	4,764,762	12,118,575

Public Appointments

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to ensure that all lists of candidates for public appointments in Scotland contain equal numbers of men and women.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 June 1992]: All public appointments must be made on the basis of aptitude and merit. It is, however, Government policy to ensure that the names of women are included on the shortlist of candidates for public appointments prepared for Ministers' consideration. Good reasons must be given for the absence of women's names.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list any public appointments by his Department since 1987 which have involved people from organisations criticised in published reports by Department of Trade and Industry inspectors.

Mr. Lang: Information on public appointments which is held centrally by my Department is not sufficiently comprehensive to enable me to provide the information requested. However, my Department takes all relevant factors into account when considering public appointments.

Spastics Centre, Elderslie

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he plans to visit the Scottish Council for Spastics' Wallace Court residential centre in Elderslie; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 11 June 1992]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans at present to visit the Scottish Council for Spastics' Wallace Court residential centre in Elderslie.

I fully recognise the valuable services which the council provides. My right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State maintains regular contact with the council through my Department's representatives on the council's professional advisory committee.

Renfrew District

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has recently given to giving enterprise zone status to any part of Renfrew district; and what criteria he applied in reaching his conclusions.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 11 June 1992]: Approval has recently been secured for an enterprise zone in Lanarkshire because of the sudden and severe worsening of the economic situation there. This reflects Government policy for enterprise zones which is that no new zones will be created except in very exceptional circumstances. Such circumstances do not bear upon Renfrew district which has the benefit of development area status and the full range of development incentives available from my Department and from Renfrewshire Enterprise.

Publicity

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the total spent on publicity, public relations, publications and press by the Scottish Office in each year since 1982 and the planned expenditure for the financial years 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 11 June 1992]: The figures are:

1982-83	541,000
1983-84	506,000
1984-85	746,000
1985-86	895,000
1986-87	1,101,000
1987-88	1,704,000
1988-89	1,927,000
1989-90	3,082,000
1990-91	2,640,000
1991-92	2,349,000

Estimated expenditure for 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95 is £3·6 million, £2·9 million and £3 million respectively.

Elderly Forum

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the development of the Elderly Forum movement in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 11 June 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Sports Facilities

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet representatives of the Scottish Sports Council to discuss the development of community sports facilities; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 11 June 1992]: I met the chairman and chief executive of the Scottish Sports Council on Wednesday 3 June. We discussed a number of initiatives which the council is currently promoting, including those which are related to the development of community sports facilities. The council will be keeping me closely in touch with the range of sports matters within its interest. I look forward to further meetings with council representatives from time to time.

Environment Protection Agency

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the CBI in Scotland regarding the proposed Scottish environment protection agency; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: [holding answer 4th June 1992]: The Confederation of British Industry submitted on 8 April 1992 its response to the consultation paper on the proposals to create a Scottish environment protection agency. The confederation generally welcomed the proposals and offered helpful and constructive comments in a number of areas. A copy of its response has been placed today in the House Library.

More than 160 responses were received as a result of the consultation exercise and they are currently being considered. An announcement about the final shape of my right hon. Friend's proposals will be made later in the summer.

Official Functions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each official function (a) he has hosted in his position as Secretary of State or (b) hosted by the other Scottish Office Ministers or civil servants, since he was appointed; and if he will make a statement.

In addition, hospitality was provided on a number of less formal occasions, including working lunches and dinners.

Sunday Trading

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the arrangements in Scotland for the retail trade to open for business on a Sunday; and what representations he has received in favour of bringing the law in Scotland in line with that of England and Wales as set out in the Shops Act 1950.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 June 1992]: The restrictions on Sunday trading contained in the Shops Act 1950 do not apply in Scotland, other than to hairdressers and barbers. Since the start of this year, my right hon. Friend has received two representations advocating the imposition of restrictions on Sunday trading in Scotland.

Earnings Statistics

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the increase in average male manual earnings in real and constant price terms in Scotland since 1979.

Mr. Stewart: The average earnings of full-time male manual employees on adult rates in Scotland increased by two and a half times between 1979 and 1991, which is equivalent to an increase of about one tenth in constant price terms.

Employment Training

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many places were available in Scotland on employment training in April in each of the years since it started.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 June 1992]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the numbers of employment training places filled in April of each year since the programme started are set out in the table.

Employment Training filled places in Scotland

	Numbers
1989	22,200
1990	[1]26,380
1991	20,693
1992	[2]16,840

[1] March 1990 figure—April 1990 figure not available.
[2] Estimated by Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise (returns from local enterprise companies not yet complete).

School Playing Fields

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will earmark cash in the Sports Council grant aid to enable the Sports Council to list the current stock of school playing fields land.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 18 June 1992]: School playing fields in the public sector are the responsibility of education authorities and the Scottish Sports Council has no role in their provision, maintenance, or use. I am aware that the Sports Council of Great Britain has been commissioned to compile a register of recreational land, including school playing fields, for England. I am keeping the need for such a register in Scotland under review.

Water Privatisation

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department has had about the privatisation of the Scottish water industry; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 June 1992]: In the course of normal business over the last few months, officials in the Scottish Office Environment Department has been contacted by a small number of organisations to express their views about Scottish water services and investment needs.

Electronics Industry

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total number of jobs in the electronics industry in each of the years 1979 to 1991.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 22 June 1992]: The estimated numbers of employees in employment in electronics, which have been derived from the Scottish register of employment, in each of the years 1979 to 1991 are as follows:—

Electronics employment in Scotland—1979-1990

Year	Gross employment
1979	42,500
1980	42,100
1981	39,100
1982	38,700
1983	41,500
1984	43,500
1985	42,800
1986	42,200
1987	43,600
1988	44,800
1989	46,600
1990	[1]46,500
1991	[1]45,500

[1] Provisional.

Labour Statistics

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of part-time and full-time employees in employment for each of the years December 1979 to December 1991, inclusive.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 22 June 1992]: Information at the level of detail required is only available from the censuses of employment conducted by the Employment Department. Within the period of time for which data are requested, information is available for the following years: 1981, 1984, 1987 and 1989. The table shows the figures requested.

Employees in employment

September	Full-time	Part-time
1981	1,593,000	397,000
1984	1,497,000	407,000
1987	1,448,000	433,000
1989	1,502,000	465,000

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the total number, (b) the number of males, and (c) the number of females, of employees in employment and self-employed for each year since December 1979.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 22 June 1992]: The information requested is shown in the table. It has been derived by the Employment Department and is from a series of quarterly estimates of the civilian work force in employment.

	Employees in employment			Self-employed
December	(a) Total	(b) Male	(c) Female	(a) Total	(b) Male	(c) Female
1979	2,094	1,197	897	157	127	30

1991	1,985	1,031	954	264	207	56

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total number of employees in employment in services industries and manufacturing for each of the years December 1979 to December 1991, inclusive.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 22 June 1992]: The figures showing the total number of employees in employment in service and manufacturing industries are taken from the civilian work force in employment estimates compiled by the Employment Department. The figures are shown in the table.

Total employees in employment — Thousands

December	Services industries	Manufacturing industries
1979	1,221	596
1980	1,237	532
1981	1,217	497
1982	1,199	460
1983	1,215	437

Forestry Commission Land

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the different methods and categories for the disposal of Forestry Commission land and give a definition for each type of disposal; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 29 June 1992]: This information is given in paragraph 18 of appendix IX to the Forestry Commission's 1989-90 annual report and accounts, a copy of which is in the Library.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the Forestry Commission land which has been disposed of since July 1981 on an offer-back basis, giving the county or region, name of estate, area in hectares, name of purchaser, book value, sale price, and year sold.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 2 July 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Disability

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action is being taken to ensure that rural areas are not discriminated against in the proposed changes in funding for employment rehabilitation for visually impaired people in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 June 1992]: The provision of all employment rehabilitation services will be subject to competitive tender with effect from 1 April 1993. Guidelines for tendering are still under consideration, but it is likely that tenders will be assessed and contracts awarded against criteria of need, provision of a high-quality service, accessibility and value for money. This process should ensure that all areas of Scotland are covered by provision appropriate to their circumstances.

Forests

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount of forest as a proportion of total land mass in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) each of the other EC nations in (i) 1980 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 8 July 1992]: The United Nation's Food and Agriculture Organisation—FAO—publishes a production yearbook which includes this information. The latest edition is the 1990 yearbook, which includes information for 1989 and 1979, but not 1980. This is given in the table.

The FAO states that great care should be taken in making comparisons between countries or over time. This is because the definition of forest land may vary between countries, which may also use different definitions in different years.

Percentage of Land Area Covered by Forest

Country	1979	1989
Belgium/Luxembourg	21	21
Denmark	12	12
France	26	27
Germany	29	30
Greece	20	20
Ireland	5	5
Italy	22	23
Netherlands	9	9
Portugal	32	32
Spain	31	31
United Kingdom	9	10

Councillors' Allowances

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total cost of all councillors' allowances claimed in return for council duties for the last year for which figures are available shown as a percentage of total local government expenditure in Scotland for the same year; and what are the corresponding percentages for 10 and 15 years earlier.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 6 July 1992]: Councillors' allowances were reviewed following the Widdecombe committee of inquiry and the new scheme was introduced in 1991. Current expenditure figures for those allowances which were subsequently replaced by the new scheme were collected for 1987-88. The total expenditure for that year was £4·5 million—0·13 per cent. of total local government expenditure for that year; this expenditure did not include allowances outwith the scope of the new scheme.

Corresponding figures are not available for earlier years as such information is not routinely collected.

Quarrying

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the applications for quarrying operations in Scotland since January 1991, including (a) the exact location, (b) the estimated number of jobs created if each application is successful and (c) the type of stone to be quarried; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 6 July 1992]: The information requested is not held centrally. Such applications are considered by planning authorities in the first instance. Only those that raise defined issues of national importance require to be notified to my right hon. Friend, and only where the authority is minded to approve them. Since January 1991 only one quarrying application has been so notified. This relates to a hard rock quarry at Hill of Gibblestone, Shetland which may generate about six jobs. No decision has yet been reached on this application. In addition, a direction has been issued requiring Western Isles islands council to notify my right hon. Friend if it is minded to approve an application for a hard rock superquarry at Rodel, South Harris. It is estimated that the Rodel application could create 20 to 80 jobs if it is successful.

Since January 1991 a number of appeals relating to quarrying applications have come before my right hon. Friend. The table summarises the information. Details of the potential number of jobs involved are not held centrally.

Quarrying application appeals received since January 1991

Location	Mineral
Collace Quarry, Kinross, Fife	Limestone
Land of Bellmuir Methlick, Grampian	Sand and Gravel
Rothens, Monymusk, Grampian	Sand and Gravel
Crutherland, Farm, East Kilbride, Strathclyde	Brick, Clay, Coal
Watson Farm, Stonehouse, Hamilton, Strathclyde	Coal
Cocklicks Farm/Summerfield Farm, Cummertrees, Annan, Dumfries and Galloway	Sand and Gravel
Eastcraigs by Blackridge, West Lothian	Quartz/Dolomite
Craigie Hill Quarry, Kyle and Carrick, Strathclyde	Whinstone
Townhead Farm, Rigside, Clydesdale, Strathclyde	Brick/Clay

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department received a copy of the Environment Statement in support of the low-level solid waste pit extension proposal put forward by AEA Technology for the Dounreay nuclear facility; and what public outlets exist in Scotland for interested parties to examine the report, reference JM/MRC/PF06788.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 15 July 1992]: Highland regional council submitted a copy of this environmental statement to my right hon. Friend on 29 May. Comments on its content, in particular issues relating to the disposal of low level radioactive waste and the radiological impact, were passed to the council by Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate on 26 June. I understand that the statement was sent to a number of public bodies and was advertised, along with AEA Technology's application for planning permission for the proposed extension, in the local press and in the Edinburgh Gazette. Objections to the proposal could be lodged during the period 29 May to 26 June.

The environmental statement, and accompanying planning application, were made available for public scrutiny at the council's offices, in Wick, Thurso and Inverness. I understand that the statement may still be inspected by the public at these offices and that copies can be purchased from AEA Technology.

Travellers

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what planning policy guidance he gives to local authorities over the provision of sites for travelling people.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 15 July 1992]: Guidance notes on site provision were issued in February 1990 by the Secretary of State's advisory committee on Scotland's travelling people. The notes offer advice to local authorities on such aspects as planning, site selection, the grant scheme and design including construction and layout.

Public Bodies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which non-departmental public bodies are sponsored by his Department; which of these are audited by the National Audit Office; which firms of private accountants audits each of the others; by what method of tendering contracts to such firms are awarded; and for what duration.

Mr. Lang: [holding answer 10 July 1992]: Those non-departmental public bodies which are sponsored by the Scottish Office are listed in "Public Bodies 1991", a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library. That publication also shows which bodies are subject to audit by the National Audit Office. As there are a number of bodies whose accounts are audited by private companies, and the tendering methods vary, I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with this information and will arrange for a copy of the letter to be deposited in the House Library.

Child Care, Fife

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he received the report of the inquiry into child care in Fife; if he will publish it; what was the total cost of the inquiry; and whether Fife regional council will be asked to make a contribution to the costs.

Mr. Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 26 June 1992, c. 363-64]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland, has now decided that the report of Sheriff Kearney's inquiry into children's services in Fife should be published as a return to an order to the House when the House reassembles. This will provide the necessary time for proof reading and printing the report, which is lengthy.

Doctors

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the non-doctored islands in Scotland and the number of patients in each.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 July 1992]: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Football Matches (Arrests)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the numbers of those arrested and ejected at football matches in Scotland as a percentage of attendance in the last five years for which information is available.

Sir Hector Monro: This information cannot be assembled in the time available. I will write to the hon. and learned Member as soon as possible.

Speech Therapy

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the estimated cost of speech therapy provision for children with records of needs in each of the regional council areas; and how many such children there are in each;

(2) how much of the speech therapy provision announced on 24 February is to be distributed to (a) under-fives, (b) children in mainstream education and (c) children with mental handicaps.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As soon as the information is available I will reply to the hon. Member in writing.

ENVIRONMENT

Cremer and Warner Ltd.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list any contracts Cremer and Warner Ltd. has been awarded by his Department within the past three years, stating whether the contracts were let by single or competitive tender action; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The contracts are as follows. All were let by competitive tender.

Pollution control of hospital incinerators;
Pollution control for processes involving the manufacture or use of phosphorous;
Pollution control for inorganic halogen processes;
Pollution control for metal carbonyl processes and the manufacture of compounds of chromium, magnesium etc.

Rents Guidance

Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the paper inviting submissions on the review of the guidance given to rent officers and rent assessment committees when determining the rents of statutory tenants in London.

Sir George Young: A paper seeking views on the issue of the increase in fair rents assessed by rent officers and rent assessment committees is being published today. A copy of the paper is being placed in the House of Commons Library.

Water Supply (Mecoprop)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the current levels of the weed killer Mecoprop in Anglian Water's boreholes; and what evidence the National Rivers Authority has of Mecoprop in Cheshire's groundwater supply.

Mr. Maclean: Groundwater used for public supplies is regularly monitored by Anglian Water for Mecoprop. Concentrations greater than 0·1 µg/l have been detected at only two borehole sites. At one of these sites an alternative borehole source is available which contains less than 0·1 µg/l; nevertheless, granular activated carbon treatment has been installed to reduce contamination. At the other site Anglian Water installed granular activated carbon treatment which has ensured that the water entering supply now meets the standard of 0·1 µg/l set in the water quality regulations.

Similarly, North West Water monitors boreholes in Cheshire, where there is no evidence of contamination.

Birds (Control)

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce proposals to amend the law relating to the control of pest birds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I have announced today proposals to amend the law relating to the killing or taking of "pest" species of birds such as crows, starlings and pigeons, and to introduce a licensing system for pest control.

At present, the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 enables farmers, landowners and local authorities and other authorised persons to carry out year-round control of 13 species of bird which cause agricultural damage or which endanger public health or air safety. But the European Commission does not consider that the 1981 Act fully complies with the EC birds directive which requires member states to protect all wild birds.

A consultation paper issued today by the Department of the Environment contains proposals to remove all 13 species from the list in part II of schedule 2 and to move to a system of annual general licences to permit their control. These proposals would meet the requirement of the directive while enabling pest control to continue unchanged.

Farmers and landowners must be able to continue unhindered with their existing programmes of pest control which have served the country well for a long time. We believe we have found a non-bureaucratic solution that would not create the burdensome problems that caused us to withdraw proposals for a licensing scheme in 1990, and puts it beyond doubt that the Government are meeting their obligations under the directive.

Only a handful of annual licences would be needed, covering broad geographical areas, one or more species and specifying in general terms the nature of the damage caused. No one would have to apply for a licence, justify control or account for numbers of birds killed or taken. Everyone involved in the year-round control of pest birds would be able to carry on with his or her traditional practices exactly as he or she does now.

Licences would be considered for renewal each year following advice from the Government's statutory scientific advisers, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, which would monitor the status of the species and alert the Department if populations of any fell to levels where care was needed to maintain a satisfactory conservation status. At the moment, populations of the species are stable or increasing and we do not think that pest control would have any detrimental effect on population levels in the foreseeable future.

Energy Proposals, London

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the implications for power generation proposals in the east London corridor upon domestic water usage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The implications of any power generation proposals for water resources will depend on the particular form of the proposals, and will have to be taken into account in any necessary abstraction or discharge authorisations. Abstractions from tidal waters are, however, very unlikely to have significant implication for domestic water usage.

Planning Applications

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his planning appeal inspectorate's policy towards a planning application refused by local planning authorities because of the cumulative effect of the relevant proposal when considered with other similar proposals not the subject of the isolated application; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: In dealing with any appeal, a planning inspector examines the merits of the case, having regard to all material considerations including those raised by the appellant, the planning authority and other parties.

In an area where there have been significant developments of a particular type, the question of whether the locality is suitable for further development of that nature may be material. In such circumstances, an assessment of the proposal would need to take into account the likely additional impact the individual proposal would have on the locality as well as the cumulative effect of those similar proposals taken together.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from Stoke-on-Trent city council and local authority associations concerning the draft notices implying that an individual notice for all major planning applications should be inserted in the local press; what is his estimate of the cost of such individual notices; what provision he has made to ensure local authorities can meet these additional cost implications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: A number of representations have been received from local authorities and their associations about the costs of compulsory publicity for planning applications. My Department has recently commissioned research into local authority development control costs which will, among other things, investigate the costs of implementing the new publicity arrangements. The Government are committed to taking these extra costs into account when planning application fees are next reviewed.

Hide Processors

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to ensure that British hide and skin processors are not more adversely affected than their Community competitors under the implementation of EC directive 76/464/EC.

Mr. Maclean: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals to treat chlorofluorocarbons as noxious and offensive gases under the terms of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, and to instruct Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution to proceed to require the installation of emission statement equipment under the terms of the Act for companies that continue to release CFCs in the production of their products.

Mr. Maclean: The production of chlorofluorocarbons is regulated under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. There is a duty on the operator to use best practicable means to prevent the emission of noxious or offensive emissions to air. This control regime is being superseded by the new integrated pollution controls established under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Operators will be required to apply for authorisation on the timetable laid down in the Environmental Protection (Prescribed Processes and Substances) Regulations 1991.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to ban the use of hydrochlorofluorocarbon 1342 as a substitute for chlorofluorocarbons.

Mr. Maclean: We are not aware of the existence of this chemical and, therefore, have no plans to ban it.

Municipal Incinerators

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those municipal incinerators which do not meet European standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

Integrated Pollution Control

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the present status of the programme of implementation of integrated pollution control under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Maclean: The programme of implementation of integrated pollution control is proceeding as set out in paragraph 4 of schedule 3 to the Environmental Protection (Prescribed Processes and Substances) Regulations 1991.

Recycling

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those posts within his Department designated to deal with local authority recycling plans.

Mr. Howard: Two officials in the Department of the Environment's headquarters and one in each of the Department's 10 regional offices have been given responsibility for dealing with local authority recycling plans.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the achievements of his Department and his policies in helping small businesses over the last 12 months relative to the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Howard: My Department places a high priority on removing unnecessary burdens from small businesses, particularly in inner cities, where a key aim is to encourage new employment. We have already tackled bureaucracy in our main inner city programmes. For city challenge, we have abolished 80 pages of forms, in streamlining the provision of Government grant and increased the Government contribution on revenue projects from 75 to 90 per cent. I have today announced the 20 city challenge areas which will each receive £37·5 million over five years to support integrated programmes of urban renewal. These will include projects which directly help small business, such as the provision of premises and infrastructure.

In April 1992, the Planning Inspectorate executive agency instituted performance targets for prompt handling of planning appeals, including those from small businesses. This autumn the existing procedures for simplified planning zones are to be streamlined when the relevant provisions in the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 come into force.

In partnership with the Department of Industry, my Department is exploring how local authorities can assist industry to comply with regulation, by improving consistency in enforcement. On 30 June, the Government launched a pilot project to establish partnerships between local authorities and local businesses in nine areas across the country, improving communications and clarifying the role of the regulatory authority.

Eutrophication

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the most recent evidence he has on the extent of eutrophication and algal blooms in the estuarial and coastal waters of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: Observational evidence suggests that there is no increase in the frequency of, and no areas with significant problems from, algal blooms caused by eutrophication in the estuarial and coastal waters of the United Kingdom. However, to obtain more systematic evidence, the National Rivers Authority is gathering data on a regular basis. This will be reviewed in conjunction with my Department at the end of the year, together with the other research which my Department is sponsoring on the subject of algal blooms and nutrients in the North sea.

Departmental Objectives

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the objectives of each division and branch of his Department.

Mr. Howard: The aims, objectives and targets of my Department are set out each year in the management information system for Ministers documents which are published. I have placed in the Library of the House copies of the MINIS 13 returns, which provide this information for 1992-93.

Civil Servants (Shares)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance, other than the civil service pay and conditions of service code and the establishment officers' guide, his Department provides relating to civil servants' shareholdings; if he will list the number of occasions within the last five years on which civil servants have reported shareholdings to establishment officers in his Department; what regulations apply to the staff of the next steps agencies within his Department; what mechanisms are in place to prevent potential conflicts of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Guidance is given in the Department's staff handbook, which also applies to staff in its next steps agencies. Notices giving specific guidance have also been issued in relation to the sale of the water services industry and the proposed sale of businesses within PSA Services. This guidance instructs staff on how to avoid actual or potential conflicts of interest. Two members of staff have sought advice on their shareholdings since 1987.

Deregulation

Mr. Sproat: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what visits he has made to her EC counterparts in each member state to discuss deregulation matters since 18 April; what agreements came out of such meetings; and what plans he has for making further progress in deregulation matters during the United Kingdom presidency of the EC.

Mr. Howard: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Community Charge

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has of the number of local authorities affected by the error in the COMCIS computer programme for community charge collection; what is his assessment of the implications of this; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: I am not aware of the problem to which the hon. Member refers.

Business Rate

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what indication he has of local authorities including uniform business rate arrears in the figure they give as the additional amounts charged for sums not collected; whether all local authorities are acting consistently on this matter; whether he has issued any guidance to local authorities on this point; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The amounts taken into account as "other adjustments" for the purposes of setting community charges is a matter for each individual charging authority.

Under the statutory arrangements for the national non-domestic rate it is not necessary for authorities when setting their community charges to make provision in their "other adjustments" for non collection of rates due from non-domestic ratepayers.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to amend legislation so as to reduce the business rate liability of empty shop premises using a charitable or non-commercial information display in their windows as a device to improve security and the environment.

Mr. Robin Squire: No.

Joint Nature Conservation Committee

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to reduce the number of staff of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: None. We await proposals from English Nature, Scottish Natural Heritage and the Countryside Council for Wales, in consultation with the JNCC, for a formal staff complement for the committee.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of funding and manpower of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee.

Mr. Maclean: No. The future level of funding for the committee will be determined in the normal way as part of the current public expenditure round. We await proposals from the county councils, in consultation with the JNCC, for a formal staff complement for the committee.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all applications to demolish listed buildings in each of the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not readily available.

Private applications for listed building consent are made to local planning authorities, which refer them to the Secretary of State only if they are minded to grant consent. All applications for listed building consent by local planning authorities are submitted to the Secretary of State for his determination.

In the financial year 1990-91, 79 private applications for consent totally to demolish listed buildings were referred to the Secretary of State and 33 such local planning authority applications were determined by the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State left local authorities to decide 72 of the private applications and called in the remaining seven for his own decision. Of the called-in applications, consent was refused in three cases and granted in four cases. Of the local authority applications, the Secretary of State refused consent in six cases and granted consent in 27 cases.

Housing Associations

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing authorities that have transferred most or all of their housing stock to housing associations stating in each case the year of the transfer and the number of dwellings transferred.

Sir George Young: The information is as follows:

Local authority	Year of transfer	Number of dwellings
Chiltern	1988	4,650
Sevenoaks	1989	6,526
Newbury	1989	7,053
Swale	1990	7,352

Christchurch	1991	1,542
Suffolk Coastal	1991	5,272
Tunbridge Wells	1992	5,519
Bromley	1992	12,393

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what (a) evidence and (b) reports he has received from the Housing Corporation on the affordability of new homes provided by housing associations in England.

Mr. Baldry: The Housing Corporation has made available to the Department the work it has done so far in monitoring the rents set for new housing association homes.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what (a) evidence and (b) reports he has received from the Housing Corporation on the affordability of new homes provided by housing associations in England.

Mr. Baldry: The Housing Corporation has made available to the Department the work it has been done so far in monitoring the rents set for new housing association homes.

Rural Development

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, with the figures shown as a per capita figure, for each local authority which contains a rural development area the level of (a) rural development programme, (b) rural housing programme and (c) rural transport development fund for each year from 1987-88 at current prices and at 1987-88 prices.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him yesterday.

Land Compensation Act 1973

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why he decided to seek to remove the words "passed the resolution" from section 29(1) of the Land Compensation Act 1973 by schedule 15, part II of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991.

Mr. Baldry: The words referred to had been redundant since enactment of the Land Compensation (Scotland) Act 1973, under which Scottish provisions on land compensation were separated from those applying to England and Wales. Removal of the words thus involved no substantive change in the law.

Zoos

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to treat the proposed EC directive laying down minimum standards for keeping animals in zoos as a priority during the United Kingdom presidency of the European Community.

Mr. Maclean: After taking informal soundings within the Community, we announced our support in principle for the proposed zoos directive earlier this year. More recently however, it has become clear that a number of other member states would not support the current proposals, not least because of concerns about subsidiarity. In view of this, and the pressures on our programme for the United Kingdom presidency, we have concluded that the directive should not be one of our priorities.

Rents-to-Mortgages

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the tenants of housing authorities whose homes have been transferred to housing associations will be able to participate in the rents-to-mortgages scheme.

Sir George Young: We will be consulting shortly on the proposition that entitlement to a statutory rents-to-mortgages scheme should extend to former secure tenants whose homes have been transferred to private landlords.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his plans for the urban development corporations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The urban development corporations will continue their task of securing the regeneration of their areas until the end of their lifetimes.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of budgets of each urban development corporation is allocated to community development work or similar grant aid to local community projects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 15 July 1992]: The percentage of each urban development corporation's 1991-92 budget which was specifically allocated to community development is shown. Further expenditure related to community development may be charged to individual UDC projects.

Urban Development Areas

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment pursuant to his answer of 9 July, Official Report, columns 307-10, if he will display the figures shown as a per capita figure.

Mr. Robin Squire: The per capita figure can be arrived at by dividing the figures in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 9 July Official Report, columns 307-10, by the population estimates given below.

Council Tenants

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he intends to take to ensure that council tenants are given the same protection and rights under the Housing Act 1985 and the Land Compensation Act 1973 as private sector tenants; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The Land Compensation Act 1973, together with other relevant legislation, lays down the basis on which compensation is available to those who are adversely affected by action taken under statutory powers. There is in general no difference in the position of public and private tenants under the compensation code.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish an update of the league tables on departmental performance of Whitehall-type buildings, and departmental expenditure on energy and energy efficiency measures.

Mr. Maclean: Data on the progress of the energy efficiency campaign on the Government estate will be included in the second-year report on the environment to be published in the autumn.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will initiate a study into the impact of the client contribution in the home energy efficiency scheme on the level of take-up.

Mr. Maclean: The home energy efficiency scheme is cash limited, and there has been no difficulty in meeting its targets. Abolishing the client contribution, far from increasing the numbers who could benefit, would reduce the number of jobs which could be done by increasing the cost of grant for each job.

Mr. Alan W. Williams To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made on the establishment of an independent working party to monitor the progress of Departments of state in implementing the energy efficiency improvements following the annual report, 1990-91, of the ministerial group on energy efficiency.

Mr. Maclean: A working party was set up in 1991 comprising of officials, with outside consultancy support, to monitor and advise on the progress of Departments towards achieving the 15 per cent. energy savings target; it has met three times since December 1991.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much revenue savings from local authority energy efficiency investments have been recycled into energy efficiency capital programmes and into designated energy funds since April 1990.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not collected centrally; it is for local authorities to decide their own expenditure priorities.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the 1991-92 annual report of the ministerial group on energy efficiency.

Mr. Maclean: I have decided that the responsibilities of the ministerial group on energy efficiency should be taken over by the green Ministers, who co-ordinate environmental initiatives across Government. The second-year report on the environment will include an update on developments in the energy efficiency field and data on the campaign to improve energy efficiency on the Government estate.

House Renovation Grants

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the outcome of his Department's review of the house renovation grant system.

Sir George Young: Last July, I announced our intention to review the new renovation grant system to establish how well it is working, and to consider what changes might be needed further to improve its operation. More than 200 responses from local authorities and others were received.

The review has shown widespread support for the main principles of the new system, particularly the improved targeting of resources on the worst housing and of those least able to pay for repairs. Concerns included the harshness of the means test for grant applicants on lower incomes, the scope for the system still to pay out large grants to those on relatively high incomes, and the resources available to meet demand for grants.

The question of resources is a matter for the public expenditure survey. In response to the other concerns, I propose making the following adjustments to the system:

- to introduce a limit of £50,000 on mandatory grants to owner-occupiers, tenants and landlords;
- to adjust the grant premium and taper in the means test for owner-occupiers and tenants to give more help to those just above income support level and less to the better off;
- to uprate the allowances and premiums in the means test to reflect new housing benefit and community charge benefit rates;
- to remove the capital value element of the landlords' test of resources which has proved difficult to work effectively;
- to increase the limit on minor works assistance to £1,080 per year and to £3,240 over three years;
- to remove some of the obstacles to group repair schemes by adjusting the qualifying criteria both inside and outside renewal areas and by increasing average cost limits per dwelling to £16,000 in London and £13,000 elsewhere.

I also plan to make a number of minor adjustments to improve the working of the system. Full details of all proposed changes are contained in the Library.

These changes will help make the system more effective, by improving targeting of resources on those least able to afford essential repairs. I have decided that it would further complicate an already necessarily complex system to seek to make specific allowance for mortgage costs in the means test, as some authorities have suggested. However, the changes I propose will go a considerable way towards recognising the housing and other costs of lower-income households. All these changes can be introduced under existing legislation or by adjustments to secondary legislation, on which we will consult in the usual way. We aim to implement changes early next year.

We plan to consult further on two longer-term changes: the introduction of possible target times for local authorities handling inquiries on grants prior to formal application, and extending minor works assistance to mobile home owners for small repairs. These changes could require primary legislation. We shall continue to keep the grant system under review and will consider any further long-term changes that appear desirable.

Mortgage Arrears

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes are expected to become vacant in 1992 as a consequence of abandonment by their former occupiers, generally as a consequence of mortgage arrears.

Mr. Baldry: Statistics of mortgage arrears and possessions are collected by the Council of Mortgage Lenders. The figures for the first half of 1992, to be published shortly, will incorporate details of "voluntary possessions", which include those arising as a consequence of abandonment by their former occupiers.

Unitary Authorities

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers he has to ensure localities neighbouring shire counties are included in the review by the Local Government Commission for consideration of the granting of unitary authority status.

Mr. Robin Squire: Under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1992, the Secretary of State may direct the commission to conduct reviews of specified areas, and he may vary his direction to the commission to include areas adjacent to those so specified.

Greater London Council

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the resources released through disposal of surplus assets consequent upon the abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Robin Squire: Since its inception in 1986 the London residuary body has distributed £522·16 million in capital receipts to the London boroughs.

Atmosphere

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the relative proportions of (a) water vapour, (b) methane and (c) sulphur dioxide in the atmosphere.

Mr. Maclean: The concentrations in the lower atmosphere of water vapour and methane relative to sulphur dioxide are on average approximately 10 million and 1,000 respectively. Both water vapour and sulphur dioxide concentrations vary considerably with geographical location, altitude and meteorological conditions.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will indicate the change in cost for the provision of local government services in the former metropolitan county areas as compared with non-metropolitan areas in the financial years preceding, including and succeeding the abolition of the metropolitan county councils.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is as follows:

Local authority revenue expenditure 1984-85 to 1986-87

	Total Expenditure
	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	Change 1984-85 to 1985-86	Change 1985-86 to 1986-87

All England	21,312	21,661	23,760	1·6	9·7

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities which benefit from the area cost adjustment, and by how much, in the years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 13 July 1992]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his Department's assessment of the effect of the Jubilee line extension on economic regeneration in the east Thames corridor.

Mr. Baldry: The proposed Jubilee line extension is one factor being taken into account in the study of development capacity and potential offered by the east Thames corridor, which is being undertaken for this Department by consultants.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when, and in what manner, he proposes to utilise information for the 1991 census in calculating the standard spending assessment of local authorities.

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Member.

Sheffield Development Corporation

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many jobs, excluding those at Meadowhall, the Sheffield development corporation has created to date;

(2) how much land Sheffield development corporation has made ready for development to date, excluding Meadowhall;

(3) how much money the Sheffield development corporation has spent to date;

(4) what plans he has to extend the life span of Sheffield development corporation;

(5) what plans he has to extend the boundaries of Sheffield development corporation;

(6) when he expects the Sheffield development corporation to be wound up.

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Member.

Environment Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to meet the director of environmental affairs at the Confederation of British Industry before 19 October, to discuss the implementation of the United Kingdom priorities for the presidency of the European Environment Council.

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

Environmental Organisations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress made with (a) the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment, (b) the Central and Local Government Environment Forum and (c) the Voluntary Sector Environmental Forum since each was established last year.

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

Cryptosporidosis Outbreak, Hull

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, following the outbreak of cryptosporidosis in Hull, he has decided to prosecute Yorkshire Water Services Ltd. for supplying water unfit for human consumption.

Mr. Howard: I have now received the recommendation of the chief drinking water inspector following his investigation of the outbreak of cryptosporidosis in the Hull area in December 1989 and January 1990.

Section 54 of the Water Act 1989—now replaced by section 70 of the Water Industry Act 1991—made it a criminal offence for a water undertaker to supply water unfit for human consumption. It is, however, a defence under the Act for the undertaker to show that all reasonable steps were taken and all due diligence exercised to secure that the water was fit for human consumption.

The inspectorate's investigation was based on the report of the outbreak control group—made up of representatives of the health authorities, the local authorities, the water company and the Public Health Laboratory Service—which was completed and made available to the public in March 1991. The inspectorate then sought advice from the Government's Chief Medical Officer, from independent experts on epidemiology and water treatment, and from leading counsel.

The inspectorate's investigation of the Hull case has been extensive and thorough, and carried out in a professional manner. I have accepted the chief inspector's recommendation that, in the light of best expert advice available, the evidence is not sufficient to form the basis for a successful prosecution. I have asked the inspectorate to prepare a report on any lessons to be learned from the incident and for the report to be made public.

There are a number of gaps to be filled in scientific knowledge about cryptosporidium and, in accordance with the recommendations of the expert group chaired by Sir John Badenoch, a collaborative research programme co-ordinated by the inspectorate is seeking to do that.

The inspectorate is continuing its investigations of certain other incidents, and in some of these cases is considering the possibility of prosecution.

City Challenge

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, which local authorities have been successful in the city challenge round two competition.

Mr. Howard: My ministerial colleagues and I have carefully considered the 54 bids submitted by local authorities and their partners for the round two city challenge competition. We came to the conclusion that the following local authorities should, with their partners, be invited to prepare five-year action plans to start in April 1993:

Barnsley, Birmingham, Blackburn, Bolton, Brent, Derby, Hackney, Hartlepool, Kensington and Chelsea, Kirklees, Lambeth, Leicester, Newham, North Tyneside, Sandwell, Sefton, Stockton, Sunderland, Walsall and Wigan.

It is intended that these 20 inner-city areas will, subject to agreement of their individual action plans and satisfactory performance, share £750 million in Government city challenge funding over five years to support major regeneration programmes.

Since city challenge was launched by the then Secretary of State for the Environment in May 1991, it has created an unprecedented partnership between local authorities, businesses and local people. At the same time, it has brought together Government Departments and all the other agencies involved to identify needs and promote opportunity. City challenge confirms the value of competition, already demonstrated in other initiatives such as housing investment programmes and training credits.

Last year, 11 areas were successful in the first—'pacemaker'—round of city challenge. The 20 new winners will be able to draw on this experience and example of the pacemakers whose programmes started last April.

Unsuccessful authorities will naturally be disappointed. But the proposals they have drawn up will provide a focus for future development of their area, and may be used as a basis to make progress through private and public funding of some initiatives.

In the meantime, Government Departments will continue to co-operate with all inner-city local authorities and other interested parties to assist urban renewal efforts. These areas will continue to be eligible for support from the range of targeted programmes including city grant, derelict land grant and estate action. Outside London, most inner-city areas are also eligible for regional enterprise grants for innovation.

Alongside city challenge this year, we also invited local authorities to make a case for an inner-city task force. We received 15 bids. Most of the bids identified areas of high deprivation which task forces are intended to address.

I am announcing today the opening of new task forces in Birmingham, Haringey, Plymouth and Stockton. Two of these, Birmingham and Stockton, will link with new city challenge areas to reinforce those initiatives directed at disadvantaged local residents. But two of the strongest cases came from areas which were not successful in city challenge round two. I believe that task forces in Haringey and Plymouth will of themselves be able to achieve significant benefits for local people.

The task force initiative is a rolling programme and we will in the course of the coming months be closing the task forces in Bristol, Coventry, Middlesbrough and west London whose work is nearing completion.

Urban Regulation Agency

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has developed his proposals for an urban regulation agency.

Mr. Redwood: I shall shortly issue a consultation paper which will set out my proposals for the agency.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implications for future imports of toxic waste into the United Kingdom of the European Court of Justice ruling on 9 July on the case of the appeal against the government of Wallonia in Belgium over its banning the import of toxic and hazardous wastes.

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

Domestic Fuels (Sulphur Content)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to regulate the sulphur content of domestic solid fuels.

Mr. Maclean: My Department has today issued a consultation document proposing a prohibition on the supply for domestic use of solid fuel with a sulphur content greater than 2 per cent. by weight. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House. The Government are firmly committed to controlling emissions of sulphur dioxide—SO_2—a national and local level in order to protect human health and the environment. The proposed measure will help to contain SO_2 emissions, particularly in areas where extensive use is made of solid fuel. It will reinforce our work on improving air quality through the clean air Acts and contribute to our compliance with the mandatory European air quality standards.

The proposal has been endorsed by the statutory committee on hazardous substances as required under section 140 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Consultees have until 18 September to submit comments.

United Nations Environment Fund

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the level of the Government's contribution to the United Nations Environment Fund in 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The United Kingdom gave £4·5 million —US$7·7 million—to the United Nations Environment Fund this year, £0·5 million more than our contribution in 1991. This is the second successive annual increase in the United Kingdom's contribution and makes the United Kingdom the largest single contributor to the environment fund. I would urge other countries to make similarly generous contributions to this important work.

Public Appointments

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list any public appointments by his Department since 1987 which have involved people from organisations criticised in published reports by DTI inspectors.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 July 1992]: Such information is not available centrally, but in making appointments full account is taken of all relevant factors.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list any advisers retained by his Department since 1987 who have been criticised in published reports by Department of Trade and Industry inspectors.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 July 1992]: I am aware of none.

Noise

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will include rights, within the citizen's charter, for those living alongside, or underneath, the creators of environmentally damaging noise.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 13 July 1992]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) on 7 July, Official Report, column 154, on the proposed charter for local authority environmental services. We would expect such a charter to include rights for people who are disturbed by certain noisy activities.

Cities

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria are used in determining city status for local authorities.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have been asked to reply.

In England, Wales and Northern Ireland, the title of city is an honour conferred by the Sovereign, by letters patent; it is not a right, which can be claimed by the fulfilment of specific conditions.

Southport

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received the report of the Local Government Boundary Commission for England on a review under schedule 9 to the Local Government Act 1972 initial review of counties in relation to Southport.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to the hon. Member.

Secret Intelligence Service

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the capital cost of the Secret Intelligence Service headquarters building that is currently under construction at Vauxhall.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

The cost of the Vauxhall site and office construction is in the region of £150 million. The cost of adaptation, which will be borne out of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office vote, is estimated to be of the order of £90 million.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the reasons why the Secret Intelligence Service is moving from its existing office accommodation to a new building at Vauxhall.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

The new building at Vauxhall will provide SIS with the facilities it needs to undertake its important work.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what alternative sites were considered for the relocation of the Secret Intelligence Service headquarters building.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

As is normal Government practice in projects of this type, a large number of sites were considered.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the cost per square foot of the office space currently used by the Secret Intelligence Service; and what will be the corresponding cost in the new headquarters building at Vauxhall.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

The contractual rent of the present headquarters of SIS is some £9 per square foot. Since the Government own the freehold of the building at Vauxhall, there is no directly comparable rent. But the value used as the basis for acquisition in 1989 was £29 per square foot.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning security arrangements at the new Secret Intelligence Service headquarters building.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

It has been the policy of successive Governments not to comment on matters of this nature.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the safety of the current storage of corroded radioactive metal canisters arising from the reprocessing of Magnox fuel at Sellafield; and what discussions he has had with British Nuclear Fuels Ltd., over the future management of this radioactive waste.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

Before 1991, metal cladding from the reprocessing of Magnox spent fuel at Sellafield was placed by British Nuclear Fuels plc under water in storage silos at the site. This intermediate-level waste is subject to continuous surveillance and monitoring to ensure its safe storage pending retrieval and treatment.

As part of the company's ongoing programme to improve its storage and handling of radioactive wastes, BNFL has built new facilities for the safe encapsulation of this material. The Magnox encapsulation plant for solid waste started operation in 1991 and a second facility, which includes the capability for sludges, is expected to come on stream early next year.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 211

SESSION 1992–93

6th July—16th July 1992

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
